Blueberry festival attracts crowd

Blueberries were the main theme at the 13th annual Blueberry Festival, held recently at the historic Whitesbog Village, the birthplace of the blueberry.

The event attracted approximately 2,500 visitors from the tri-state region to Browns Mills.

Evidently, the crowd really went wild for anything blue, because when it came time for the pie-eating contest, there wasn't a blueberry pie to be found. It seemed that the pies reserved for the contest were sold to the hungry visitors before a volunteer realized that there was a problem. However, using Piney wisdom, the contest went on as scheduled when ice cream with blueberries was substituted for the blueberry pies.
