93,000 More Summer Youth Jobs Available

More than 93,000 additional summer jobs for economically disadvantaged youth were made available by an allocation of $63 million to states and local governments across the nation.

Included in this total is $2.2 million to be shared by state and local governments in the Northwest states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Alaska.

The funds are in addition to $730 million announced in February, which created an estimated 1,072,000 employment opportunities nationwide.

The $63 million is part of the Fiscal 1978 Urgent Supplemental Appropriation (PL 95-284) signed by President Carter May 21, and is intended to bring the total number of summer jobs this year to 1,165,000.

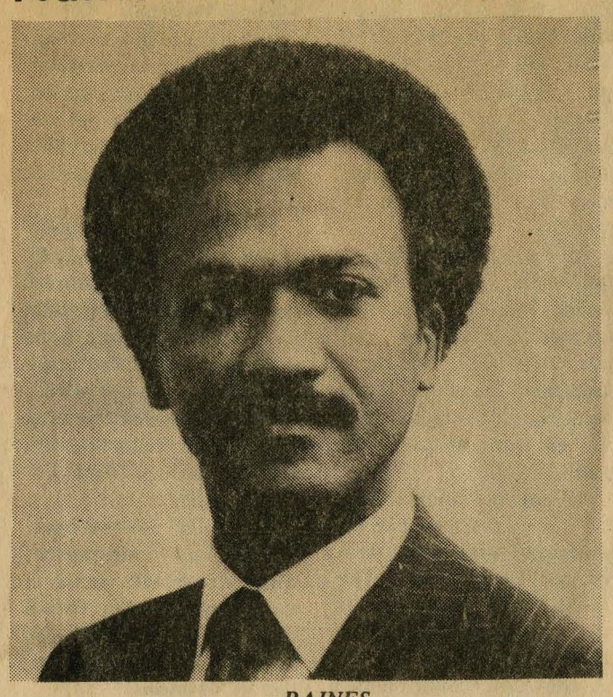

Distribution of the additional funds will commence immediately in order that state and local governmental units serving as prime sponsors under the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA) can hire the extra young people in the shortest possible time.

The Summer Program for Economically Disadvantaged Youth (SPEDY) employs young people, 14 through 21, for approximately nine weeks, at an average of 26 hours a week. Participants are paid the minimum wage.

The young workers have jobs in a variety of community projects, serving as recreation leaders, museum aides, lifeguards, clerk-typists, maintenance helpers, and laboratory technicians. The intention is to give them work experience that will prepare them for future employment and also meet their financial needs.

SPEDY is one of several youth employment and training programs administered by the Office of Youth Programs of the Employment and Training Administration.

Congressional Black Caucus Denounces Cold War in Africa

Washington, D.C.--We are seriously concerned about the recent developments on the continent of Africa and with the dramatic shift which appears to have taken place in the Carter Administration's Africa policy. Our concern arises from recent Administration attempts to reintroduce an East-West confrontation over the invasion of the Shaba province of Zaire, despite an initial commitment by President Carter to end a cold war-oriented policy on the African continent.

We hope that the Administration will not overreact in this particular instance, since knowledgeable observers of the region have long recognized the multitude of causes to which the Katangese rebels have lent their support as well as the diverse sources of assistance for their grievances.

It is our firm conviction that, as long as local political solutions are not found, conditions in that region will lend themselves to the intervention of outside forces. The crisis in Zaire should not permit the Administration to divert its attention from two issues of paramount importance to Africa--first, the search for a rapid and just solution to the problem of white minority rule in Zimbabwe, Namibia and South Africa, and second, the quest for economic development and national integration.

At the same time, we should note that tactics recently employed by the European powers in the Zaire crisis are reminiscent of colonial and neo-colonial ventures. They could set a dangerous precedent for future conflict resolution on the continent of Africa and, in particular, in Southern Africa.

Moreover, the promotion of a European sponsored and backed military force in Africa is potentially divisive and, in our opinion, should not be undertaken without a specific request from the Organization of African Unity (OAU).

We reaffirm our belief that U.S. policy toward Africa should be based on mutual respect, recognition of the rights of self-determination for all African peoples, and support for those peoples seeking majority rule. We are convinced that increased economic and technical assistance provides the best means for assuring constructive and lasting relations between the United States and the nations of Africa.

