Harry Nichols:—"I spect I de oldest man in Kansas. I was a man grown when John Dorsey was running around pickin' chips in his shirt tail; yes I remember now 'twas old Joe. Warren that fotched me from Virginy to Kentucky; there we lived on de road leading to Harrisburg; he sold me to old Major Bean, and he fotched me to Misouri; then when Fantly Bean married I lived with him till he died; then Nick Asbury married his wider; I lived there till the war, then I come to Kansas. I remember well when the cholera first broke out in Kentucky. I and Leroy Bean buried three ob de 'old man Bean's children, and three of old man Dorsey's sisters. I was thought to be an old man then. J.

The above was handed us by a colored man. There is much interest taken in Uncle Harry by his people, and much figuring as to his probable age, everything going to show that he is over 100.
