Aunt Jane Taylor

Aunt Jane Taylor, an old-time colored woman, died at her home in north Piatte City Monday August 26, 1912. Aunt Jane was well known in Platte City and vicinity as one of the best of colored citizens. She was the wife of Jap Taylor, who died some years since. She was an industrious, faithful and kind woman and had a host of good friends among the white people who respeeted her for her stirling qualities. She has been for many years a leading member of the colored Baptist church in Platte City. Her remains were interred Wednesday in the city cemetery.
