

FROM THE TWO YARDLINE

By Joe Jones

Are West Coast colleges and universities progressively stealing the prestige of the traditionally high-ranked football powers of the Big Ten?

From the two yard line, it looks as though this is obviously what is happening - Washington erased many stereotype notions that the top teams of the Big Ten are indispensable, by successively whipping Wisconsin and Minnesota in the '60 and '61 Rose Bowl Games.

The subject of the Big Ten, in regards to its declining position on the ladder of prestige has been a matter of conjecture since the '60 and '61 Rose Bowl games, and even before that time.

Are the West Coast Conferences playing better football now as compared to the Big Ten; or have Western schools taken a peek at the 'ace-in-the-hole card' of the Big Ten's plan of strategy?

It would be ridiculous to try to generalize or attribute the success of the Big Six against the Big Ten competition to either of the fore-mentioned reasons exclusively, without considering other pertinent variables.

We are inclined to consider each contest separately. The sum total of following criteria plus a few others determines the final outcome in each contest.

This writer implied in a previous article the tremendous importance of mental attitude before and during the game, this variable along with conditioning of players, thoroughness of scouting reports, injuries, depth, team speed and size are other ingredients that account for success or failure. Circumstance determines the relative importance of each.

Using the above criteria as tools of comparison, this writer will stick his wounded neck out again - by calling Washington a one touchdown favorite to beat Oregon State.

Garfield Squeaked Ballard

14 - 13 IN FINAL SECONDS

By CARVER GAYTON

Very seldom in Seattle School football, has a team come from two touchdowns behind at half-time to win the game. But Garfield has been known to make her own precedents.

The Bulldogs showed the traditional Garfield determination and spirit even though the odds seemed against them throughout the game until the final minutes of play.

Fumbled footballs and broken signals, plagued the pups all the way from the opening kick-off through the third quarter.

Suddenly with five minutes remaining in the game and the Beavers ahead 13-0, the Bulldogs seemed to realize time was running out. Ernie Holmes (who chalked up 101 yards in the contest) began running for long yardage. Mike Cadigans passes and Desire and Determination are the deciding factors that go into most any success story. This applies to Garfield's fine football team. You say they are not a success yet? Well, only two games have been played - they've won two games - Garfield (19) and Cleveland (0); Garfield (14) and Ballard (13). You can't win any more than that in two games.

The Garfield High School defensive unit is the finest in our Metro League (So Far). The Bulldogs 4-4-3 defense consists of the Stalwart Four - Joe Foxx, Don Fleeks, Jerry Reirich and John West, the four front men. Four linebackers and three back men make up the Stalwart Four and Company who held Ballard to 96 yards rushing and 7 yards in the air. This comparable to Ernie Holmes 101 yards rushing and he also caught a touchdown pass from 5 yards out.

Ballard was leading 13-0 late in the fourth quarter. Garfield's student body was screaming and shouting with as much confidence as they did at the opening kick-off. The adult section was as confident as if the Bulldogs had the ball. Garfield was on Ballard's one inch line with four downs to score. This is something wonderful and rare.

If the Bulldogs decide to use any more of their garbage plays, they should check to see if they have their own garbage man. The one last week must have been a spy from Ballard. Two garbage plays, two Ballard touchdowns. Well, sometimes they work and sometimes ... and sometimes they cost you. Discretion is a good tool.

In short, the Ballard-Garfield football game was a delightful one. Full of desire and determination. In other words (Dat game was a Dooziel) roll-out runs gathered up more real estate.

The first Bulldog score was a five yard pass from Cadigan to Holmes. The extra point was a pass from Cadigan to Lonnie Norris. With the clock showing only three minutes to play, Garfield kicked off and Gaertha Morgan recovered the ball on Ballard's 35 yard line. A few plays later Randy Garrett plunged from the one yard line for the second tally. The extra point was a circus, one handed catch of a pass thrown to Paul Miyahara from Cadigan. With one-minute remaining Ballard tried a few desperation plays to no avail.

During the process of the game four Ballard players were literally carried from the game. This was clear evidence of how hard the Bulldogs were hitting throughout the contest. Jerry Reirich and Joe Fona were a couple of men on the front wall delivering many of those devastating blows.

This was a great game from the standpoint of thrills and action, however, it is also the type of game which adds gray hairs and makes the ulcers act up.

Garfield plays the Queen Anne Grizzlies, Friday night, Oct. 12 at 8 p.m. at Sealth Stadium.

YMCA News

Downtown Seattle YMCA Physical Director Jack Joseph has been named Director of Physical Education and Teen-Age Program for the Greater Seattle Y.

The announcement was made today by W. Walter Williams, Y Board President.

"In this new Y post, Joseph will coordinate all the YMCA teen-age programs throughout Greater Seattle and will also work with community leaders in helping to solve our growing juvenile delinquency problem," Williams said. "He will also supervise the growing YMCA physical education program in the community."

"During recent years, the Greater Seattle Y has made a re-evaluation of the community's needs and the areas where it can be of assistance. Because the teen-age group's complexity has created so many new problems, we feel this is where the Y can best serve with greater emphasis," he added.

Joseph, a three-sport letterwinner in high school, is a graduate of Greenville (Ill.) College and is currently working on a masters degree in physical education at the University of Washington.

He began his YMCA career in 1948 when he was named assistant physical director for the Downtown St. Louis Y. Since then, he has served as physical director of the St. Louis Southside Branch, the Colorado Springs Y, and the Downtown Seattle Branch.

Joseph took over the Seattle post in 1958.

WASHINGTON 41 - KANSAS STATE 0

Washington, in running up a horribly one-sided victory over Kansas State, 41-0, was able to stick to basic plays and substitute freely all afternoon. The major concentration on basic plays and formations indicates a strong awareness of the tough games ahead. The Huskies will have to integrate some deception into its basic repertoire of plays; pass consistently as they did against Kansas, get the same support from the bench, and set effective defenses for the awesome Terry Baker in order to beat a strong Oregon State eleven in Oregon this Saturday.
