GIVING A COW A BULL-FROG FOR A CUD

A young man came after me for Bogus, ten miles below Lawrenceburg for "milk fever" and I cured the cow, and as we came home late in the evening, in coming along this side of Lawrenceburg, I saw 4 men in a little shed working with a Jersey cow. I stopped the car and put two drenches in my pocket. I went down to the shed and closed the door and put my foot against it and opened the window and said, "Boys, what are you doing in here?" "Boss, you a State man?" "No, I came down to protect this cow. Who cut this cow's tail?" "Boss I did." "Who bored her horn?" "Boss, I did." "Old gentleman, what is that you have in your hand?" This is a Bull-Frog, wrapped in a greasy dish rag. "Have you tried to give it to her?" "Yes, Boss, I has." "Well, try it again." He put it to her mouth and the Frog kept rolling around till the old man broke a hole, size of my thumb, and the Frog turned his eye over the hole and he winked at me and I winked at him, and I said, "Jump for your life, they've got you." And the old man dropped him and the door flew open and his first jump was 6 feet. From there to the pond he jumped about 10 feet at a jump and every time he hit the ground, he slid 2 feet on the old grease.

Yours, Dr. R. Litsey.
