

HERE IT IS

"Pal," you will be interested to know, is the Gipsy word for "brother."

The name of the flower "Petunia" is from "petum" or "petun," an old name for tobacco. It is, therefore, a species of tobacco.

Marabou feathers of which women's boas, muffs and hat trimmings are made, are taken from beneath the wings of the Marabou stork, a native bird of West Africa.

"Perfume" is derived from the Latin per, meaning "from," and "fumus," meaning smoke. The first perfumes were wood or aromatic gums which gave off pleasing odors in burning.

"Picnic" is a corruption of the French "pique-nique." In its native country it means an entertainment in which each person contributes to the general supply of the table. In France it does not apply, as it does here, to an outdoor entertainment.

The raven is the first bird named in the Bible (Gen. 8:7). Although it feeds upon fruits and seeds, it also eats the flesh of dead animals, and so was considered unclean. The reference to the raven in Isaiah 34:11 shows that the ancient peoples considered it a bird of evil omen.

Did you know that the word "marmalade" originally meant "quince jam," and came from the Portuguese "marmalada," from "marmelo," a quince? Nowadays, we call any fruit conserve marmalade, whether it be made from oranges, apricots, plums or quinces.

In 1914 an attempt was made to take a census of birds in the United States. Most of the work was done on farms in the northwestern quarter of the United States—north of North Carolina and east of Kansas. For every 100 robins reported there was 49 catbirds, 37 brown thrashers, 28 house wrens, 27 kingbirds and 26 bluejays.

You've heard people say, "He acted like the Old Nick," haven't you? And do you know who "Old Nick" was? The term is from the name of a Scandinavian demon, Nikr, who was supposed to haunt mines. The name of the metal "nickel" comes from a miners' legend that the hardness of the ore is due to the wickedness of Nikr.

You'll be surprised to know that the sandwich was originated about a hundred years ago by an earl—the Earl of Sandwich. He was, they say, a gambler, and spent whole days at this pastime. Not wishing to take time enough to eat a regular meal, he was accustomed to have the waiter bring him a piece of meat between two slices of bread, which he ate without stopping his play.

Curious and Unusual Queries Answered
"Men-of-war" is a phrase applied to a line of battleships, and probably originated in the following way: In the English language ships are usually referred to as "she"; "man-of-war ship" meant a boat full of men armed for war, but in the course of time the word "ship" was dropped, and "man-of-war" was the resulting phrase.

Crucifixion, as a form of punishment, was in use among the Carthaginians, the Persians, Assyrians, Scythians, Indians, Germans and from the earliest times among the Greeks and Romans. It was abolished by Constantine, Emperor of Rome, toward the end of his reign, probably because of his increasing reverence for the cross. Exemption from crucifixion was the privilege of Roman citizenship, and punishment by the cross was confined to slaves or malefactors of the worst class. You will remember that Christ was crucified between two thieves.

Sodom and Gomorrah were the two cities, said by some to be north, by others south, of the Dead Sea, which, according to the biblical story, were destroyed, 1898 B. C., by fire from heaven as a punishment for the extreme wickedness of their inhabitants. Lot and his wife were the only ones who escaped, and Lot's wife, you remember, was turned to a pillar of salt for looking back at the ruins.

The enthusiasm shown in the recent gardening movement was not, by any means, confined to rural districts. Last spring, in the city of Chicago alone 8,000 acres were plowed, and 200,000 home and vacant lot gardens were under cultivation. Garden meetings were attended by 69,500 persons, and 365,000 pieces of garden literature were distributed free. If each plot grew $20.00 worth of foodstuffs, the total value would be $2,600,000.

The Marseillaise Hymn, the national hymn of France, received its present name from the fact that a body of French troops from Marseilles marched into Paris, where it was unknown, singing it lustily. The words and music of the piece were composed by Rouget de l'Isle, a French officer of Engineers, and it was first produced in 1792 at the House of Baron Dietrich in Strassburg, under the name of the "Chant du Depart de l' Armée du Rhin."

Did you ever give a thought to the "whence" of the word "pocket-handkerchief"? 'Tis most curious! First there was the form "kerchief," from the French "couvre-chef," a covering for the head. By prefixing the word "hand," we have "handkerchief," a covering for the head held in the hand; but when we use the term "pocket-handkerchief" we speak of a covering for the head which is held in the hand and sometimes carried in the pocket.

The Negro has influenced our music to a marked degree, not alone in its inspiration, but through the remarkable compositions of members of the race. Coleridge-Taylor and Burleigh are notable. The Negro music is based upon a five-tone scale and certain frequent repetitions of the phrase. The Negro's sense of rhythm is unusual, and excels all in the syncopated rhythm commonly known as "ragtime," with the accent misplaced. Again, the Negro's sense of harmony is unequaled among the primitive races.—Ex.

"Germany's claim that she imports nothing, buys only of herself, and so is growing rich from the war, is a dreadful fallacy."

The speaker was Herbert C. Hoover, chairman of the American Food Board.

"Germany," he went on, "is like the young man who wisely thought he'd grow his own garden-stuff. This young man had been digging for about an hour when his spade turned up a quarter. Ten minutes later he found another quarter. Then he found a dime. Then he found a quarter again.

"By gosh," he said, 'I've struck a silver mine,' and, straightening up, he felt something cold slide down his leg. Another quarter lay at his feet. He grasped the truth: There was a hole in his pocket."—Washington Star.
