There is a negro woman living in Clay county by the name of Winey, who is 118 years old. She was born in Virginia in 1750, years before the revolution. Her former master, says he has known her about 60 years, and has never known her to be sick but once, and then she had the fever and ague. He further states that forty years ago she was worth fifty dollars less than nothing, or in other words, he was paid fifty dollars to take and keep her. She is of sound mind, can see quite plainly, enjoys good health, and looks and acts as though she will live for years to come.
