TEXAS FISHERMEN BAG 75-POUND SEA TURTLE

Two Port Arthur, Texas, fishermen, J. F. Britten and E. E. Folett, have bagged what fishermen usually just dream about—a 75-pound loggerhead sea turtle.

Fishing in the Gulf of Mexico recently, the pair was about to call it a day when something struck Britten's bamboo rod line. It looked like a shark, Britten admitted but he held on. His companion finally whacked the turtle with a stick and they landed their prize.

Britten said he had seen the turtle several times in the last few years but had been afraid to tackle him because "he seemed too big."

It was the first turtle caught near Port Arthur in 15 years.

Nobody Knows Why
Palm warblers that winter in Louisiana fly to Labrador to nest, while those that winter in the Greater Antilles spend the summer months in Northwest Canada. The two migration routes cross each other in Georgia.

Texas First Settled by Spaniards, Near El Paso

Texas, named for Indians, was explored by Spanish expeditions under Cabeza de Vaca and Francisco de Coronado between 1528 and 1542 and was first settled by the Spaniards near El Paso in 1582. La Salle established a French colony at Matagorda Bay in 1685, which, although its life was only a few years and it was voluntarily abandoned, had the effect of spurring the Spanish to efforts to secure the territory. Consequently missions were established throughout the area, one of which was the Alamo, built by the Franciscans at San Antonio in 1718.

As long as Louisiana was under French or Spanish control, the Spanish colonists in Texas lived in peace, notes a writer in the New York Herald-Tribune, but, following the Louisiana Purchase in 1803, in fact a few years earlier, adventurous Americans began incursions into Texas which, although easily repulsed by the Spanish forces, indicated unmistakably the future course of events.

In spite of the objection of the Spanish Texans to Americans, however, the Mexican government in 1821 granted a large tract of land to Moses Austin, a Missourian, and to this tract his son, Stephen F. Austin, soon after his father's death the same year, led the first band of American settlers. They founded the town of San Felipe de Austin on the Brazos river and from that time Stephen F. Austin was a leader in Texan affairs.

Annual Lantern Festival an Old Japanese Custom

When it comes to celebrating a festival of lanterns in Japan the organizers of the feast surely believe in carrying out an old adage, for they "do not hide their light under a bushel." To the contrary it blazes forth in huge lanterns, writes a correspondent in the Cleveland Plain Dealer. One lantern, which is claimed to be the largest in the world, measures 23 feet in height and nearly 15 feet in diameter. It is one of several used in the celebration of the annual lantern festival which takes place at a famous shrine in Suwa, Japan.

This celebration is an offshoot of an ancient Japanese custom of lighting bonfires nightly to drive away the "devils" which were believed to appear on the beach of Isshiki.

Lanterns gradually began to be substituted for bonfires, each community vying with the others in making the largest lanterns.

The Falkland Islands

The group of islands in the South Atlantic about 250 miles from the nearest point of the mainland of South America were claimed by France in 1764, when the French explorer De Bougainville took possession. Three years later they were ceded to Spain. About the same time they were claimed by England on the ground of prior discovery and a small settlement was established. This action nearly caused a war between England and Spain, but in 1771 Spain yielded the islands to Great Britain by convention. Fifty years later, however, the republic of Buenos Aires claimed the group and subsequently entered into a dispute with the United States concerning the rights to the products of the islands. On representations of Great Britain the Buenos Aires withdrew and in 1833 the British flag was once more hoisted at Port Louis, since when the Falkland Islands have been a regular British colony.

Darius Tricky

In 521 B. C. the Persians selected a king in a most unique way. Competitors for the position were to meet on horseback at a designated spot, and he, whose horse first neighed was to be the ruler. Darius, later to become famous, one of the competitors, went to the place designated, the night before the event was to take place, and had a mare meet his horse at the spot. The next day, as they all met, just as soon as the horse of Darius reached the place, and recognized it as the place he had met the mare the night before he, of course, neighed, and the successful trick of Darius placed him on a throne which made world history.

Schools for Pre-School Children

The provision in modern times of systematized training for children of pre-school age may be dated from the village school at Waldbach, founded by Jean Frederic Oberlin in 1774. Robert Owen started an infant school at New Lanark in 1800. Further impetus and a new direction were given the movement by Friedrich W. A. Froebel, the creator of the kindergarten.

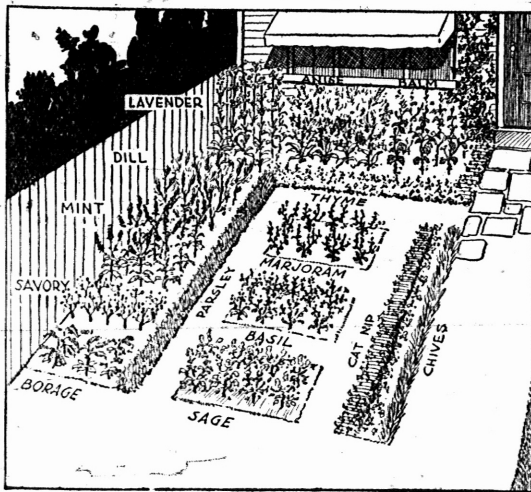

Hands, Faces and Names

The biggest bells in England have personal names. Here are the names of the seven largest, with their locations: "Big Ben," Westminster Palace; "Great Paul," St. Paul's Cathedral; "Great Peter," Yorkminster; "Little John," Nottingham; "Tom," Christ Church, Oxford; "Tom," Lincoln Cathedral, and "Great George," Bristol university.

