

We really enjoyed the heart of that little village. It was very cute at night. We even witnessed a small church procession that ended at the market square.

It was very peaceful and quiet. We just loved it. We turned in at about nine P.M. and slept well till a cat jumped on the tent about 2:00 A.M., scaring us to death.

Kilometers travelled: 360.

Day 9 Friday September 13 (cloudy and cool)

We got up about 8:00 A.M., when we were awakened by the sounds of the gun shots of the local hunters. We made breakfast and played with the friendly black cat that had visited us the night before. We walked around the grounds some more. The lake looked nice but it was damp, so it did not show its best side.

We checked out and drove into Wembing again where we visited the old Cathedral, which was beautiful.

We walked around the main square and changed money at the bank where the teller was exceptionally friendly.

On the way out we stopped at Maria Brönnen Church. It appears to be some sort of shrine and is really awesome, as it stands on the hillside. A service was just ending as we approached, so we got to see the fountain behind the altar. It evidently has holy miraculous water, since a lot of worshippers drank from it and filled cups and small bottles. After getting lost around Nürnberg, we arrived in Dachau in time for lunch. We wandered around trying to find information, but no luck. Then on to München.

We walked to information booth in Bahnhof after we finally had found a parking garage. We thought we might splurge, and stay at a hotel, but the ones available were too expensive for our budget.

We lost our way and it took forever to find the place where we had parked. After much walking and asking, we found it.

We drove to Thalkirchen campgrounds on the edge of town. It was very crowded, mostly with young people (loud), but it was o.k.

After setting up, we headed for town.
We took the U-Bahn to Marienplatz.

We walked around the Rathaus, visited Dahlmeyers (ooh), the Opernhaus, the Vier Jahreszeiten. We walked up Theresienstrasse, where we found a restaurant, Kino Cafe and had dinner. (chicken and beef). We relaxed, read the paper for a while, and called this bar where we wanted to go, to make sure it was the right one.

We took the trolley to Freddie's Pub (Jim's old hangout), and had a few beers. It was rather crowded and we observed part of the crowd watching dirty movies on a big screen. We talked to a young local guy.

We took the trolley back about midnight. For all the crowd, it was very quiet during the night, except for some snoring neighbors.

Day 10 Saturday September 14 (cloudy).

We had coffee in the snackbar (just enough marks to buy it). Then we headed south.

We drove to Bregenz, where we stopped for lunch.

It is a very interesting town on the Bodensee. It is the location of a famous music festival, held every summer on a stage on the water.

We ate lunch in a very nice Austrian Restaurant

We had Stuffed Peppers, the special for the day.
We chatted with two elderly Austrian ladies, who were seated nearby. Their dog was under the table, unnoticable. Lucky for us we did talk to them, because when the time came to pay our bill, we were a few Austrian Marks short and they helped us out. An embarrassing but pleasant experience.
We changed some money,

St. Gallus Parish-Church

St. Gallus Parish Church was first built in the center of the old Alemannic village and was mentioned in a document for the first time in 1097. It was destroyed by several fires. Tower and foundations of the present church date back to the 14th century; later it was given Roman and Gothic silhouettes. The gable was completed by Michael Kuen in 1672. His crescent gable and lantern are effective decorative elements. The nave was enlarged by Peter Thumb and Franz Anton Beer. Noteworthy early rococo stucco by Abraham Bader, and ceiling painting by Ignaz Wegscheider (1738). Baroque high altar of red and brown stucco marble.

Altar sculptures: St. Gallus — St. Peter — St. Paul — St. Gregory. Altarpiece from 1740: one of the shepherdesses carries a painting of Empress Maria Theresia who had donated 1500 gulden for the high altar.

In front of the high altar is the so-called silver altar which is used for mass today. It was donated by baron von Deuring.

Four side altars of stucco marble, pulpit and beautiful rococo organ case. The organ is by Joseph Gabler, who also built the famous organ in Weingarten. He died in 1771 in Bregenz. In 1974 the church acquired a new organ.

The choir stalls were originally made for the former monastery church of Mehrerau and were later transferred to the parish church. They are made of walnut, with beautiful carvings and marquetry by the Riedling artist Johannes Joseph Christian.

We drove over the Swiss border. The terrain was becoming more mountainous and pretty, although it remained gloomy.

WECHSELSTUBE CHANGE
14. SEP. 1991
9430 ST. MARGRETHEN

We changed
some more money once we were over the Austrian-Swiss border.
We also tanked
some gas.

We stopped in Lichtenstein, which we found disappointing.
Vaduz, the main city, was very touristy and it did not have much charm. On the way in, we stopped at a covered bridge over a dead arm of the River Rhine, where an art exhibition was being held.

We walked around for a little while, then decided to move on, and we were glad we did. We discovered the town of Bad Ragaz. This is a posh spa town along with an old charming quarter with old-fashioned flavor.

We walked around a while, trying to find a "Zimmer Frei", but no luck. We chanced upon a campground on the edge of town. It was very nice and woodsy. Lots of trees with a citypark on the fringe.

We went back into town and had dinner at Garni Hotel Rössli. Both had the day's special, Beef Stroganoff with huge, delicious potatoe pancakes.

After dinner we walked around town. We stopped at one of the larger elegant hotels and called our neighbor Patrick, to see how things were going over there, especially with the cats.

Then we walked to some of the Spa Hotels. They are huge and very posh, which was quite a surprise for a small country like this.

The swimmingpool of one of them was especially unusual and modernistic. We looked for the Casino, but that seemed to be closed. We took a look at the disco. That also was not very active. It was definitely the end of the season. We went back to the campsite, where we slept in the back of the van for the first time. It was very comfortable.

kilometers travelled: 288

Day 11 Sunday September 15 (cloudy-sunny)

We had a lite breakfast at the van. Then we drove into town to visit the large spa. We walked around the pool and flowered grounds. We watched two men playing tennis.

We continued on down the mountains. Jim was driving and he was pretty scared, with the sharply twisting roads going down and down.

The scenery was very pretty and the cloud-formations beautiful.

We ended up at the city of Lugano, situated on a lake with the same name.

By now the weather was more cooperative and the sun was shining brightly, and it was just beautiful by the lakeside.

Savona to find a bank to change money, which we needed to get gas. We needed both badly.
 We finally parked illegally on a square in front of the police station and City Hall. Hans stayed with the car, while Jim went searching for a bank. Needless to mention he came back with some delicious pastries.
 We found a gas station and were finally feeling much better and relieved.
 We got out of Savona fast and driving along the coast we went through tunnel after tunnel after tunnel. Between them we saw some spectacular scenery, high up on the cliffs, overlooking the blue sea.

We stopped for lunch in Alassio after walking around a little to decide to eat on the beach or on a pretty little square. We decided on the latter. The place was small and there was one table available inside.

There was a misunderstanding in our order, and the waitress understood that we wanted two courses each, which would have meant an enormous amount of food, much too much for our little stomachs, but we got it changed in time. We both had spaghetti with fruits de mer and a dessert of meringue with real cream.

We drove high above Monaco and on to Nice. Several kilometres inland, between Nice and Cannes, we found a very nice campground, run by English, called Moulin Nou.

It had a very nice pool, a restaurant, tennis court and other facilities. We talked to a British couple, who had been here before; he had worked in Wallstreet etc. Quite nice people.

We were very tired after the trip along the coast, so we had a few drinks, sandwiches and we were in the tent by 8:30 P.M.

Kilometers travelled: 207

Day 13 Tuesday September 17 (sunny-warm).

We had an early breakfast, before heading for Monaco and Monte Carlo.

We decided to take the train, as it would be much easier than driving and the train station was very close to the camping. We parked the car across the station on the other side of the road and waited for the train, which was due at 9:20 A.M. We got there about 5 minutes early.

We waited and waited and still no train. We were just about to give up, when a bus came along and stopped. The driver informed us, that the trains were not running, because of a strike.

So, we had to take the bus.

It took about 30 minutes to Nice then a quick change of busses and we were on our way.

We arrived in Monaco in less than an hour. It was quite warm and the sky was clear.

We walked the full length of the waterfront up to the Casino and looked around in the lobby. We lost a few francs in the slots and picked up a poster about the international sculpture exhibit around the Casino.

We did not go into the main Salon, as they asked $10.00 entrance fee and we weren't dressed for it anyway (wearing shorts).

The Place du Palais

Lined with cannons cast under Louis XIV, the Place du Palais offers an exceptional view over Monte Carlo and the harbour as far as the cape of Bordighera in Italy to the North-East and Fontvieille and the Cap-d'Ail to the South-West. At precisely 11.55 am every day, in front of the main entrance to the Palace which was built at the end of the XVIIth century by Prince Louis I, there takes place the Changing of the Guard, a spectacular ceremonial performed in full dress uniform (black in winter, white in summer) that has not changed for more than a century.

Responsible for guarding the Sovereign twenty-four hours a day and providing him with escort and ceremonial services, the Prince's Compagnie des Carabiniers also backs up the Monégasque Red Cross and ensures the security of those who take part in sporting events in the Principality.

Monaco Cathedral

Built of white stone from La Turbie in 1875 on the site of a XIIIth-century church dedicated to Saint Nicolas, this edifice is in the Romanesque-Byzantine style and contains the tombs of former Princes of Monaco. Noteworthy features of its interior decoration include the reredos by the Nice painter Louis Bréa dating from 1500 (right-hand arm of the transept), the high altar, and the episcopal throne in white Carrara marble. Pontifical services are held on the occasion of major liturgical feast days, on the feast of Sainte-Dévote (27th January) and on the national holiday (19th November), accompanied by a four-keyboard organ which was inaugurated in 1976 and which is also played at concerts of religious music.

From September to June, a Mass is sung every Sunday at 10 am by "Les Petits Chanteurs de Monaco" and the Singers of the Cathedral Choir School.

We took the bus back to Nice at 3:20 P.M. and strolled around the narrow market streets of the old town for a while. We bought some "2 for ten" pastries and some other things for dinner. After getting back by bus, we drove to the nearest village, St. Martin du Var, and did some more grocery shopping.

We took a short swim before dinner. The pool was beautiful, but the water was freezing.

While preparing for dinner and having a few drinks, we talked with the English couple we had met before.

We went to bed early, but had a noisy night due to a race car-driver roaring about half the night through the hills.

Day 14 Wednesday September 18 (Sunny).

After breakfast and breaking camp, we headed for Cannes. It was another beautiful day.

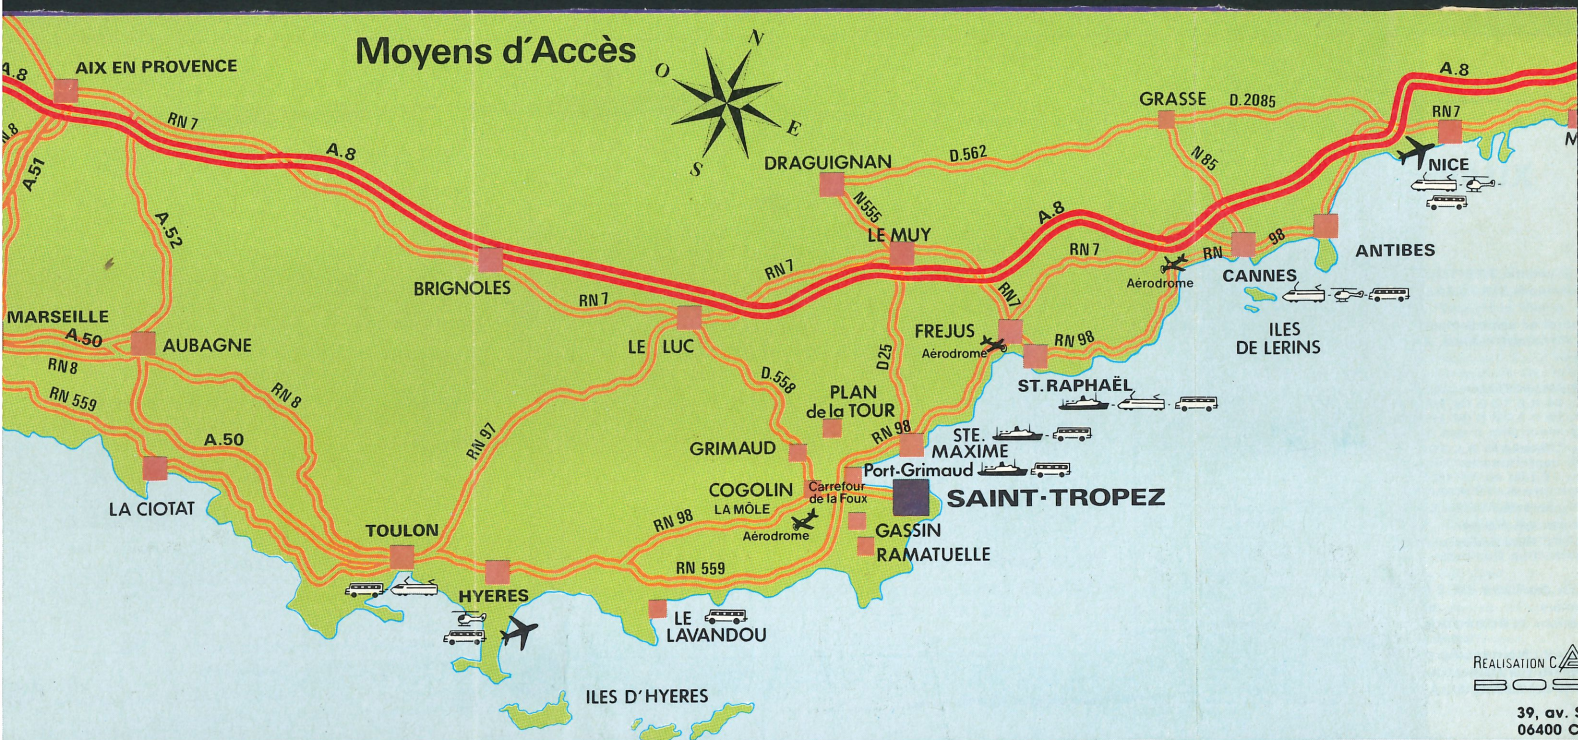

Saint Tropez. We had postponed lunch too long, because when we wanted to eat, most places were closed, since they stopped serving after 2:00 P.M. So we just had a little snack by the side of the road.

We arrived in St. Tropez about 3:00 P.M.
It is a very charming seaside town with narrow, twisting streets leading to the harbor, which had some large yachts in it.
One especially striking one was from Wilmington, Del.. On the way back to the van we stopped and watched some local men play bocci-ball.
It was interesting to watch them.
We left about 5:00 P.M. and drove through some beautiful mountain roads although they were very windy.
Along the way we stopped at an interesting little village, Grimaud.

Grimaud

We walked through an old cemetery to a windmill on top of a hill with a great view. We drove through some more interesting towns until we arrived in Aix en Provence about 6:30 P.M.

AIX EN PROVENCE

We went to one campsite, way out in the hills. It wasn't very good although it did have a gorgeous view of the mountains glowing in the sunset. We found a very good one on the edge of town. "L'Arc du Ciel", run by a Dutch lady and her daughter. We got settled and then walked into town. We had dinner at "The Majestic". The dishes were excellent. Hans had warm cheese, fish and flan. Jim had artichoke hearts with cheese. Nine dubonnet included, the total came to $ 29.00. Well worth it.

After dinner we walked down the main street. It was like a miniature Champs Elysées, very active, with lots of people milling around. We had a beer at "la Belle Epoque" with the young crowd. We strolled back to the van and turned in at about 11:00 P.M.

Kilometers travelled: 271.

Day 15 Thursday September 19 (Sunny).

For breakfast Jim bought fresh pastries from a woman who sold them at the gate: apple strudel, apple tart and custard tart. They tasted very good, together with our own coffee. After demolishing them and showering, we were on the road about 10:00 A.M. We had to exchange money, so we drove into the center, ending up in an underground garage, for it was very hard to find a spot in the street. The whole situation was rather complicated, so we lost almost half an hour doing this.

After leaving Aix we drove through miles and miles of beautiful rolling country full of vineyards. This is one of the leading wine areas. We bought some grapes along the way. The next stop was Arles.

We walked to the ancient Roman Coliseum, visited Notre Dame Cathedral, the centre,

a cloister and hospital where van Gogh died.

We drove on to Beziers. Along the way we saw a beautiful castle. It began to get cloudy and windy. We still had to stop at a sidewalk cafe for lunch. We had some kind of soup. The umbrellas nearly blew over and some cushions blew away, the waiter running after them.

By now it was really raining, but we browsed around some stores anyway. Hans got a new case for his glasses in one of the stores (for free). We exchanged some money and visited a few bookstores. We drove on and through Perpignan. It was too busy and crowded to stop. After getting lost again we ended up in Le Boulou.

Campground
"Mas Llinas" was quiet and nice.
We were almost alone
there and we set up
the tent on a bluff in a corner, overlooking the Pyrenees.
We had our evening
cocktail while admiring the view.

We drove into town and had dinner at "Le Grillon d'Or", a very charming hotel with continental dining room. There were a lot of people inside, so we requested to be seated in the small but cosy patio. Jim had mixed cold cuts and fish gratinee. Hans ordered ham, salad, fish and flan. With two aperatives, two glasses of wine, it all came to 168 Francs or about $29.00.

We wandered around the very quiet city for a while, then turned in about 10:00 P.M.

Day 16 Friday September 20 (foggy, then sunny)

Hans was up real early, excited about seeing Spain again. We had breakfast while watching the fog burn off the mountains. After washing up, we were on the road again about 10:00 A.M.
