Two Youths Class-
Mates In Courage

When Thomas Howard Overton was announced as the high ranking scholar in the freshman class at the Chicago-Kent College of Law a day or two ago, he insisted that Stanley A. Kasprzyk deserved some of the credit. "You see," he said, "Kasprzyk is my eyes and I'm his arms."

A simple statement, but behind it a story of calm courage; a tale of two young men who faced physical handicap and challenged it and won a good fight. They met in school when the armless Mr. Kasprzyk guided Mr. Overton, who is sightless, down a flight of stairs. The acquaintance ripened into friendship. Mr. Overton carried the books which Mr. Kasprzyk read aloud for their common study. Today they plan partnership. A shingle will bear the legend: Overton and Kasprzyk Attorneys-at-Law.

"For each of us it is just a matter of working harder to overcome a physical handicap," they serenely say. Surely Milton, in such a case, would permit his pregnant line to read: "Peace hath her victories much more renowned than war."

MOTORISTS BARRED AS BACKWASH BREAKS WINDOWS

Catlettsburg police ruled sightseeing motorists off flooded streets after the backwash from their automobiles broke several store windows. The machines also broke emergency gas lines laid atop the pavement. The hugest expanse of flood water visible in this section was at Catlettsburg, where the Big Sandy empties into the Ohio.
