Show Love For Old Home Town

Indiana Village Receives Huge Gifts From Residents Who Have Made Fortunes.

A village of 500 inhabitants, Versailles, Indiana, seems to inspire a great love in the hearts of its sons and daughters who have gone elsewhere and made fortunes. James H. Tyson, born there in 1856, who became one of the owners of the Walgreen chain drug stores, has established for the village a Tyson Community Trust Fund. He designates that a community church is to be built at a cost of $150,000 in memory of his mother, and $5,000 a year must be set aside from the trust fund for its upkeep. He next provides that the cemetery in which his parents sleep must be beautified and a stone wall erected around the grounds.

After that the citizens of Versailles must hold a community election each September 14 and vote on what improvement is best for the village with the income from the Tyson Trust fund. Municipal water works are being considered and also a $50,000 town library.

The father of Joseph Hassner, Indianapolis, ran a hotel in the village. He has made the place a gift of a beautiful park of 5,500 acres just outside the limits of the village. One building on the tract is the old Hassner home. Other buildings are being erected for community recreation and meeting places for public clubs, such as the Boy and Girl Scouts and others. Part of the park is set aside for a retreat for underprivileged children where they may have supervised outings and proper nourishment.

Mrs. Florence Grether, Cincinnati, visiting her native town, saw its court house had no town clock, and installed one with a fine set of chimes. Another "home town boy," Alexander Thompson, Hamilton, O., saw the need of a new hotel, so he bought the old tavern and remodeled it in the pioneer period, preserving its lines and traditions and furnished it in the same period furniture. He also bought 2,200 acres nearby for a forest preserve and hunting lodge.

WILL TRADE HAM, 28, FOR A "GOOD HOUSEKEEPER"

M. G. Wadlington has found the oldest ham in this part of Kentucky. It is owned by a prosperous farmer named S. M. Humes, about 60 years old, who lives alone in Trigg county, on Cerulean Springs Route 1. Mr. Wadlington's business requires him to travel in that territory and he has seen the ham frequently in the last 10 or 15 years. It was part of the "hog killing" in 1908 and has been carefully looked after ever since. Every year its owner cleans it off and gives it a new curing process with the new meat. It has been reduced in size, but apparently is in good condition. Mr. Humes has refused to sell it for a dollar a pound. He says the only condition upon which he would part with it would be to "trade it for a good housekeeper."—Hopkinsville New Era.

BLUE, RED, KING EDWARD'S CORONATION COLORS

Fashion's colors for the Coronation of King Edward of Britain, will be Coronation Red—a shade between magenta and scarlet, and Coronation Blue—shade between Mediterranean and royal-blue.

It is said that these colors will match any complexion, though red should be used for brunettes and blue for blondes, and that dresses made of them will provide an ideal background for a Union Jack effect. Thirty shades were produced before these were decided upon and given Royal approval.

WHY THE GIRAFFE HAS USE FOR UNUSUALLY LONG NECK

There are really two reasons why the giraffe's neck is so long. Both of them have to do with food, since Mother Nature takes care that her family dines regularly.

First is the fact that the giraffe, who lives in the arid, open spaces of Africa, feeds almost exclusively on tree vegetation high above the reach of other animals.

And the second is that he needs his long neck to reach the ground for water! That seems silly until we understand that all creatures who travel great distances across open country must have very long legs, and therefore must be provided with some extraordinary device for getting their mouths to the ground.

SUGGESTS CANNING OF CULL CHICKENS

Since meat may be high in price next fall and winter, the Kentucky College of Agriculture suggests the canning of chicken when flocks are culled in August. Many flocks will be closely culled because feed is scarce and expensive.

A pressure cooker is listed as the first essential piece of equipment in canning chicken. Like other non-acid foods, chicken requires a temperature higher than boiling for sterilization. Quart cans are considered the best size, since they will hold one chicken.

SHADE

The kindest thing God ever made, His hand of very healing laid Upon a fevered world, is shade. His glorious company of trees Throw out their mantles, and on these The dust-stained wanderer finds ease. Green temples, closed, against the beat Of noontime's blinding glare and heat Open to tired pilgrim's feet. The white road blisters in the sun; Now, half the weary journey done, Enter and rest, Oh, weary one! And feel the dew of dawn still wet Beneath thy feet, and so forget The burning highway's ache and fret. This is God's hospitality. And he who rests beneath a tree Hath cause to thank Him gratefully. Theodocia Garrison.
