HEROES OF AMERICAN HISTORY

THE FATHER of DEMOCRACY
THOMAS JEFFERSON

A farmer who was also an inventor, a surveyor, a mathematician, an architect, a musician, an ambassador, a good horseman, and a linguist. He could speak Latin, Greek, French, Spanish, Italian, and Anglo-Saxon. He was a tall man, six feet two in height, never smoked, never gambled, never played cards and never quarreled. With all his accomplishments, Jefferson was a great liberal and believer in democracy. He insisted on plain clothes, simple food and simple manners. Jefferson was a member of the first Congress and wrote the Declaration of Independence.

When he was inaugurated Jefferson drove up to the Capitol, hitched his horse to a post, and walked into the building without any ceremony. During his Presidency he doubled the size of the United States by buying Louisiana from the French. After his term as President he retired to his beautiful home at Monticello, which became a meeting place for all the great and noble minds of the country.

RURAL ELECTRIFICATION IN VARIOUS COUNTRIES

In comparison with many countries, America is backward in making electricity available to its farmers. In the United States only about one farm in nine has electricity provided by central-station service. In many other countries electricity is much more generally available in rural districts.
Holland can claim an almost complete electrification of its farms. The rural districts are served from publicly owned plants, some in provincial, others in municipal ownership. Germany reports a 90 percent farm electrification and of its total number of farms over 1 1/4 acres, 33 percent are equipped with electric motors. Sweden's agricultural area is 50 percent electrified. Publicly owned plants in Sweden have been very active in making electricity available to cooperatives which distribute energy to farmers. The southern part of Ontario, in which almost 80 percent of the provincial population lives, has reached a 27 percent farm electrification. Ontario as a whole shows a farm electrification of 15 percent. The farms are served by the publicly owned Hydro-Electric Power Commission, which has established 171 Rural Power Districts.
Although the rural population of most of these countries is more congested than that of the United States, making electrification easier and cheaper, the standard of living generally in our country is higher than those abroad and the American farmer should share in the relative American prosperity and high standard of living. The chart illustrates vividly what has been accomplished in some other lands.

SCHOOL ICE CREAM, CANDIES TAX EXEMPT

Ice cream and candies purchased by school boards and used solely for school purposes without profit will not be taxable under the new law taxing those commodities, W. Owen Keller, Assistant Attorney General has advised William T. Baskett, Louisville, attorney for the Louisville School Board.
Mr. Keller said he relied largely on the Constitutional provision exempting from taxation "public property used for public purposes," and the "logical rule" against "taxing taxes."

COW BAIT

The dear old soul watched the gayly clad cowboy dexterously swinging his lasso in the grounds of the circus. "What a long rope," she said at last. "What do you use it for?" "Waal, lady," he replied, "when I'm out West on the ranch I use it for catching cows." "Catching cows?" she echoed. "How very interesting. Tell me, what bait do you use?"—(Answers.
