FIRST HAT SHOP WAS OPENED HERE

Initial Industry Of Kentucky Was One Of Harrodsburg's First Factories.

In November 1775, Ann Kennedy Wilson Pogue Lindsay McGinty, according to her daughter, Elizabeth Thomas, came with a party to Kentucky. Near Livingston the party divided. With her husband, William Pogue, Ann went to Boonesboro and William Clare, the Hatter and his party came on to Harrodsburg.

Otters, Beavers and other fur bearing animals were plentiful. He had only to trap them. He opened his shop that year and made the first hats ever made in Kentucky and established an industry that continued for over a hundred years.

We had a number of shops. Many hatters lived here. The finest hats were made here.

Isaac Pearson, grandfather of Charlie and Clarence Pearson had a factory on the corner of Main and Factory streets, now the site of the Standard Oil Station.

Pike McGrath was the last man to make hats here. The Smart Style Shop is on the site of his old factory.

I was there once when a small boy. They were making Stove Pipe Hats. A long wide table ran the length of the room on one side. Before it a half dozen men were working. On the table were piled hats in different stages of manufacturing from the man who was cutting and shaping the hats out of heavy white fibre boards to the man who pasted black silk over them.

When Harrodsburg Springs were in full blast the Planters and Dandies of the South got their hats here.

No Lawyers, Doctors or Preachers of that day considered himself as fully dressed without one of Pike McGrath's Stove Pipe Hats.

MERCER FARMERS TOLD COLT NEED

Co. Agent Park Notified Ky. Will Have To Import Work Horses, Mules From Other States.

Neglect to breed mares between 1925 and 1933 has left the United States with an excess of horses and mules over 10 years and not enough between 3 and 10 years of age. As a result, there will be a national shortage of about 175,000 horses and 325,000 mules when the 1937 work season opens up, according to information County Agricultural Agent C. F. Park has just received from Wayne Dinsmore, Secretary of the Horse and Mule Association of America.

"Wanted—Stud Horses and Jackasses" is the name of the new leaflet (No. 225) which gives complete information about the horses and mules in every state. Extra copies may be obtained, free, from County Agent Park. It is a mighty interesting little leaflet, packed full of worth-while information for every farmer.

Dinsmore's figures show that Kentucky will have to import about 6,400 work horses and approximately 15,000 work mules, from other states, for replacements alone before the 1937 work season starts; that is, colts raised in Kentucky in 1934 will fall short that number of equaling losses by death in 1936. This means that about $3,300,000 in cash will have to be paid out by Kentucky farmers for work animals, many of which they might easily have raised.

Breeding is increasing, and it is estimated there will be about one million horses and mule colts foaled and raised this year, but death losses in 1936 will be around 1,200,000; so there will be much need for more good sires for some years to come.

Farmers who are interested may obtain a copy of this leaflet, (No. 225) by calling at the county agent's office.

The accident which nearly resulted in tragedy occurred before 11 o'clock Monday morning when the air-line connecting Heineman with the life-giving oxygen broke while he was on the floor of the lake, 168 feet below. Hauled quickly to the surface after the accident was discovered, the diver suffered from "the bends," a condition brought on by violent relieving of air pressure. Bleeding from the ears, nose, mouth and eyes, he was in such a swollen condition that he had to be re-lowered into the lake in order to reduce head-swelling so that the diver's helmet could be removed.

In response to a summons from the lake, Bruner and Sims ambulance was rushed to the scene and Heineman was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, Lexington. It was feared he would die before reaching his destination, as his face and body were blacked with congealed blood.

Divers wear a steel helmet and a rubber water and air-tight suit. To meet the heavy pressure of water at deep depths heavy air pressure is used and when they return to the surface, this pressure has to be gradually relieved. Due to the breaking of his air-line Heineman was returned to the surface within a minute, and as a result "the bends" ensued.

Heineman and his assistant, Lawrence Simpkins, arrived at the lake Sunday and were transported from Kennedy Bridge by barge to the scene of the tragedy. In his three descents Sunday, Heineman was assisted by Simpkins, C. T. Ashley Jr., and by four members of the Lexington fire department life saving squad. They were William Lipscomb, Capt. Homer Foushee, Tom Haney and Joe Lanister.

Members of the victim's family, without funds to pay cost of the diving, attempted to raise $500 through public subscription. In an effort to raise funds, Judge Charles T. Corn addressed a crowd of approximately 8,000 to 10,000 persons Sunday and $21 was raised. Several hundred dollars, however, had already been raised. Judge Corn took subscriptions here, while funds were also raised at Ashley's Camp, Lexington and Danville.

Miss Gladys Bernheisel Horner, 20, with her husband, James Horner, Dayton, O., and brother, Clarence Bernheisel, Brookville, O., arrived at Herrington Lake Sunday afternoon for a few days vacation and pitched a tent near the juncture of Cane Run Creek and the Lake between Ashley's and Hagar's camps. Several hours later, after securing a boat, the three went in swimming. Mrs. Horner clung to the boat as she was not an expert swimmer.

The brother and husband got back into the scow and the drowned woman's husband was pulling his wife into the boat when his foot slipped and he fell in on top of her. The fall of Mr. Horner knocked the drowned woman's brother into the lake. The brother dived after his sister, but was only able to grab a strap of her bathing suit, which broke.

E. C. Stephenson, 823 Cramer Avenue, in a boat nearby was the first to reach the scene of the accident and dived for some time in an effort to reach the woman.

Sheriff Sanders, other officials, campers, fishermen, nearby residents and others searched for the body whenever the intense heat on the lake would permit them to be on the water with grappling hooks. The husband was joined by his wife's mother, and step father, Mr. and Mrs. B. Heiler, her sister and two half-sisters, all of Brookville.

DIVER FACING DEATH IS NOW OUT OF DANGER

Washington, D. C., Diver Suffers Attack Of "The Bends" When Air Line Breaks Monday.

SEARCH IS FRUITLESS FOR BODY OF WOMAN, 20

Thousands Of Curious Line Banks Of Lake Sunday To See Unsuccessful Recovery Attempts.

Mrs. Charles E. Heineman, wife of the diver who almost met death in Herrington Lake Monday, arrived from Washington, D. C. Wednesday to be with her husband until he is able to leave the hospital. Heineman, who has been at St. Joseph's Hospital, Lexington, since the accident when the air-line broke while he was 168 feet below the surface, has been in an oxygen tent in the hospital. It was expected to remove him from the tent yesterday. His condition is reported as satisfactory.

Lawrence Simpkins, Heineman's assistant, took the diving apparatus to Lexington following the accident, from which place it was shipped back to Washington. He left for that city Wednesday.

Heineman suffered a serious attack of the "bends" Monday just before noon while making his fourth dive in search of the body of Mrs. Gladys Horner, 20, of Dayton, O., who was drowned Sunday, August 23, in the waters of Lake Herrington near the entrance of the Cane Run tributary, not far from Ashley's Camp.

The accident which nearly resulted in tragedy occurred before 11 o'clock Monday morning when the air-line connecting Heineman with the life-giving oxygen broke while he was on the
