Landon on Foreign Trade

The reciprocal trade policy of the Roosevelt administration, which was bitterly denounced by Gov. Alf M. Landon at Minneapolis, has "equipped the United States with an effective tariff bargaining implement" and "has brought the country into realistic trade relationships with other nations," according to the current issue of The Foreign Trade, published Saturday. The publication is the official organ of the National Foreign Trade Association, whose chairman is James A. Farrell, former president of the United States Steel Corporation, and reflects the views of the country's largest business concerns.

The article, by George P. Auld, prominent economist, not only approves the Roosevelt reciprocal trade policy but strongly defends it against attacks by George Peck, adviser of Gov. Landon. "This legislation," he states, "provided the instrument by which our State Department, handling it with admirable discretion and restraint, has been able to obtain not only the specific concessions that mark the agreements already concluded, but also the incorporation in those agreements of clauses specifically guaranteeing to our products most-favored-nation treatments, in the comprehensive American interpretation of the term."

"The progress thus made in a short time toward the establishment of our trade relations on a universally amicable basis, and the advantage derived from the removal of discrimination against our trade, have been substantial. By competent negotiation, implemented by sound economic and political thinking and animated by good will, our Government has plainly advanced American interests and promoted the cause of peace."

Kentuckians Still Have Their Fighting Spirit
To Meet The Telephone Company's Advances

Many times have we seen battles waged in Frankfort. Political contenders, highway contenders, wet and dry contenders and contenders in other matters. But in all of these battles was never so one-sided as was the case Monday when a host collected from every section of the state to dispute the fairness of the recent ruling of the Public Service Commission in the Telephone case.

Though the telephone users of Mercer county only had a few hours in which to learn the sentiment of the general public using telephones and the enormous handicap and expense the toll system would entail they were able to present an impressive statement to the Commission.

The Commission declared at the conclusion of the hearing that the people had presented a good case and that the contentions on both sides would be given a just and impartial judgment in an early opinion. Another hearing will be held at 10:30 today and it is expected a large group of Mercer citizens will attend.

CHARLIE WILL VOTE FOR ROOSEVELT

(To the Editor of the Courier-Journal)

The following conversation recently took place between the head of a large Louisville business house and one of their employees: Head of the House: Charlie, I'm told you are going to vote for Roosevelt. Charlie: Yes, sir, I will vote for Mr. Roosevelt. Head of House: Charlie, I am surprised and a little disappointed in you. I have always thought you loyal and wanting to work for the best interests of our business. Now, when I tell you that it is not for our best interest that Roosevelt be re-elected, will you still persist in voting for Roosevelt? Charlie: Well, I will tell you, Mr. Blank, you know you let me out in the fall of 1931. No one will ever know what I suffered for nearly two years. I was tempted to kill myself, but then I thought only a coward kills himself. So I kept trying to get a job once or twice a week at 50 cents a day, and I was mighty glad to get that, as it kept my wife and little children from starving to death. When I saw you driving around in your high-priced automobile and when I walked by your house and heard the laughter of your children and saw them playing on the sidewalk with costly toys. I couldn't help thinking about my little children, that I love as much as you do yours, hungry and almost naked. I am ashamed to tell you what I thought of doing. Late in the fall of 1933 you called me back, and told me that your business had picked up so you could put me to work again. Now I am working eight hours a day for six days a week, at 75 cents an hour. I know I am better off, and I figure you must be too, under Mr. Roosevelt, or you wouldn't be hiring me. So, Mr. Blank, I feel like I would be a fool on my own account, and would not be loyal to my employer's business if I did not vote for Mr. Roosevelt. Head of the House: Go on back to your work, Charlie.

The above conversation was related to me by another employee of the business.

Charlie is still at work, and will vote for Roosevelt

FAIRVIEW SCHOOL NOTES

The first six weeks tests are completed. The pupils are now settled down to work and it seems as if Fairview is going to have the best school year it has had for sometime. The attendance is unusually good; the pupils seem to have plenty of interest, and are using it to the best advantage. There is an abundance of school spirit as was demonstrated when they so thoroughly advertised the program of "Uncle Henry's Mountaineers." There were five hundred and seven people who attended the program.

Fairview awaits with interest the amateur contest which is to be sponsored by the Harrodsburg Lions Club. It will be held here November 17. There is to be an additional attraction this year. The winners at Harrodsburg go to Lexington, and the winner there goes to Chicago. This places the person in a position to obtain a job broadcasting. One of the winners at Harrodsburg last year now has a position with a broadcasting company. You potential winners have plenty of time to practice to be ready for the program.

We want to thank the parents for the effort they have made in getting the first and second grade pupils to school this year. They have a very fine attendance record. Let them keep up the good work.
