Calm Before The Storm

THE FACTS Sports Editor Dave Mann pats a grim looking Washington coach Marv Harshman on the back and wishes him and his Huskies good luck before the tip off in Pauley Pavilion Sunday night.

It was all for naught as the Bruins from UCLA made the Huskies their 97th victim in a row on their home court. The arena, called Pauley Pavilion, is indeed a lion's den for opposing teams to enter; but for a lack of good foul shooting and some questionable official calls the hustling Huskies would have prevailed.

This week's profile is that of Jerome "J" Maultsby who is a 6 ft. 3 in., 180 lb. sophomore majoring in General Studies at Seattle University. "J" is only 19, hails from Norwalk, Conn. and wears team jersey No. 10.

He earned his letter as a freshman last year, playing in 20 of the S.U. Chieftain games.

Despite his lack of height, Jerome can play the forward position because of his super leaping ability. And on a team populated with some fine jumpers, Maultsby may be the best.

He is almost 'too quick' in his court actions. His mind is often ahead of his feet and hands.

Jerome averaged nearly 7 points a game as a freshman and will be in the thick of action this year. "J" likes to bicycle, swim and bowl. His favorite subject is Psychology.
