

KING GEORGE V

King George V Taken By Death

70-Year-Old British Sovereign Succumbs At Country Home After Several Days Illness.

King George V, sovereign of Great Britain for the past 25 years, died quietly at his country home at Sandringham, England, Monday night at 11:55 o'clock (6:55 p.m. central standard time). He was 70 years old.

Immediately preparations were made to proclaim his eldest son, Edward, Prince of Wales, his successor on the throne as King Edward VIII. The King had been in a deep coma for hours and his death was not unexpected. Shortly before midnight his physicians observed that his fight against bronchial catarrh and a weakening heart was over and that he would soon die. Lord Dawson, of Penn., the monarch's physician since 1907, and his associates summoned to the King's bedside from an adjoining room, Queen Mary, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, the Princess Royal, and the Duke and Duchess of Kent. Together they walked into the King's bedroom and stood at his bedside. A few moments later King George, the man loved deeply by his mighty kingdom, peacefully breathed his last.

It was indicated at Sandringham that the Prince of Wales would assume the title of King Edward VIII. He sent a message to the Lord Mayor of London: "I am deeply grieved to inform you that my beloved father, the King, passed away peacefully at 11:55 tonight. (Signed) Edward."

The King's last wish was granted before his death. He had always hoped that his last hours would be spent at Sandringham because he loved the quiet peace of the country.

Rudyard Kipling Dies In London Saturday

Rudyard Kipling died Saturday morning, just ten minutes after the midnight hour had been tolled, in Middlesex hospital, London, England, after an illness of several days. He had undergone an operation for a stomach ulcer five days before his death. He was 70 years old.

Born in India, Kipling was educated in England, returning to India in 1882 to take a position on the Civil and Military Gazette and Pioneer. He received his first recognition for his sketches of Indian life and short stories which he wrote for that publication.

Some of his works included "The Phantom Rickshaw," "Wee Willie Winkie," "The Light That Failed," "The Jungle Books," "If," and "Kim."

American motion picture companies have recently purchased from him the picture rights to "Kim," "The Light That Failed," and "Captain Courageous." British companies purchased "Siddies Three" and "Tommy of the Elephants."

When Newspapers Give Way Advertising

(National Editorial Association)

If you mention the following in news stories, you are giving away advertising space that should be paid for:

1. Price of tickets for admission to organization, church or school activities. The admission price should be advertised.
2. Names of merchants who donate prizes for contests, etc., held by private groups and organizations. Merchants are often asked to donate merchandise on the promise that such forced donations will be advertised free in the newspaper.
3. Menus in stories of dinners, suppers, etc. This is advertising pure and simple.
4. Raffles, lotteries, door prizes and other games of chance. The postal regulations forbid their mention, anyway!
5. Name of the automobile or truck in an accident story.
6. Announcement of the opening of a new business firm, unless paid advertising appears in the same issue of your newspaper. Good business.

After all your commodity for sale is newspaper space. The grocer doesn't give away buns. The garage proprietor wouldn't think of giving away his services in repairing cars. Why should the newspaper owner give away his only commodity—newspaper space!

HAY EXHIBITS SHOW GRADE DIFFERENCES

In an effort to encourage the production of better hay, the College of Agriculture of the University of Kentucky is exhibiting in store windows and other places throughout the State samples of lespedeza hay showing the differences in color and leafiness, which are the main characteristics which make up the various grades.

There has been a surplus of lespedeza hay produced in the State in the past two years due principally, it is believed, to the fact that much of the hay was of low quality, grading only as No. 3 or no-grade. Raising the grades to No. 1 and No. 2 would tend to encourage greater use of lespedeza hay in fattening cattle and for feeding dairy cows and other stock.

Present market prices show a difference of $2 to $3 a ton between good and low quality lespedeza hay.

According to the college's statement, inexperience in harvesting and curing has been partly responsible for the low quality of hay produced in the state. It is easier to grow, harvest and cure No. 1 lespedeza hay than a corresponding grade of any other hay that grows in Kentucky, the college's crops men declare.

While the work of the college is not intended to increase hay production or to encourage the thought that wider markets will be found, it is considered good business to grow better hay both for use on the farm and for sale. The primary interest of the college is in better hay for feeding stock on the farm on which it is produced.

Better hay will result in more satisfied buyers and will tend to educate feeders to the fact that high quality lespedeza hay is a good feed.

GROVER STIGALL'S 3-YEAR-OLD JACK SOLD FOR $1,750

The highest price paid for a jack in the past twenty-five years in this part of the country, so far as known, was paid in Danville when W. F. Chaudoin, of Buffalo, Ky., sold the three-year-old jack, Stigall's Pride, to Dr. R. B. Gaston, of Lebanon, Tenn., for $1,750.

Stigall's Pride was sired by Rowdy, owned by Grover Stigall, the widely known breeder of jacks and mules, about five miles from Danville, just off the Perryville road. Rowdy is a winner of many premiums, having won six state championships at the Kentucky State Fair and the Blue Grass Fair.

Stigall's Pride won first in the two year old championship class at the Kentucky State Fair last year and will be shown by Mr. Stigall at the State Fair in 1936.—Danville Messenger.

PROVIDES FOR OPERATION OF LEAF INSPECTION ACT

The deficiency bill introduced Jan. 21 at Washington included $12,500 for operation of the new tobacco inspection act.

The money would pay for referendums to determine whether producers desired government grading of their crop before it is sold on auction warehouse floors.

An item of $250,000 is in next year's budget for administration of the tobacco law, but the $12,500 was asked immediately in view of the early opening of some markets.

Dance Recital At Lexington

Miss Goff Announces Page-Bentley Stone Program Jan. 28, Henry Clay School Auditorium.

Miss Anna Chandler Goff announces the coming of Ruth Page, premiere danseuse and director of the Chicago Grand Opera Ballet, with Bentley Stone, premiere danseur also of the Chicago Grand Opera Ballet, in a dance recital to be given in the auditorium of the Henry Clay High School in Lexington, Tuesday evening January 28 at 8:15 o'clock.

Miss Page is one of the few ballerinas in the world today, a great choreographic creator, qualified by artistic association and world acclaim, to carry on the priceless traditions of Paviola and Drayheff. She was found by Madame Paviola at the age of twelve and shortly thereafter danced with Paviola in her last tour of South America, with Drayheff, Ballet Russe in Monte Carlos, first American soloist to dance with Metropolitan Opera Company in New York City, premiere danseuse and ballet mistress with Ravinia Opera Company for seven seasons.

Mr. Stone, whose youth, vitality and sparkling brilliance attracted enormous crowds to his performances at the Century of Progress Exposition in Chicago, has been acclaimed throughout United States as one of America's few masters of the ballet. He has personality, sparkling humor and his leaps are spectacular graceful and seem to defy gravity, while his every line is sculptured.

The program will include the famous "Love Song," "Gold Standard," "Hear Ye, Hear Ye," "Iberian Monotone," "Bolero."
