Henry Clay Lyles, for many years a well knows resident of the Port William colored settlement east of Potter, died at his home in Atchison last Friday night and was buried at Port William Sunday. He was born in Platte county, Mo., but was reared at Port Willlam, where he attended school at No. 20, and where he was a leader of his race in social, political and other matters for many years. He was quite a stump speaker. He was 55 years of age.
