The forces in Platte county have all been withdrawn, the Eighteenth Missouri leaving to-morrow for St. Louis. I learned some time since that the field of action for this regiment would probably be transferred to the Mississippi, and this movement corroborates information then received. The 12th Wisconsin and 2d Iowa cavalry are now quartered here, Col. DOUBLEDAY, of the latter regiment, having been appointed to an acting Brigadiership. He was, however, previous to coming over from Platte City, so unfortunate as to incur the displeasure of the LANE organ of this city, in returning runaway slaves to loyal owners. CHARLEY DOUBLEDAY understands that the present is a war to restore the Constitution, and not to violate it past all hope of a restoration; and will not very easily be made a convert to the JIM LANE doctrine of dusky esquires.
