Dear Mehdi

First of all we enjoyed the pleasure of your company here in Rotterdam.

You exercised the great art of giving by giving me Pistache-Nuts and a tin of Caviar, in early days a prerogative restricted to Royalty.

Whenever there is an opportunity to involve your good offices, I will not hesitate to contact you.

Permit me to make a few observations, thereby taking into account that I am a layman, on the Gulf Crisis.

Clearly, there are two truths. An Arab truth and a Western truth. When Communists are frustrated and eventually stop then the parties are going to fight about which truth is the real truth. The truth of the winner prevails. Both parties involve the help of God. Thus God wins and God loses.

Melchi, it is nothing but madness! and you especially in Iran must be amazed how the West first chose side with Iraq and how the latter has become the root of all evil. Very confusing indeed! Let me end this scribble with a quotation from Eric Parmer.

"When I carefully consider the curious habits of dogs, I am compelled to conclude that man is the superior animal

When I consider the curious habits of man I confess, my friend, I am puzzled.

Kind regards
Garrison Niboye
