

“What I really like
is its precision”

Dear James,

Adam 28 Aug 2009

Have you read Winston Churchill's observation on golf? "The rules of the game of golf is to hit a very small ball into even a smaller hole with weapons singularly ill-designed for the purpose," according to W.C. I couldn't agree more. Myself I will take up golf when the size of the holes in the greens will be enlarged to look alike Pot holes.

The cartoon illustrates the frustration which causes these small holes!

Vera is a dedicated golf player. In Lagos at the Ikoy club I played golf twice a week. When I was reassigned to the UK I played occasionally. Back in the Netherlands I stopped playing.

It is a splendid pastime, however for me it is too time-consuming.

This impromptu is a cover letter to a couple of photocopies, I couldn't readily find, when I send you the first batch, also from the New Yorker July 2003. The information is quite revealing. There is a Dutch expression: Al klukt het haar, maar alles wat gedrukt is waar. 'loosely translated: All printed matter is true, even when it fools you! Now something completely different: Mica August 2009 I completed my 69th tour around the sun. The question is: "Am I an old man? I am told that you know that you're getting older, when a four letter word for something pleasurable two people can do in bed is: Filling holes with your balls on greens is READ! in Europe not considered to be adultery: faites vos fesses Happy Landings in your new home Christina.

It's much quicker if you just pick the ball up and stick it in the hole. There! Can we go for lunch now?..

