

Coming Soon to the Spungen Family Foundation Holocaust & Genocide Postal Collection

Liliane Kalima (Kizito's daughter) with Restuda Mukamugarura's Rwanda ID Pass. September 3, 2025.

Restuda Mukamugarura (circled in red by Kizito) with neighbors. Kizito's sister, Monique, is two to the right from Restuda in the yellow top. January 2020.

Restuda Mukamugarura and Kizito Kalima graciously donated Restuda's Rwandan ID card from the 1994 Rwandan Genocide to the Spungen Family Foundation artifact collection.

Restuda, a Tutsi, was born in 1952 and was living in a village named Gasoro in Nyanza City when the genocide began. She was married to another Tutsi man, who changed his tribe and became Hutu, which allowed both of them to have identifications marking them as Hutu. During the genocide, Restuda hid among the Hutu in her village.

Restuda's father, Vincent Simugomwa was the younger brother to Kizito's paternal grandmother, Leocadie Nyirabihogo.

The Spungen Family Foundation thanks Kizito and Restuda for their gracious donation of Restuda's Rwandan ID card.

Coming Soon to the Spungen Family Foundation Holocaust & Genocide Postal Collection

Liliane Kalima (Kizito's daughter) with Restuda Mukamugarura's Rwanda ID Pass. September 3, 2025.

Restuda Mukamugarura (circled in red by Kizito) with neighbors. Kizito's sister, Monique, is two to the right from Restuda in the yellow top. January 2020.

Restuda Mukamugarura and Kizito Kalima graciously donated Restuda's Rwandan ID card from the 1994 Rwandan Genocide to the Spungen Family Foundation artifact collection.

Restuda, a Tutsi, was born in 1952 and was living in a village named Gasoro in Nyanza City when the genocide began. She was married to another Tutsi man, who changed his tribe and became Hutu, which allowed both of them to have identifications marking them as Hutu. During the genocide, Restuda hid among the Hutu in her village.

Restuda's father, Vincent Simugomwa was the younger brother to Kizito's paternal grandmother, Leocadie Nyirabihogo.

The Spungen Family Foundation thanks Kizito and Restuda for their gracious donation of Restuda's Rwandan ID card.