In light of these beliefs, our concern is that a permanent solution be found to the causes of regional instability which led to the crisis in Zaire. Any OAU-endorsed peace-keeping force should be seen as a temporary solution. Just as international financial institutions have imposed certain requirements for loans to the government of Zaire, we urge the Administration to give similar consideration to the requirements that: The government of Zaire reach a just solution to internal ethnic divisions, further economic assistance be utilized toward a resolution of the pressing national development problems which that nation faces, and that Zaire develop its own defense capability.

In addition, we urge the Administration to take steps toward the recognition of the People's Republic of Angola and to promote talks between the government of that nation and the government of Zaire toward achieving mutual respect for territorial integrity.

We would hope that both nations could be assisted in efforts to address the causes of the recent invasion of the Shaba province, particularly through international efforts directed at the rehabilitation of refugees and displaced persons in both countries.

CAMP and 'The Age of Power'

Last Wednesday, David Russell, a muralist, painter, film-maker and a CETA artist in the city, presented a painting depicting a scene from ancient African History, "The Age of Power", to the Central Area Citizens Committee (CAMP's governing body) and Eddie Rye, Jr., CAMP's executive director. Russell (far left) presents the paiting to Rye and Carolyn Thompson, director of CAMP's Special Projects. How did all this come about? CRC Wants Your Comments

The Citizen's Rate Committee (CRC) is looking for comments from the public about electric rate relief.

The Committee's next meeting will be Thursday, June 22 at 7:30 pm in the third floor conference room of the Group Health Building, 1600 E. John.

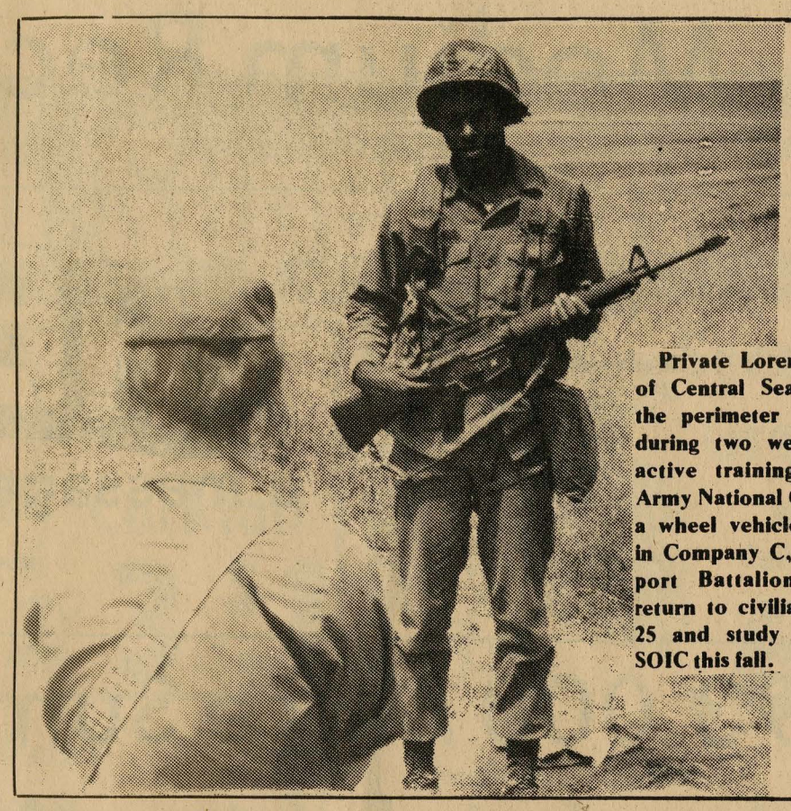

Mayor Charles Royer appointed the CRC to examine all aspects of Seattle's electrical rates. The Committee's report to the City Council will be considered before the next rate ordinance is adopted.

"We want to discuss which groups of people should be given a break in their electrical bills," said Dr. Victor Cook, CRC Chairman. "Should relief be extended to all low income people? To the handicapped? To senior citizens?"

Cook added that the form of rate relief is also an issue. Suggestions have included discounts of fixed amounts, percentage reductions, eliminating fixed charges on electricity bills and energy stamps which would be comparable to food stamps.

At last week's meeting, a number of issues involving rate relief were discussed from the viewpoints of the Office of Policy Planning, Seattle City Light and members of the committee.

The CRC is particularly interested in hearing from those who feed they have information which otherwise may not be brought to its attention.

-A SHORT DOCUMENTARY-

Proceeds from this benefit performance will provide financial aid for minority students, and support the Institutes various programs aimed at increasing minority representation in the legal profession. Tickets are $10. All donations cheerfully accepted.

