Got the Pension.

In the United States court this morning in the pension case of the United States vs. James H. Mayo alias Phillips, the jury unanimously returned a verdict in favor of Mayo, thus giving him over $800 that has been tied up in a Leavenworth bank for several years.

It was proven in court that Mayo was the son of "Little Bill" Hunt, who was a slave in Platte county, Missouri, who enlisted in the first negro Kansas regiment in 1862 and afterwards died at Fort Smith, Ark.

The question was raised that Mayo was not the legal heir of Hunt, but the jury was unanimous in his favor and awarded him the pension money.
