Mr. Myers said that within the past month he has filmed, aside from the pictures at Herrington lake, the May Day Parade in Lexington and the Spring football practice at U. of K.

His purpose is to film local scenes and local events of interest for the benefit of local people.

FINE PAPER BY MRS. D. L. MOORE

Dr. Graham, Founder Of Graham Springs, Subject Of Study By Historical Society.

A very interesting and splendidly prepared sketch of Dr. Christopher Columbus Graham was read by Mrs. D. L. Moore at the meeting of the Harrodsburg Historical Society last Thursday night at the Mansion Museum. Mrs. Moore, who is personally acquainted with descendants of Harrodsburg's "Grand Old Man" of the long ago, had made an exhaustive and careful investigation of his life and accomplishments, especially those that concerned the Harrodsburg Springs, which he founded and brought to fame, and the progressive movements he fostered in Harrodsburg. Much of the data she assembled so entertainingly was from his family, other facts from Filson club and various reliable sources. She showed the invitation to her father-in-law, the late Dr. J. H. Moore, to the banquet honoring Dr. Graham on his 100th birthday, in Louisville where he then lived. Another relic of the banquet was the menu on which were roast venison and bear steak.

A number of guests in addition to the members enjoyed Mrs. Moore's paper, a copy of which will be filed with the Historical Society archives.

At the short business session after the program Dr. C. B. VanArsdale was re-elected president; H. C. Wood, vice president; Mrs. D. M. Hutton, secretary, and Cecil Brown, treasurer.

BOY SELECTS HIS OWN BURIAL PLACE

Strange Premonition of Death Comes To 11-Year-Old Son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis.

Miss Annie Lee Davis, Chiles street, received word of the death from pneumonia of the adopted son of her nephew, Earl Davis, and Mrs. Davis, at Whiteland, Ind., on May 4, 1936. They took the boy when he was a baby about two weeks old. A news dispatch from Greenwood, Ind., gives the following unusual account of his death.

Today eleven-year-old Howard Davis, adopted son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Davis, of Whiteland, is dead but he died happy—his last wish was fulfilled.

His body lies beneath a beautiful tree in the quiet of the Greenwood cemetery, the place he had selected four weeks before his death.

Several weeks ago, probably with a premonition of his death, he begged his father and mother to take out some life insurance for him. His parents told him he was too healthy and strong to do this yet, but he pleaded with them until they did.

Four weeks ago he asked them if they had ever purchased a burial lot. They hadn't.

"I know the prettiest lot, beneath a tree in the Greenwood cemetery," he told them, "and I just know that when I die I would be the happiest person in Heaven if I knew my body was lying there."

Two weeks ago he became ill, and last Wednesday afternoon he succumbed in the Riley hospital, in Indianapolis.

But four payments had been made on the youth's insurance. He was laid to rest Saturday in the beautiful, well-kept cemetery beneath that tree—the exact place where the youth had chosen. Interment followed services at the Whiteland Presbyterian church which was attended by one of the largest groups of friends ever present for a funeral at Whiteland.

And today, Howard Davis is happy.
