Dear Mr. Pitassi:

One of your windows is now being installed and looks very good, but you have made a very bad error at one place.

In one of the medallion you have two figures and thru an error have painted the feet of one of the figures entirely out of proportion. The sketch enclosed herewith will show you in a general way how it appears.

I regret very much that this should have appeared in one of your first windows because they will receive more than usual attention and you will be subject to criticism.

Please let me know how this error can be remedied and whether or not it will be best to send the panel back or if you can send the glass to be used in same for the correction?

Yours very truly,

David Clark,

Dear Mr. Pittsall:

One of your windows is now being installed
and looks very good, but you have made a very bad error
at one place.

In one of the medallions you have two figures and then an error have painted the last of one of the figures entirely out of proportion. The sketch enclosed herewith will show you in a general way how it appears.

I regret very much that this would have appeared in one of your first windows because they will receive more than usual attention and you will be subject to criticism.

Please let me know how this error can be corrected and whether or not it will be best to send the panel back or if you can send the glass to be used in same for the correction?

Yours very truly,

David Clark,
