The above images show how the 10 Styrofoam panels with backing board, slide together to form the 37' "Section of Wall...". Each 9' tall panel is labeled verso with both a number and lower-case letter due to identifying schemes used at different times in exhibition history. Handlers must wear powder-free nitrile gloves when working with these extremely fragile panels. Panels should be removed from/returned to crate by at least 2 handlers at either end (or sides, as needed), but NEVER lifted by the corners which can easily snap off. Prior to any installation, temporary or permanent, some reinforcement of the panels verso could help minimize bowing. Kasia Maroney recently repaired breaks and restored surface damage on the panels in June 2024. As of 2025, one of the panels (not identified at this time) has a corner which was snapped off in 2024 during improper lifting and has not been repaired. Kasia Maroney Conservation should be contacted to do the repair.

Crate 20 or any new crate in which the panels are stored should be housed in a fully climate-controlled storage facility.
