Dear Stuart,

The day before yesterday the Dutch nation celebrated the Kings birthday. The king and his family visit a chosen town for a stroll of about three hours. The town organizes a showcase of its history its typical characteristics and all sorts of culture outings. This once a year meet and greet event of the king and queen with the ordinary people is being covered by television changing and changing them into sort of rock stars. They are cheered and in return the royals are pressing the flesh en route. The chosen town was Amersfoort. Photo's can represent it better than words.
