THE bodies of the two men who were drowned Saturday afternoon near the bridge have not yet been recovered, although many efforts have been made to that end. The men (both colored) are named, respectively, John Brown and Joseph Merrill. The former resided on Ottawa street, between Third and Fourth, and the home of the latter was on Dacotah, between Third and Fourth streets. They both leave large families, who looked to them for support. Green Oldham is the name of the man who escaped.
