Woman's Unique Trade Wins Fame

Mrs. Joe Penn, D. A. R. For 40 Years Paperhanger, Is Extolled in Newspaper.

A Richmond, Va., newspaper gave the following interesting account of Mrs. Joseph Penn, of Martinsville, Va.:

"All unaware, Richmond entertained a remarkable woman recently for a week end. No delegation met her when she stepped off the train from Martinsville. She wasn't asked for any interview or invited to appear before any woman's organization. Yet she deserved more than a line in the social column. She is a paperhanger."

"Her life story sings of the strength that was in the hearts of the pioneer women who made America great. It is a story of courage, of battling and winning against the almost insurmountable odds of a little mountain community."

"Forty years back when Mrs. Joseph Penn—'Betty' to her friends, and her husband faced life in the little mountain town it was a day-to-day struggle for the mere necessities. There were few opportunities open to women in the big cities. There were none in the little towns. A woman's place was in the home. People looked askance at the woman who talked of going into business. It just was not done and less so by a woman whose family tree held one signer of the Declaration of Independence and a flock of Revolutionary war officers."

"But family trees did not bother young Mrs. Penn. She would have told you that the sap that ran thru its limbs was more important than what hung on its branches. She believed that a woman should put her shoulder to the wheel and help her mate. So when the going was hard she stepped right out and helped her husband by learning to hang paper. When he died she continued the business. She has been a paper hanger for forty years now and she is a good one. She can paper a whole house and often does. She can paper the ceilings and the staircase walls better than most men."

"She is one of the few women paperhangers in business and she keeps young at it. Her voice has the strength and freshness of a girl. She is too busy to be a pessimist. It took courage for a woman to compete with men forty years back. It took courage to take up paperhanging in those days. Mrs. Jo Penn has plenty of it. She opened up a new field for women."

"Mrs. Penn's work and the long record of it, has won the attention of Robert Ripley of 'Believe It or Not' fame, who has asked for her picture hanging paper to be used in his cartoons."

Women Sponsor Tree Planting

D. A. R. And Federation Groups Start National Movement Among Women To Plant Trees.

At the Miami meeting, April 30, of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. H. G. Bogert of Colorado, national conservation chairman started a tree planting campaign reaching into every club. In the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Avery Turner of Texas, national chairman of conservation and thrift, has called upon all chapter chairmen to push the program.

In these days when we hear so much about dust storms, floods, and soil erosion causing hundreds of millions of dollars damages, the American people must become tree minded and realize the value of forests in flood prevention. The forest and their products support every industry. Commerce is impossible without these forest products.

Every class in colleges and high schools as well as private institutions, are being asked to plant a tree as a class activity. In the citizenship committees of various organizations, tree planting will be a major activity.

To stimulate interest in tree planting, the American Tree Association has published a very attractive thirty-two page booklet containing the complete Constitution of the United States together with all articles and amendments, and a copy of the original letter of George Washington submitting the Constitution to Congress in 1787. This material comprises one-half the booklet; the balance consists of tree-planting information and suggestions. It is an attractive gift book and it is entirely free. A postal card to the American Tree Association, Washington, D. C., will fetch a copy.

The Sunday School

(Woodford Sun)

We do not believe that any more important undertaking is on foot in any part of America than the effort being made at this season to get all of the children and young people in Sunday school. While it is well to have specific times when extra exertion is made, this should be a matter of continuous effort.

In our opinion, we owe more of our troubles to the decline in the religious instruction of children for years past than to any other single cause. There are many homes where the children have never attended Sunday school. There is not the slightest question in our minds that the alarming development of the worst type of criminals—murderers, robbers and thieves—among youth not out of their teens, is due to their entire lack of religious training.

Child Should Be Given Pet

Tame Animals, Birds or Fish To Care For Frequently Instill Valuable Lessons in Kindness.

The child is to be pitied who has grown up without even knowing the joys of owning a pet.

Birds and fish and turtles are fun to watch, and an education in themselves. Puppies, kittens and bunnies are more than mere live animals.

As soon as a little child is old enough not to commit acts of unconscious cruelty, a pet may serve to instill valuable lessons in kindness. He will learn to be gentle and self-controlled in order to win his pet's trust.

The youngster who is an only child, and runs the danger of becoming self-centered, is in particular need of such companionship.

No pet need be a nuisance to the rest of the household if the children are taught that the responsibilities as well as the pleasure of owning a pet are to be their very own. Instructions as to training may be necessary, but as the child carries it out he learns many things which are even more valuable to him than to the little animal which has been put into his charge.

CITY VS. SMALL TOWN

The Oliva Times says there isn't much difference between life in a big city and in a small town. In the city the autos run down a lot of people, and in small towns gossips do the same thing.

HER SON

(Mother's Day, May 10)

He gives her everything but Time. On Mother's Day he sends her flowers.

And always on her birthday, he Buys her a present willingly. He only hoards his precious hours.

He gives her everything but Time. On Christmas he will take great pride

In thinking of the money spent To keep her happy and content. His thoughts will make him satisfied.

He gives her everything but Time. And she could spare his gifts if he Would call her on the telephone. Or spend an hour with her alone. How very happy she would be!

THE EGYPTIAN LADY'S BATH

The services of four handmaidens were required to make the bath of an Egyptian lady of quality all that a bath was supposed to be. She sat upon a mat, while one maid held a fragrant flower to her nose and supported her with her hand. Another maiden poured water over her from an urn of rare beauty while a third and a fourth were required to massage her arms and hold her ornaments.
