Every year, thousands of Washington students are excluded from school.

Students of color, low-income students, and special education students are disciplined at higher rates than other students.

This leads to students repeating grades, dropping out, and ending up stuck in the school-to-prison pipeline.

Black students are more than three times as likely to get suspended or expelled as their white peers.

THIS HAS TO CHANGE.

And during the 2013 legislative session, we worked to pass a law as the first step in transforming school discipline. Now it's time to take another.

The state is inviting public comment on its implementation of the new law, and we need your voice to make sure the new law works.

Join the League of Education Voters for a series of webinars on the new discipline law, what you can do, and what transformed school discipline actually looks like. Our next webinar is on April 15 at 12:30 p.m.
