SOLANA BEACH — Solana Beach, and Cardiff and the southern portion of Encinitas may soon be saying "good-bye" to Supervisor Paul Eckert and "hello" to Supervisor Roger Hedgecock.

The county Board of Supervisors, by a 3-2 vote last week, tentatively approved a plan that would see Supervisors Eckert's and Hedgecock's districts restructured to comply with county population figures from the 1980 census.

With Supervisors Eckert and Paul Fordem dissenting, the board approved the plan which will have a public hearing April 26. A final decision is required by Oct. 1.

The new plan has been dubbed Plan A and according to Registrar of Voters Ray Ortiz it will make sure that both districts are more equal in population. North County has had a rapid growth in population, so Eckert must lose 61,067 constituents. According to Ortiz, Hedgecock's Third District and Fordem's Second District would be the only districts that could take up some of Eckert's Fifth District excess.

If the plan is approved, Hedgecock will lose a portion of Poway that is now in his district and will acquire Solana Beach, Cardiff and a small portion of Encinitas south of Santa Fe Drive.

Eckert would also lose his portion of Poway and Ramona but would retain the remainder of Encinitas, Olivenhain and Rancho Santa Fe.

The newly incorporated city of Poway would then be included entirely in Fordem's district. The mayor of Poway, Clyde Rexrode, however, told the board that Poway did not want to become a part of Fordem's East County Second District, saying that since Poway is considered a city in the North County it should be included in a district or districts made up of North County communities.

He added also that Poway will be affected by such North County issues as the proposed Highway 680 and the development of the Interstate 15 corridor and so should be represented by a supervisor from North County.

Encinitas "NO" to RSF

ENCINITAS — The Encinitas Fire Protection District will not be hooking up to the Rancho Santa Fe Fire Department's computer dispatching system.

The fire board, deciding that joining the system would be too costly, voted at its March 11 meeting to withdraw its application for the dispatch system.

In January the board had voted to join the system, believing it would save the district money. But it decided John Sueppel, the fire board agreed to hook up to the computer system only if it would cost $32,500 or less.

Rancho Santa Fe Fire Chief Peter Fox says that the cost to Encinitas to buy in would have been closer to $50,000 based on the fact that the amount a fire district initially pays is based on the average number of emergency calls the fire department makes each year.

Fox says that Encinitas makes about 1,800 a year.
