I met with Mario and lined up four projects for him to start on when he completes the work in progress. The first is the House lot, and the others are in that vicinity. He wants to complete those before discussing any others.

Mario began excavation around the Wettermark monument (the tall, white marble one with the elaborate carving), but he does not feel the existing foundation can be jacked up because it is just a pile of rocks. Mario thinks he will need a crane to move the pieces of the monument so the existing foundation can be removed and replaced with a solid concrete one. He is going to defer the work on Wettermark until you return next week and are available to discuss how it should be done.
