

Chained Sons to Post

DENVER . . . His boys, Jimmie, 12 and Wayne, 10, would not mind him or their mother, said Ray Hamblin, 42-year-old Brighton WPA worker, above, and as both he and his wife had to work, he chained them to a post in the basement of their home. . . . The court fined him $50 and 60 days in jail.

U. S. PINE FOR ROME

The Italian members of the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce have approved a proposal to send to Rome an enormous California pine to be put in one of the piazzas of Rome as a perpetual memorial of the Italian community in Calif. The pine will be taken to Rome during the visit to Italy that the Chamber of Commerce is organizing for next summer.

"Grandmother" Clocks

"Grandmother" clocks are more entitled to their name than "grandfather" clocks, for their cases, with the exception of the face, are carved to represent a woman's figure. The National museum in Helsinki, Finland, owns an interesting one which wears a short-sleeved blouse and a flared skirt and stands, with arms akimbo, on two human-shaped feet.—Collier's Weekly.

Wear Bright Dresses in India

The women of Rajputana wear the brightest dresses and the most elaborate jewelry to be found in India.

WHAT ARE THEY HOWLING ABOUT?

It was Jay Franklin, in his column in the New York Post the other day, who hit the nail on the head when he said that investors of the nation "are making more money than ever and yet they howl."

Mr. Franklin pointed out that by the Republican gospel of material prosperity alone, the country is far advanced on the up-grade and the G. O. P. had nothing to do with it, except as members of Congress voted for New Deal measures which started recovery.

"In this connection," wrote Mr. Franklin, "it is important to point out that net farm income for 1935 was higher than for 1930, that bank deposits are higher than at the beginning of 1930, that kilowatt-hour production and assets of life insurance companies are at all-time highs, that 5,000,000 of Hoover's unemployed have been absorbed into private industry, etc.

"In fact, reserve requirements have had to be increased to prevent an ungovernable boom and even the Wall Street Journal declares that 'Pessimism becomes difficult.'

"What, then, are the Tories hollering about? Why do they rush, with every sign of panic, to London and the G. O. P. as the one hope of survival in what they announce is a terrible crisis? Where is the fire?"

"The profit system and their own profits seem to be unimpaired and the nation has been rescued from disaster . . . Why all this bitterness, this meanness, this fury, this malice?"

What, then, are they howling about now? Surely not that they, as well as their poorer neighbors, must help pay the price of recovery? Or did they really expect to pass on to the masses of the people the cost of the depression as completely as they unloaded their inflated securities on the public in the years 'before the crash'?"

Where King Richard Married Standing in Limassol, Cyprus, is the old castle visited by King Richard I of England and Berengaria, princess of Navarre, just before they were married there in the Twelfth century.

70 REFUGEE DOCTORS FIND HAVEN IN RUSSIA

Seventy German Jewish physician who had been deprived of an opportunity to practice their professions in Germany have been placed in Russia, according to Joseph C. Hyman, Executive Director of the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee. Arrangements for the admission of these physicians into Russia were made by the Agro-Joint, operating agency of the Joint Distribution Committee in Russia, and by the European office of the Joint Distribution Committee in Paris.

Arrangements have also been made for the admission into Russia of 50 medical students from Germany, who are not yet full-fledged doctors because they have been denied the year of hospital internship necessary to procure a medical diploma. These students will be placed in Russian hospitals for a year and then given medical positions in the country.

The Russian government has made available visas for 80 more refugee doctors.

Ancient Dura

Dura was the outpost of the Graeco-Roman civilization. Situated at a strategic point on the Euphrates in what is now French Syria, the city existed for 600 years until its fall in 256 A. D. It was a melting pot of various religious elements—Babylonian, Syrian, Hebrew, Persian, Arabian, Greek and Roman.

Honolulu Has "Kiss Tree"

The kissing noises echoing through the halls of Queen's hospital in Honolulu herald love in bloom all right but not the common patient-nurse kind. The hints of osculation come from the rare Bombax tree as its curious banana-shaped buds break into pink fuzzy blossoms.

European Cormorants

The European cormorants are like the birds the Chinese use to catch fish, rings around their necks preventing them from swallowing the larger ones they capture. They get the smaller ones for food. The bird is extremely rare this side of the Atlantic.

Tires of Hero Role

LONDON . . . Gordon Dick, 36, (above), a traveling salesman going his placid way a fortnight ago, has found the role of hero rather trying. He is the man who knocked the gun from the hand of the assassin, now charged with threatening the life King Edward recently.

WEARS HIS WARDROBE

It was easier for Carl August Johansen, 75-year old Sweed, to wear his wardrobe than to carry it. With the mercury at 108 degrees, the man was wearing a tweed overcoat, three suit coats and a felt hat and explained that he was roaming the country and had no place to store his winter clothes.

Politeness

In Italy many men raise their hats to passing ambulances; in Scotland some Highland women still curtsy to the new moon; and in Japan numerous cities and towns hold a Buddhist religious service for the souls of the fishes which they have consumed during the year.—Stewart Schackne, New York City, in Collier's Weekly.
