He says that he traded a typewriter for ten machines and that said machines were all in one room together and that he delivered possession and title to all of said machines to him at one time and that he took possession and received title to all of said machines and at said time hauled two of them home with him.

He says that said machines are being wrongfully detained by the defendant, Loyd Bieger, and that the said Bieger refuses to give them up though requested so to do at his home.

He says said machines were not taken for a tax or a fine against this plaintiff nor under any order or judgment of a court against him nor under an attachment against his distress warrant or execution against his property. He says that he is the owner of said machines and entitled to the immediate possession thereof.

He says that all of said machines are of the value of at least $100.00. Plaintiff asks for an order of delivery for said machines, if they can be delivered, and if they can not be delivered he asks for a judgment for $100.00 and all costs herein.
