HORRIBLE ACCIDENT AND DEATH.—On Saturday night, as the freight train bound for Leavenworth was starting from the depot, on the levee, Jake Hurd, well known to many of our citizens, while in an intoxicated state, attempted to climb on, slipped and was carried under the wheels of the moving train. Several wheels seem to have passed over him, crushing and mangling his body in a frightfull manner. Both legs were badly broken, and his body literally torn to pieces. He was dragged at least fifty feet, and small particles of flesh and clothes were hanging on to the splintered ends of rails and cross ties. His body, as it was gathered up and laid upon a board, was the most shocking looking object we ever beheld. We have seen men crushed by bursting shells, or torn by splinters, but nothing so horrible as that mass of mangled remains.—Kansas City Advertiser.