Must Give Aid

The International salvage treaty adopted by 20 nations in 1910 says that every master of a ship is bound, so far as he can do so without serious danger to his vessel and her crew and passengers, to render assistance to everybody, even though an enemy, found at sea in danger of being lost.

Herb Gardens Are The Fashion

And Can Be A Decorative Feature Of Your Landscape.

Herb gardens are in fashion. Not only do they provide an interesting feature for the home garden, with definite decorative value, but they will do a great deal to the cuisine of the home establishment where the cook can be interested in using them to flavor dishes.

From a practical standpoint the herb garden can be made as easily as the flower or vegetable garden. Some of the herbs are perennials, but many of the best ones are annuals.

Plan to have your herb garden in a sunny situation, close to the house where you can step outside the back door for a leaf of savory or a spray of mint.

Here is a good list of annual herbs. They can be all grown from seed the first year:

THYME—A delicate seasoner, with a fine perfume. It grows about 6 inches high and makes a good edging for the herb garden. A tea made from the dried leaves has been a remedy for centuries for headaches. Use it when making sachets.

BORAGE—An excellent salad herb. It is also used to scent cool drinks. Being an unusually pretty herb, you will want to put it in a conspicuous place for appearance sake. It grows about 18 inches tall.

CARAWAY—Grow it for the seeds to decorate and flavor breads and pastries. It has feathery leaves like the carrot, and creamy yellow flowers that are attractive in season.

BASIL—One of the most popular seasoners for soup and stew. It grows about 2 feet tall into attractive little shrubs. Give them space to grow, and they will look well in the garden.

DILL—A necessary item for home made pickles. The plant grows 2½ to 3 feet tall, and has leaves 6 inches long. The young tops give an excellent flavor to fresh fish.

SAGE—Another necessary herb, used principally for seasoning dressings. Not a very attractive looking plant, so put it in the background. It grows up to 3 feet.

RUSSIAN TARRAGON—An outstanding flavor. Don't use it with other herbs, as it is likely to predominate them. Chopped leaves scattered on a lettuce salad makes a fine dish. It grows about 2 feet tall.

SWEET MARJORAM—Green leaves in summer, and dried ones in winter make excellent flavorings. It may also be used in dressings, or as a garnish. They grow up to 10 inches high.

SAVORY—The summer variety has a pleasant, spicy taste and fragrance. It is one of the sweet herbs, and can be used in a variety of ways in the kitchen. It grows 12 to 18 inches.

MINT—Use it for mint sauces and cooling drinks. There are several types, including spearmint, peppermint, lemon, etc. They grow 2 to 3 feet tall, and are attractive little plants with brush-like flowers.

LAVENDER—Grown more often for its delicious fragrance, and delicate flowers, although often used as seasoning, and in sachets. Some of them grow up to 4 feet.

There are many other herbs which may be easily grown including: Anise, horehound, chives, catnip, fennel, pimpernel, rosemary, wormwood, etc.

Bowler Hats

The bowler hat is about a hundred years old, and its origin is an interesting one. It was first called a "coke" and was designed by William Coke, Esq., who went very well to hounds in Leicestershire in the middle of the last century. Coke designed the hat for riding, especially for hunting on less formal occasions when the top hat was (and is) out of place. The hunting bowler is very much worn. Later the Earl of Derby started wearing the bowler in town and as it had general acceptance in London it became known as the "derby" by which name it is generally referred to in this country.

Village of "No's"

Boasting of its "no's" Stalton-le-Vale, England, is described locally as the loneliest village in North Lincolnshire. The village has no public houses, no policemen, no bus service, no school, no unemployment problem. Villagers speak their own dialect, and they have their own agricultural in-

100,000 Die In 1935 Accidents

National Safety Council Says They Were "Sacrificed on the Altar Of Carelessness."

Every hour during 1935, accidental death took eleven lives in this country and by the end of the year 100,000 persons had been "sacrificed on the altar of carelessness," the National Safety Council announced.

The bill for this harvest of death came to $3,450,000,000 or $27.05 for each person in the country, the council's annual pamphlet, "Accident Facts," disclosed.

In addition, 9,340,000 persons suffered non-fatal accidents.

Traffic accidents, as during the last six years, were the busiest agent of death, taking 37,000 lives, on all-time record. Next in the parade came a total of 31,500 deaths among persons who tumbled down stairs, fell out windows, cut themselves or were burned in their own homes.

The council emphasized that most of the fatal accidents resulted from carelessness. Citing the 1936 spring floods as an example of horrifying death which attracted the attention of the entire nation, the council pointed out that:

"During that same period, several times as many lives were snuffed out by ordinary accidents. Nothing spectacular about most of them; no mighty exhibition of well-nigh un-governable forces. For the most part they were just the result of a moment's thoughtlessness, a bit of undue haste, a useless chance-taking."

The council found that the total for 1935 was 1,139 less than in 1934 and pointed to indications the 1936 toll will be smaller still than last year's.
