J.C.Horn-

Dft-

The plaintiff, Hartford Fire Insurance Company, says that on the 18th day of November 1925, the defendant, J.C.Horn, executed and delivered to it his certain promissory note for the sum of $255.52, due and payable in four equal installments and due upon the first day of December 1926, 1927, 1928, and 1929.

Plaintiff says that said note contains a provision that if any installment is not paid at maturity then and in that event all of said installments mature and become due and payable as if made payable all at the same time and at the time of said default.

It says that first installment was paid at maturity and that no payments or payment has been made thereon since said time and that second installment became due and payable upon the first day of December 1927 and that same has not been paid and that by default in payment thereof all of said installments became due and payable with interest thereon from date of said default. It says that the amount due upon said default was $191.64 and that it is entitled to interest thereon since date of said default, which date is December 1, 1927. Note filed herewith marked "A".

Wherefore, plaintiff prays for a judgment against the defendant in the sum of $191.64 and interest thereon at the rate of 6% from December 1, 1927, until paid and all the costs of this action and for all relief to which it is or may appear to be entitled.
