Omitted Lessons.

God is not ashamed to be economical of his forces. Is this not a good lesson for our American boys and girls to learn, and is it irreverent to tell them that in being so themselves they are in very truth more like Him?

And forethought. Shall our botony class miss that lesson as they watch the buds for the next spring's growth slowly forming through all the summer before; tiny leaf and flower buds packed away in order, warmly covered with downy wool and thatched with water-proof scales to keep out "the cold November rain?" And the class that pauses to-day over the oil wells of Pennsylvania and gives the statistics of the city of Pittsburg, shall they not be led somewhat to appreciate the forethought which aeons ago stored up the abundant sunshine in the great tropical forests, sunk them below the sea, guarded their slow decay, packed them closely together by mountain masses piled above, heated them from volcanic fires, and so made them ready for the men not yet created upon the surface? There is no intelligent child of twelve years old, or even younger, whose eyes do not grow deeper and fuller as she listens to such stories, or who does not realize, with a reverence for common things, perhaps never felt before, that God takes pains to have things ready long before they are needed, and does not wait for that time to work for the accomplishment of his plans, and she goes away from that lesson feeling with a new comprehension that even in her own little duties she will be more like him if she cultivates forethought.

Patience is closely allied to the previous duty. To God "a thousand years are as one day," but the girl who has heard these words from the sacred desk on many a Sunday, may feel a deeper meaning in them as her teacher in physiology speaks to her of the growth of the tiny cells which go to make up bone and muscle and cartilage and brain, and may perhaps, check her own impatience in her daily tasks at the remembrance. And as in her geology recitation she is led to trace the earth's history through all the ages, and as with a sense of awe she beholds

"Millions perishing to pave The planet with a floor of lime." as she traces the slow and gradual preparation of the nebulous mass for the abode of human beings, she cannot fail, in this insight into the infinite patience of the Creator, somewhat to grow into it herself. Or as the pages of her history show her, in the light which the more mature thought that her teacher brings to it, that

"Though the mills of God grind slowly.

Yet they grind exceeding small; Though with patience he stands waiting

With exactness grinds he all."

Scientific Investigations.

From the report of the committee on "Statistics," read before the council of the National Educational Association, we make the following extracts:

* * * * *

"Here is experience and observation enough in any age to furnish data for a complete science of nature and man, but from the circumstance that it is not qualified, this experience goes for little or nothing. The generalizations are so crude that they conflict with one another, and the inferences of one day refute those of the previous day, and in the end all is reduced to zero.

The facts of the world as given to us are dead results, and in order to attain any scientific knowledge—or any practical wisdom—in regard to them, we must go behind these dead results to the causes, forces or energies that have produced them. We must learn to see all real things in the processes that have brought these dead results here and will presently remove them hence. For the real things before us do not stay; they have come out of the region of possibility, and they will go again into that region as soon as they have masqueraded a longer or a shorter interval of time. The realities before our senses are, then, not true actualities, but only passing phases of some process or other. They are, in the language of recent natural science mere phenomena. Science for this reason inquires rather into the process than into the immediate reality. The process abides, its dead results are in a state of change and vanishing. But we can learn that process only by the study of these same dead results. We must make the basis of our inference. We must learn from them the processes.

Here it is that quantity becomes so important. Our statistics record the exact limits of reality, and show us the strength of forces and the quality of the forces. The present existing things reveal the process by showing us what forces are at work. A comparison of to-day with that of yesterday fixes the trend of the process. It is changing, and there is an increase or diminution in the strength of the forces involved; some are yielding to others.

For the reason that science goes at once behind things and events to their moving causes, it is clear that quantitative data are absolutely essential to it.

Science enquires what relation each thing or event has to other things and events that precede or follow it. It seeks the relation of things to environments and the relation of events to preceding and following events. In this way each thing or event is made to throw light on all others, and all things and events are made to throw light on each. This is what makes science so important to men.

The relation of one thing or event to another is of no account for science, so far as it is a relation or influence—a relation of action and reaction. This proves the correctness of the statement made that science goes at once behind immediate things and events to enquire into the moving causes—to enquire into the living process, in short. Science gives system because it connects all these isolated data in the unity of the living process which acts through forces."

Is it not a fact that a vast amount of the real wealth of the country has been produced the last year by the intelligence, industry and frugality of the farmers of the country?

The common schools, by their work scatter great learning and pour into the general mind of the people great ability to do and to correct evil and wrong, permanently.

The school is the vanguard of both power and civilization among the people, because it lifts to all a higher plane of intelligence.

Every teacher should receive nobility from association and from reading the great authors, just as iron becomes magnetic by contact with a magnet.

Three Classes of Men.

Three classes of men will stand together at the judgment, in that awful day, drunkards, saloon keepers and Christian men who vote for license in the Democratic and Republican parties.

There is no doubt as to what will be the fate of the drunkards, Christian Democrats and Republicans agree as to the fate of the saloon keepers. But what will become of Christian Republicans and Christian Democrats who vote for license through those parties?

The drunkards might plead that they never intended to become drunkards, terrible doom by rum legalized and sanctioned by Christian votes.

The saloon keepers might plead that they came from foreign lands, and had been brought up to look upon the business as legitimate, proper and right, and an honest means of making a livelihood, and that they obtained their permission to conduct the business of rum selling through Christian votes.

But what could Christian Democrats and Republicans who vote for license plead? Could they plead that "Prohibition did not exhibit?" Or, "We believed in Prohibition, but thought the time had not come to vote for it?"

As many, or more men are lost every year through the rum traffic which Christian men sanction by their votes as they save by their prayers. The great multitude of young men swarm in and about doubtful places demoralized by influences flowing from the open saloon. These are facts well known to Christian men, and they are moved thereby, and they pray long and loud and ask God to wipe out this terrible business, and stop the tide of drunkenness which sweeps thousands down to death. And yet while the glow of sanctimonious terror bathes their brows, and Christian intelligence beams from their eyes, they crowd the ballot box with Democratic and Republican license votes. Will the judge of all the earth say to the drunkards "Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels;" and then turn to the Christian license voters and say "Come, ye blessed of my Father inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Comrades to the rescue, work and pray for our homes and children.

Drunkenness is the greatest evil in the world.

KINGSTON TRACT!

MAGNIFICENT FRUIT LAND AT $100 PER ACRE, WITH WATER RIGHT.

The Kingston Tract is part of the famous Jurupa Ranch in San Bernardino county, and lies just north of the Santa Ana River, midway between Riverside and Chino.

The world-wide reputation of this section for orange growing needs no puffing, and parties in search of citrus land at bottom prices will not hesitate to buy in this Tract when once they see the land and surroundings.

The soil is a rich sandy loam, easily worked, and of a similar character to Riverside, the elevation being about the same.

The Chino factory is within easy distance—about six miles in a direct line. Parties will find some of this land well adapted for raising sugar beets.

Two inches of water will be deeded to every ten acres of land and an interest of a like proportion in the fifteen-mile Irrigation Canal.

We are prepared to contract to set out land for non-residents and take care of it for three years at a small extra charge, so that persons now in business or otherwise occupied can reap the advantages of a growing orchard without the toil of tending the ranch themselves and know exactly what will be the cost.

First cost of land, at present price per acre.....$100.00
 80 orange trees, 2-year-old, budded, $60.00

Putting out and care for first year, $25.00

Care of orchard second year, $12.50
 " " " third " $12.50

Actual cost of land in three years, set out with five-year-old trees, per acre.....$210.00

The price, now, is $100 per acre but this low figure will only hold good for a short time as the Tract is rapidly being sold.

The terms are very liberal: One-half cash, balance in 10 years at 6% interest; or if purchasers prefer paying all cash 5% discount will be allowed on deferred payments.

Clubs or Colonies buying eighty acres or more will have special inducements and terms offered.

The Pomona and Elsinore Railroad is graded across the Kingston Tract, and will doubtless be in operation by the time the crops are ready for shipping.

INDUSTRIAL.

MOTTO.—The reward of industry is not a one in current coin, but also in an approved conscience.

In the Lead.

N. R. Salsbury, vice-president of Porter Bros., Co., the well-known produce commission firm of N. Y., said in a recent interview, "The dried fruit product from California is making rapid inroads into the foreign article, and in a few years will have the world for a market. California prunes even today are bringing a higher price than the French, because they exceed them in quality, while California raisins have taken the lead with the trade to this extent, that fully 75 per cent of raisins consumed in the U. S. this season so far have been California stock."

Although the heavy crops of all kinds of fruits throughout the East during the past season forced the products of this State to find new markets and make new conquests, yet our fruits held their own in competition with the whole country in an unusually productive year. Mr. Salsbury says, "The people in the East have become convinced of the superior keeping qualities of California fruits over others. This has been shown by the prices realized. Take, for instance peaches; in the height of the season we were getting sixty, seventy and eighty cents per box of twenty pounds for that fruit in this market, while the Eastern stock was selling at from twenty-five to fifty cents per basket, for double the quantity; and while the prices realized for California peaches, pears and plums were not remunerative to the grower or shipper the fact has been demonstrated that California can and will compete with the Eastern States when the domestic crop is heavy; and when your home crops are light, California will always reap a harvest by being able to supply the finest quality of fruits and in unlimited quantities."

Sad but True.

Many of our so-called nurserymen in California are dishonest with themselves and the public retarding the progress of our State. Being too lazy or non-enterprising to grow their nursery stock, they persist in jeopardizing the great fruit industry of California by importing trees from eastern points where they can be procured the cheapest, regardless of plum curculio, root and black knot, yellows, scale or other pests. Such dealers should be suppressed as public nuisances. We have a number of reliable nursery firms in this State, who grow their own stock, keep it clean and it can be depended upon. Why cannot people patronize such firms and let the parasitic nurserymen keep their dangerous stock.

Good and Cheap.

Come Friday the 5th, to the Evergreen Ranch and buy fresh pork ribs, shoulders, hams or any parts of our corn fed young hogs. J. A. Packard.

A little boy upon going into the house was asked by his mother, do you see the butcher anywhere? replied, no I don't see him, but I can hear him. I don't think he's more than a mile away. The mother at once got her pan and on going to the door saw the Chino meat wagon halted in front of the house, and the driver standing on the ground had just finished, "here's your butcher."

Geo. Ulery, wife and son left Tuesday for their old home at Cerro Gordo Ills. We understand George intends to try agriculture awhile on his own farm. We regret to lose this family, and have only three things against him. 1. For not remaining. 2. For being such a good citizen while here. 3. For not coming back sooner than they contemplate. But then they have tasted and smelled and seen of this goodly land and these will draw on them until they again yield and return.

On last Saturday Santa Fe overland there arrived S. O. Larkins, wife and two children, from Blair, Nebr., and Miss Minnie Nofziger, sister of Prof. Nofziger of the college, from Mascot, Neb. We were glad to see these old friends, and hope the things of this country may be to them a savor of pleasure, because they certainly can admire the beautiful. Thus it is while three go away five have just come, proving the adage, man is a movable being, and while not like the sparks which fly upward, he does swiftly move hitherward and thitherward, and findeth rest for a little season.

Library Association.

At a meeting held in the college chapel the evening of Febr. 1st the committee on constitution and by-laws reported and after several amendments were made the report was adopted and the following named directors chosen: S. A. Overholtzer, T. J. Nair, M. M. Eshelman, J. S. Flory, and Geo. L. McDonough.

A report of the finances was made by Prof. Nofziger, showing contribution to the amount of $102 and a number of books donated and a Cyclopaedia Britannica and a set of biographies and Websters International Dictionary purchased.

T. J. Nair reported that a case for books had been made and the books put therein.

A good collection of books have already been made among which we note: The Encyclopedia Britannica, Appleton's Cyclopaedia of American Biography, Twenty years in Congress by Blaine, The History of Two Americans, Panorama of Nations, The Polar Tropical Worlds, Life and Labor of Spurgeon, Zells encyclopedia, and nearly one hundred other works.

This library is a public one; it is open to all and not a college affair though the constitution requires it to be kept in the college, but it is owned by a corporation outside of the college. The citizens of this place, we trust, will take a lively interest in this new enterprise, for like every other good thing, it must add to the wealth and prosperity of the place.

Israel at Work.

MOTTO.—Not dull sloth but earnest activity, is the Christian's high privilege through Christ our Lord.

Something for Old Age.

A preacher who has spent a great deal of time and money in preaching the gospel writes: "It is clear to my mind that I must engage in something outside of preaching in order to lay up something for old age."

The writer of the above is a strong man ministerially and a worker of no mean measure; but he finds that it is almost equal to "stripes and imprisonments" to carry the burden of the ministry and seek out and deliver "the bread of life" to the saint and sinner at the same time. The temporal welfare of the faithful preacher and his family is just as dear and brings just as deep concern to him as it does to him who ministereth not in holy things. It is a shame to any people to continually take and give so scantily. Until the principles of the gospel and the apostolic practice is fully observed in the matter of supplying the needs of preachers, there must be some of the best workers shelved—set to seeking food and raiment for their families, and the work of the ministry crippled. It shows how strong a hold money has upon the people when they withhold it from faithful pastors who can feed them the bread of life.

Wheat is useful and necessary, but what good is it without mills and ovens and grinders and bakers? Few people seem to realize that the preacher is a veritable grinder and baker of the word of life; and just as it is necessary to have men to grind the wheat and bake the meal into good, fresh loaves, so it is needful to have ministers who can put the word of life together to edification of the one body in Christ. It takes money to run mills and ovens; so it does to put the gospel of Jesus into palatable condition. To deny this is to deny the gospel and a well-known principle in both nature and grace.—E.

Many of the pagan mythologies and cosmogonies exhibit points of striking coincidence with portions of the Christian revelation. Even the scheme of Buddha sounds, here and there, although much older, like a far off legend of the gospel story. Whoever will trace these coincidences to their real sources will do a wonderful work for the Christian religion.

As all rivers are composed of the same element so all sins are fundamentally the same; and this fundamental or all-embracing sin is selfishness. Particular sins are but tributaries; selfishness is the great Mississippi in which their turbid waters all blend and flow in a common channel.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The Value of Lemons.

A writer who seeks to mitigate the suffering caused by excessively hot weather by describing how to make simple and cooling drinks suitable for the summer season, incidentally pays a tribute to the great virtue of the lemon, and a medical authority has promptly written a letter confirming this commendation of the cooling fruit, and urging its more frequent use in lieu of strong medicines, which often do more harm than good. He says that, although more people know the value of a glass of lemonade before breakfast, few know that the benefit is more than doubled by taking another at night also. A better way to fight a bilious attack than powders or quinine is to take the juice of one, two or three lemons in as much water as will make it pleasant to drink without sugar, before going to bed. In the morning on rising, at least half an hour before breakfast, take the juice of one lemon in a tumbler of ordinary or soda water.—Ex.

The following amusing story is told of a chap living in or near the relics of what was once the kicking little town of Hillsboro. He was in the Union depot at St. Louis and wanted to go to Chicago. He made a mistake and took the Wabash train instead of the Yandaha. When the conductor came around to collect tickets he informed the man that he was on the wrong train, and to get off at the first stopping place and wait for the next train that came along. The guy again made a mistake and got on the C. & A. train. The conductor on this train also informed the man that he was wrong and would have to get off. By this time the guy was greatly excited but finally got on the Van. He sat alongside of a clergyman and was swearing at a lively rate, when the preacher solemnly remarked: "Young man, dont you know you're on the way to h—?" "Hold on there! hold on there!" shouted the guy excitedly. "Pull that bell rope! D——if I ain't on the wrong train again!"—Fsstus Index.

If a doctor makes a mistake, he buries it; if a merchant makes a mistake he never tells it; if a lawyer makes a mistake he crawls out of it; but if an editor makes a mistake, he puts it on a large sheet of paper for the world to look at, and in every community there are cranes who think they are the models of wisdom, who occasionally discover them and for a week keep their jaws wagging about their greatness for astute wisdom.—Pe ri New Era.

A fat woman entered a crowded car and, seizing the strap, stood on a gentleman's toes. As soon as he could extricate himself he arose and offered her his seat. "You are very kind, sir," she replied. "Not at all, madam, he replied; it's not kindness, it's self-defense."—Comic.
