Prophecy

Flash! The widely known traveler, Thelma Miller, has just departed from Akron on her mission "Around the World" in search of ex-Elmites to find the latest statistics concerning the outcome of that great class of '58.

Landing in Chicago for a brief plane inspection by officer Pat O'Toole, who is greatly feared in the underworld because she frequently indulges in ancient marinated herring, our traveler is again on her way. The next destination is Colorado where she finds Jean Zeno being treated by Joan Recker, head of the first-aid program in Recker's Wrecking Company at Boulder Dam, for a snakebite contracted while counting the shakers in a rattlesnake tail.

Passing over California, she notices a welcome oasis of refreshment in Death Valley, Horning's Ice Cream Stand, catering to the elite homeless pigeons attending the Miss Jewell academy for homemaking. Shortly, she views Kathleen Schimmoeller's latest mission project of teaching Beethoven's Fifth to the neglected inmates of San Quentin.

Proceeding to Hawaii, the glorious land of sand and more sand, she again sees Pat Fabbro, once Olympic pole-vaulting champ now specializing in coconut gathering. At Australia, Thelma is surprised to find Mary Ann Wiesemann the Mother Superior for a convent of Australian Kangaroo keepers who work closely with the Merton Teddy Bear Hospital founded for Koalas by Marge Fetherson.

Next our heroine is in Borneo, land of the head hunters and witch doctors, where Palma Merlitti gives her a plastic statue of the graceful "Wild Man of Borneo" as a personal memento. Chartering a slow boat to Nationalist China, she finds the celebrated Peiping Choral Choir cheering the armed forces and directed by the celebrated George Ann George.

En route to Japan she has good luck in securing a pass to visit the remote island of Lower Slobovia, where she is privileged to watch the eminent Carol Verko, world-renown mud masher, mash! After such a thrilling exhibition, the busy Miss Miller goes to Tokyo where there seems to be a great turmoil. Learning that it is Rickshaw Racing Day, she views an astounding feat in which the world's record for women's rickshaw racing is dashingily broken by Nancy Stenger.

Of course the journey must pause for a stop at "Ye Old Pizza Shoppe" in Outer Mongolia run charitably by Pat Giusti for the emaciated Outer Mongolians of Linda Maglione's Slenderella Salon. This "Shoppe" has attained wide-spread fame, and is especially acclaimed in India by Mary Lou Schippicasse who fashions headpieces for the hairless Indians, and Mary Lou Monte who is of late mounting Mount Everest to investigate the myths of marble manufacturing in thinner atmosphere.

Near India is the founder of an Italian's poets' colony, Mary McMuldren, who has set the location in Afghanistan where they will be knitting afghans for the afghanless. Proving her strength against the elements, Angela Wood has become the first traveling missionary for relieving the troubles of Siamese Cat lovers in Arabia. The tour next pauses for the spectacle of watching Karen Andres weaving her famous daisy chains for goldfish in the Dead Sea. Near this great feat one is able to buy tasty Mutza Balls, prepared by the fastest Mutza Ball stuffer alive, Colleen Stevens.

After crossing the short distance to the Mediterranean Sea, we meet Rosemary Vincentin who has been trying to persuade the General Assembly to pass a motion for extending the Panama Canal to join the Suez in an intercontinental waterway. To the north over the plains gallops the commander of the Turkish army, Anne Dannemiller, charging with true spirit to wipe out all spotted gophers which harm the Turkish people with their constant digging, digging, digging . . .

Stopping quickly in Moscow, Thelma finds Carolyn Loicano, already famous for her parachuting from a helium balloon 5 miles up, the victim of a fall from a stepladder in her pro-American home. At the same time Diane DiNuoscio is instructing Krushchev on the latest doll-snitching techniques. Advancing to other Communist lands, she comes upon Madame Heinrich trying to decode Kadar's secret formula for Hungarian Goulash, Moscow style. In Poland she visits Nancy Wrench who is efficiently managing a Polish Stilt Sorority for boosting short Poles.

At Switzerland our roving miss finds relaxation from the insinuating Reds and enjoys her freedom on the first ride given in the only Trans-Alpine roller coaster constructed by the accomplished Phyllis Behrle. In Holland she meets Pat Donnelly cleaning spring slush from the canals.

A great surprise befalls Miss Miller when she hears the trumpets blare out as they hail the new premier of France, Roseann Dick, who is frantically waving her "I Like Ike" banner. Craving for a bit of adventure, she travels to Spain and is entertained by JoAnn Zeno, the renowned matador. Here she comes; there she goes!

Since an informal reunion is to be held in Ubangi-Shari, Africa, Thelma attends. There she sees Mary Ellen Beaver who has been training other little Beavers in building Cactus dams on the Sahara, Sue Barnes who teaches the natives of French Equatorial Africa punctuality, and the abstract artist from Algiers, Karen Wilson.

Next the plane arrives at Bolivia where a shy resident, Laura Connor, is to receive a gold diaper pin for her 37th son. To the north of the tin country, news drifts in that an Antarctica ice chopper, Judy Siegfert, is living as a hermit in her igloo in the heart of the Amazon jungle.

Pursuing the field of medicine is Dr. Valerie Warner who is waging a constant battle against T.B. in the Tropic of Cancer. Meanwhile, in Labrador, our weary traveler meets a breeder of hairless Alaskan huskies, who has become famous overnight; she is Mary Ann Lewis whose hobby is being a barber.

Finally our tired wanderer comes home. The first sight to meet her weary eyes is the Statue of Liberty, receiving its annual bath from the hard-working Wendy Pieri, who sits upon flagpoles in her spare time. In order to finish her trip with style, Thelma visits the great capital of our country. There she encounters Jeannette Alessio, coach of the 1st World Horse Basketball team which has been globe trotting; and hears the sad news that Ann Buffe is trying desperately to pawn her Davis Cup after being the first one to hit a tennis ball "Around the World."

Visiting Janet Noble slinging pasteries in an elite bakery shop near the site of Washington's deceased cherry tree, specializing in deceased cherry pies, Thelma hears some stirring news. Frances McCurdy had just composed "When the Hi-Fi Blasts You Into New Realms of Sound;" those wishing to see her, look toward the Big Dipper at 8:57 p. m.

Later, touring the celebrated buildings of Washington, she sees Mary Margaret Zeisig trying to patent a magic carpet to economize on rocket fuel, and notices Pat Johnson as Sister Luke X-Raying cheeses in the Pentagon to prove physics' theory of moon matter.

At last, as our tired but satisfied woman leaves for Akron, she turns to find the industrious Mary Beth Borowski painting the White House pink.

Dear Diary . . .

SEPTEMBER

- 5—Today was the day. School started at the Elms the last time for us. So many things to know. Where do I sit? Are those my books? How do you do?

Comment: Just where did the summer go?

- 24—At long last we met the freshies and introduced our little sisters to the student body at the freshman mixer.

Comment: The "Hogan" Highschool Football Preview was a wowzer!

OCTOBER

- 7—Until the end of the week, the freshies were bond slaves of their sophomore masters in the annual initiation.

Comment: Will anyone raise it to fifteen for this fine healthy specimen?

- 16—The National Industrial Arts Contest, sponsored by the Ford Motor Company awarded three beaming senior entrants, Mary Ann Lewis, Judy Siegfert and Mary Margaret Zeisig $80.00, $60.00 and $20.00 respectively.

Comment: Well, gang, when do we enroll in Industrial Arts?

- 26—Tearing off the first leaf of the Elm Social Calendar, seniors and their escorts whirled into the magic and mystery of "Halloween Fantasy" to the "haunting" melodies of Johnnie Gleason's orchestra.

Comment: That ole' black magic has me in its spell.

- 29—This year, for the first time, seniors decided on a serious, informative candlelight induction into the Iota Delta Alpha Sorority instead of the costumed initiation.

Comment: We'll always remember "... to uphold the standards of the school, to exemplify in conduct the integrity expected of a true daughter of Our Lady of the Elms."

- 31—Our little sisters got their chance to meet the Hoban boys at the first mixer of the year sponsored for the Elms.

Comment: Yes, I'm me, but who are you?

NOVEMBER

- 13—For the second straight year, we copped the Hockey title edging the juniors 2-0.

Comment: Whaaaao!!!

- 16—Opening the drama season, the Players Guild presented "Ladies in Retirement."

Comment: Critics applauded Mark Slick in the role of Albert Creed.

- 24—Taking part in a cultural choral program sponsored by Akron University, the Choir Ensemble represented the Catholic Faith singing a few of their favorite selections by Bach.

Comment: It was a privilege and a pleasure.

- 26—Amid the shouting of carney barkers, weird sights in the fun house and the aromas of pizza and french waffles, the Elm Leaf Carnival got under way.

Comment: Step right up ladies and gent . . . uh, ladies.

DECEMBER

- 6—Saint Nick paid O.L.E. a visit handing out suckers and bundles of sticks to all good and bad little girls.

Comment: Now, just a minute here, why don't I get a sucker instead?

- 20-24—This was the Choir's annual sojourn to sing at Polesky's, bringing a little of the Yuletide cheer to last minute shoppers.

Comment: "... and may all your Christmases be white."

- 30—Tonight, the rustling of formal was heard as we danced under the silver and pink enchantment of the Sorority's Christmas Cotillion to the lilting music of Ross Halamary.

Comment: Ahhhhhhhhhhhhhhhhh.

JANUARY

- 12—Honored guests of a delicious buffet supper, given by the home economics class, were the senior class and high school faculty.

Comment: So, that's what the baby pictures were for!

- 15—Despite scar-faced Dibo's protests, Fab, the defendant, was found not guilty and the 30 days in the city workhouse was suspended. Don't get excited friend. This was only a mock trial.

Comment: I think the jury was rigged.

- 21, 22, 23—Time to put away the frivolities of life, and settle down to some good hard work. This is what we tried to do at exam time.

Comment: Whew! I made it!

- 29—The "Wearin' of the E's" predominated at the Athletic Council's entertaining assembly.

Comment: Gina—another Gary Moore?

.... a Senior

FEBRUARY

- ??—I am proud to write that the Elms merited a number of superior and excellent awards in science exhibits at John Carroll and Kent State Universities.

Comment: Dr. Von Braun, how do you do!

- 25—To acquire a taste for the cultural and fine arts, we journeyed to the Cleveland Playhouse to see "The Taming of the Shrew."

Comment: What a writer—that Shakespeare!

MAY

- 2—Tonight was the last night of the Hoban Concert. It was a good experience and really fun, singing and dancing

Comment: . . . singing and dancing . . . snore, snore, snore.

- 3—Come and dance your date 'round the Maypole. This is what we did at the Choir dance decorated in gay, pastel colors for the May-time.

Comment: Not so fast, please, John!

- 19, 20, 21—Culminating our rewarding retreat, the seniors invited their mothers to their annual May Breakfast.

Comment: Can we ever forget those quiet and peaceful days spent so close to God?

- 29—Prom time arrived, and we waltzed into the beauty of Hawaii and exotic romance.

Comment: We thank you, juniors. It was too beautiful.

JUNE

- 10—What else matters more in this month of June than Graduation. It seems I've been looking forward to it for so long these past four years that, well, that what can I say?

Comment: Onward, dear Elms.
