

Beginning in April 1943, a generic formular prisoners' lettercard appeared, printed on flimsy paper for use in every concentration camp, with rules applicable to all that permitted two letters or cards per month to and from each prisoner. The printer's notation at the lower left, "KL/75/4.43 5.000.000," indicates a total quantity of five million for a single press order, which gives an indication of the enormous number of inmates held captive in camps by then.
