YOUTH THAT'S BORED

By Howard Pualain

July 5, 1978 Yakima, Washington

John Rich, 17, of Moxee, Washington, is planning to leave family and community and move to Florida, where the action is, and 15 of his friends plan to leave about the same time and meet up again between here and sunny Florida. The friends, find Yakima too boring to live there any longer so all plan to find rock concerts and happiness somewhere else. At the time of this interview John Rich said he would not leave the area before this article is published.

For the past year John has been working as a tree thinner and tree planter for the department of natural resources located at Nacele-Youth camp, which is sixty miles from Longview, Wash.

He and his friends find Yakima too boring with nothing happening and want to go where some action is. They have been planning this adventure for about 2-4 weeks and plan on traveling to Vegas, California, Chicago and New York and Texas. And then come back around October. They plan to leave Yakima together and once out of Washington, to separate and travel in pairs hitchhiking due east and then turning south. The present idea is to jump on a train going out of state. Chicago and New York would be first on the list and then on to Florida. In Florida, John and three other guys and two girls will try to start a band.

This is not a singles group in any way. This troupe consists of eight couples with ages ranging from 14 to 22.

For money the plan is to stop in towns, stay and work a week or so and then travel on. For clothes John plans to take the clothes he has which consist of four pairs of pants and etc.

The basic reason everybody wants to get out of Yakima is to see things, and do things that they have never done before. It's not the family harmony that is causing the unrest, it is that Yakima is too small a town. John says "If it had concerts, that would be something to do, and movies that are decent. Rock concerts would reduce the boredom. That's about it."

This news writer hopes John and his friends stay in Yakima and work to get outdoor entertainment in the parks and school campuses. Perhaps the Mayor's Youth Task Force, (which was created to allow the city's youth of high school age a method of having input into the city government and to give city government a mechanism to better understand the opinions of the city's youth), would be the way to go.

The Missionary Resource Center

a new facility for the community to turn to in time of need or stress is located at 306 E. Adams St. next to the Nu-Way Cleaners. The mission is headed by Mrs. Elberth Trotter, a known community worker. For over a year church services have been held in the downstairs portion and soon the upstairs will be completed. The finishing touches of both the inside and the outside are being applied.

The mission is not competing with churches and encourages people to come for counseling when they have need for a friend. It will be open from 1 to 5 daily and regular services on Sunday. Mrs. Trotter considered the outreach stations motto is, "If you're in need call because the mission is the house that sits beside the road".

In the new facility upstairs there is a Gospel record shop and soon the snack bar will be opening up.

This mission is the outreach of Church of God in Christ, which has it's national headquarters in Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. Trotter said, "I feel the concern for young people. Once a month we plan to have a meal which will be offered to those who want a family atmosphere. Our mission is a sister or cousin to the church and we accept donations."

She has worked the juvenile department in Seattle and is a registered nurse. She attended Seattle University and earned a degree in Theology and in Business Administration. She has also completed courses in food service and administration. She has been a licensed missionary since 1956 and was appointed by her church in 1968 as a state supervisor. She served with the late Bishop D. H. Griggs.

At present Mrs. Trotter is assistant director of the Southeast Community center and along with her numerous duties she is in charge of the summer food and nutrition program. She says, "Approximately 75 to 100 children a day are fed here at the center 3 times a day. This program has been going on for about 4 years. It is sponsored by the United States Department of Agriculture to help children keep a balanced nutrition during the summer months."
