Modern Women

(By Charl Ormond Williams, President Nat. Business and Professional Women's Clubs).

Miss Jessamine S. Whitney, statistician of the National Tuberculosis Association, has done something that no one has ever attempted. She has made a thorough study based on death rates by occupations, and her clear picture of the mortality of working men will be of immense value to professional men and women, to social work students in schools and colleges and to other groups interested especially in labor legislation. Miss Whitney has been called the foremost woman vital statistician of the United States. She is the author of numerous books and studies. She is an ardent baseball fan and her hobby is compiling the statistical record of all players in all phases of their performances.

It is interesting to note that Mobile, Alabama, is celebrating the centennial of its noted woman author, Augusta Evans Wilson. She lived in a small old-fashioned town at a time when women's interests were confined to the home and the church. Naturally her books were idealistic and always had a happy ending. "Miss Augusta," as she was known wherever she was read—and her readers were world-wide—reached the best seller rating and she piled up a fortune. She wrote "Inez, a Tale of the Alamo" at the age of fifteen.

The only woman in the Mississippi Legislature, Mrs. John Robinson, of Madison county, is a member of the Business and Professional Women's Club of her state. She has been named chairman of a committee on eleemosynary institutions, and a member of various other committees, appropriations, and universities and colleges.

One of the two women in the country serving on State liquor control boards, Mrs. John Sheppard, was selected for her advocacy of liquor control divorced from politics. Miss Josephine Schain, participated as chairman of the National Committee on the Cause and Cure of War.

The Duchess de la Roche Foucauld is a feminist. Although her countrymen in France do not vote, she says they are free to raise their voices to proclaim their immense love of peace. She is looking forward to the time when woman's pity, which to some extent has redeemed the horrors of war, will be strong enough to keep civilized peoples from knowing such horrors.

The two women chosen from the field of social work were: Mrs. Mark K. Simkovich, who has spent thirty-five years doing settlement and welfare work, and Dr. Valeria H. Parker, lecturer and organizer in social hygiene activities.
