HERE comes the big, big blueberry and it promises huckleberry pie with the berries as big as grapes. They are to be cultivated so that instead of hunting the little wild huckleberries in the woods, the pickers can gather the big fat fellows from cultivated fields.

How to do this and utilize thousands of acres of deserted farm and waste land is being demonstrated in New Jersey, in the backwoods of Burlington county. The common swamp huckleberry is about to take its place amongst the domesticated plants and shrubs of our fields and gardens.

This piece of pioneering, which is being eagerly watched by New Englanders and by the inhabitants of other sections where there are thousands of acres that might be devoted to the culture of the huckleberry, is being sponsored by Miss Elizabeth C. White, of "Whitesbog," N. J., a knower and lover of the pine lands.

For the past ten years the United States Department of Agriculture has been working in co-operation with Miss White. In the past few years the results of the long, determined fight, co-

Now comes the mysterious part. You now have a line of numbers and if you will look below at the "Number-letter Chart" you will find that by putting the relative letters under the numbers you have counted you are positively automatically forming words and after you have given all the numbers their respective letters, then mark off your complete words and arrange them into the message, which up to this time has been hidden.

Sometimes it happens that a word is divided (part at the end and part at the beginning). In that case simply join them together. It is all amazingly easy.