The Minority Legal Institute is committed to increasing the number of minority attorneys admitted to the bar of the state of Washington. Only one percent of Washington's attorneys are minorities, yet minorities comprise 17 percent of the state's population.

The task of remeding the underrepresentation of minorities in the legal profession is a complex undertaking requiring many different well planned approaches.

New methods must be devised to stimulate minority youth to pursue legal careers. The Institute's reform and tutorial projects have already begun to have an impact on state bar admissions.

The underrepresentation of minorities in the legal profession is still of crisis proportions. According to a recently published survey: there are over 8,000 lawyers in the state of Washington.

Sixty-one of those are Asian-American, forty-six are African-American, and seven are Hispanic. This means that one out of every 14,800 Spanish-speaking people in this state is an attorney, there is one Black lawyer for every 2,200 Black people in Washington and one Asian-American lawyer for every 1,500 Asian citizens.

While on the average, overall, there is one lawyer for every 460 people in Washington. It has been estimated that there is one Native-American attorney for every 40,000 Native-Americans.

Of the 4,300 attorneys who have become licensed since 1970, 1 percent have been Black; 8 percent are Asian-American; 2 percent are Spanish-surnamed and 1 percent are Native-American.

Please help change this trend. Share "Freedom Weekend" with the Minority Legal Institute.

NBL Washington Briefing Calls for Capacity Building in Minority Private Sector

The National Business League's Fourth Annual Washington Briefing issued a call for a more equitable distribution of federal resources to minority institutions. Following briefings by White House and Cabinet officials, briefing participants sought a public commitment in support of minority private sector development as a means of reducing economic dependency on public sector welfare programs.

According to NBL President Dr. Berkeley G. Burrell, the purpose of the Washington Briefing was to "seek a public commitment for a more equitable distribution of federal resources to minority institutions to build and expand their institutional capacity in the minority private sector."

Representatives of the nation's minority business, profesisonal and educational institutions formed a standing-room-only crowd in the Secretary's Conference Room at the Department of Commerce for this intensive one day meeting on June 7.

Briefing participants included Dr. F.D. Patterson, founder of the United Negro College Fund and past President of NBL; Charles Gomez, President, National Economic Development Association (NEDA); Floyd McKissick, President, Soul City Development Corp., Soul City, N.C.; Herman P. Starks, Chairman, National Black Caucus of Local Elected Officials; Wright L. Lassiter, Jr., Vice President for Business and Finance, Morgan State University; Thomas Kilgore, Jr., Senior Pastor - National President, Progressive National Baptist Convention, Inc., Los Angeles, Ca.; Richard Glover, Jr., Director of Training & Staff Development, University of Pennsylvania and Reynard Rochon, Chief Fiscal Administrator, New Orleans, La.

Carter Administration officials briefed the gathering on the policies, budgets and program implementation mechanisms of their respective agencies. The key administration officials who addressed the meeting were: The Honorable Stuart E. Eizenstat, Assistant to the President; the Honorable Sidney Harman, Under Secretary of Commerce; the Honorable W. Bowman Cutter, Deputy Director, Office of Management and Budget; the Honorable Mary Berry, Assistant Secretary of HEW: and the Honorable Ernest Green, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

Citing the President's advocacy of a partnership between the public and private sectors as the most effective means of attacking and solving domestic economic concerns, briefing participants urged the recognition of the minority private sector as an integral part of the partnership.

However, briefing participants voiced concern over the "lack of mutual respect" demonstrated by the noticeable absence of top level Cabinet officials who had been invited; it was pointed out that without such mutual respect, the President's "working partnership" could not be achieved.

As Chairman of the National Council for Policy Review, Dr. Burrell set the tone for the Briefing by issuing the following statement:

"Historically, public sector resources have been used to stimulate economic activity in the private sector, thus moving people out of the public sector and into the private. This is called capacity building. And it is achieved through an investment of federal resources. This process occurs everywhere except in the minority private sector.

By utilizing federal resources to build capacity, we move more minorities out of the public sector by contributing a larger proportion of the jobs, wages, taxes, personal income and other proportion of the jobs, wages, taxes, personal income and other economic elements essential to a thriving Gross National Product.

The theme of this Briefing, "Strengthening the Partnership Requires Building Capacity in the Minority Private Sector" accuratgely characterized our objective. There is a need to educate the public and the government regarding the existence, activities, capabilites, interests and composition of the minority private sector.

Few policy makers acknowledge its existence.

Youth in Need of Employment

Summertime means "youth in need of employment". The Community Institute is a youth serving agency that gives their full support in meeting that very demand. Demand means having to compete with other youths, many times for the same wanted position.

The Community Institute offers youth an even break to secure a job placement. Qualified counselors will train young persons in resume writing, filling out job applications, and give guidance into careers of your choice.

If you reside in the Garfield area, Mercer Street to the North, I-5 to the West, Irving, to the South, and Lake Washington to the East and between 14 and 19 then contact:

'All About The Employment Standards' Booklet

The answers to some questions about employment practices can be found in a new eight-page booklet entitled "All About the Employment Standards Administration," published by the Labor Department.

The Employment Standards Administration enforces laws and regulations that protect employees from a variety of unfair employment practices through three component offices: the Office of Federal Contract Compliance Programs, the Office of Workers' Compensation Programs, and the Wage and Hour Division.

The booklet gives a broad but informative overview of the programs administered by these offices. For a copy, contact the Employment Standards Administration, Office of Information and Consumer Affairs, Room C-4331, Department of Labor, Washington, D.C. 20210.

ABOUT YOUR HEALTH

New Discoveries May Help Solve Arthritis Problems

Recent discoveries may lead to superior drugs for combatting the pain and inflammation of arthritis, medical researchers report.

Substances in cells called prostaglandins were recently discovered to play a major role in inflammation, some speeding up the process and some slowing it down, a research team from the New York School of Medicine announced recently.

The new information was gained through experiments in the United States, Sweden andGreat Britain through investigating the reasons that aspirin and corticosteroid drugs relieve pain and inflammation in arthritis, the doctors said.

"We now understand how both aspirin and the steroids reduce inflammation by inhibiting prostaglandin production," said Dr. Gerald Weissmann. "Further, we have identified the additional impact of the steroids on other elements of the inflammatory process."

Corticosteroids are often effective but are prescribed sparingly because its use can leave a patient virtually defenseless against the lethal effects of an infection, the doctors said. They hope to develop a new drug which can block prostaglandin production without the ill side effects.

Vaccine Found To Be Effective

A vaccine which could be use to combat an epidemic-producing type of meningitis has been found to be effective in protecting infants from this life-threatening disease.

A study conducted during a recent epidemic in Finland of the Group A form of meninggococcal meningitis has demonstrated that children as young as three months old remained free of the disease in the year following the vaccination.

The Finnish results, reported recently, were hailed by American health officials as a major step toward control of a devastating disease of worldwide magnitude.

"This is the first time a meningitis vaccine has been reported to protect children as young as three months - the age group at high risk for all types of bacterial meningitis. The results of the study may lead to the further development of other meningitis vaccines effective in the very young," said Dr. Richard M. Krause, director of the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases, which helped fund the Finnish study.

Bacterial meningitis cause a serious inflammation of the membranes surrounding the brain and spinal cord, leading to neurological damage and sometimes death. It usually starts with a sudden high fever, headache, stiffness and pain in the upper body, as well as a rash, although symptoms in infants are less specific.

Wallace Drayton: A Very Busy Man

He is a very busy man.

Wallace Drayton is a many faceted person. One facet of Wallace is that he is a member of the Board of Mann, Minor/Madrona Housing Rehabilitation Program. His position on the Board is that of president. He functions as a guide to the board, in their pursuit to establish policies for the Program.

Wallace L. Drayton

As MMMNHRP was beginning to form into a service program, Wallace volunteered his time. This was during the fall of 1976. When asked why he wanted to be a part of this program, he said, "It is always nice to be able to start something. Also he was concerned about the neighborhood and wanted to see it change into a quality area for the residents to enjoy.

Wallace is concerned that the program hasn't done more within the community. He believes one approach to a more effective marketing program would be a Block by Block Plan.

In implementing this plan the program would canvass the target block, hold block meetings, have block parties, and work on homes all in the same block.

This approach would be beneficial to the contractors. The economy of location for all people working on the project would be used to speed up the whole rehab process.

The final benefit is the publicity that results with a whole block of homes that have been rehabed.

Another facet of the many facets of Wallace, is his support of Youth Activities (Coach, Senior Little League), activities on several other community boards, avid supporter of Cherry Hill Coalition, as well as full-time position at Washington Federal Savings & Loan Bank. He is assistant Vice-President and Commercial Loan Officier.

MMMNHRP is pleased to have Wallace Drayton as an active member of the program. His expertise is invaluable to the progress of the rehabilitation of the Mann, Minor/Madrona target area.

Nancy Wilson, Duke Ellington Orchestra To Appear in Benefit Concert

Washington, DC--Nancy Wilson and the Duke Ellington Orchestra will highlight opening day of the 65th annual convention of the National Dental Association (NDA) on July 30, in Washington, DC.

The occasion will be a gala benefit concert at the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, with proceeds going to the NDA Scholarship Fund for needy dental students.

According to NDA President, Dr. Walter Tucker, "One of the top priorities of the NDA is the expansion of opportunities for needy minority students and other disadvantaged youth interested in pursuing careers in the field of dentistry.

"The benefit concert will provide scholarship funds for students who have the ability, but lack financial resources for pursuing professional training."

The concert will be preseeded by a cocktail party at the Kennedy Center, and followed by an "afterglow" session and dinner dance, for which Will Bill Davis will provide the music. Ticket sales are already in full swing.

The National Dental Association represents the more than 3,000 Black dentists across the United States. A record attendance is expected at this year's convention which will run from July 30 through August 3.

Dr. Herman D. Lujan, director of the University of Kansas Institute for Social and Environmental Studies and professor of political science, was named vice president for minority affairs at the University of Washington.

The appointment of Dr. Lujan, 42, an experienced Spanish-Hawaiian American educator-administrator, became effective June 15.

The University also expects to recommend to the Board of Regents his appointment as professor of political science.

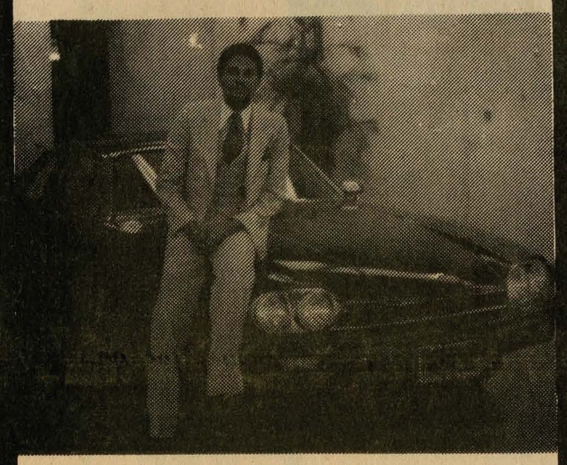

Dr. Jujan was chosen from a slate of five finalists whose names had been submitted from a list of more than 250 applicants throughout the nation by a Seattle-base management consultant firm.

The University's minority affairs program, instituted in 1968, is a full-time student support service, nationally recognized for its many multi-ethnic, multi-cultural achievements. Its flagship is the Educational Opportunity Program (EOP), enrolling 2,620 undergraduates in the American Indian, Asian American, Black, Chicano and Economically Disadvantaged Student Divisions.

Other minority affairs components are the Resident Release Project, the Tutorial Center, the Reading and Skills Center, the Ethnic Cultural Center and Theater and the Upward Bound Project.

The University's racial minority enrollment among 27,993 undergraduates is 4,411 or 11.9 per cent.

Plan Now for Your Own Future

Children need to have challenges in their own lives to build independence and self-confidence, and to learn to cope with inevitable setbacks. Margaret Movius, Washington State University's King County Extension Agent raises an important question about parents. How much independence and self-confidence do parents have?

Some parents put aside their own interests for the sake of doing a good job with their children. When children grow up and leave home, parents are left with lives that seem empty--far emptier than they need to be.

Parents may wish to project ahead to a time when their children announce they are leaving home. When that time comes, will you be overwhelmed with sadness, or will your feelings be mixed?

If parents wait to find their own interests, that inevitable leave-taking will leave an awful emptiness. On the other hand, if parents have grown as their children have, the children's move to independence will be partly sad. But parents will also know the excitement of having more time to spend with their spouse, doing the things that they want to do.

Parents need to have their own interests. The time spent with children will be more productive and pleasant if both spouses have hobbies, friends, and social activities that do not include the children.

According to Movius, not all of parents' activities should include their spouse, either. Each partner has his/her own life to live--as a part of their lives together.

Finding new interests may take a deliberate effort. Try to learn at least one new hobby or other activity really well each year. Individuals may need to take classes at a community school, read new books, meet new people, and spend hours practicing to become really good at the new hobby.

Time spent away from the family, developing independence and self-confidence, may result in a fuller life--before and after the children leave home.
