Funeral For George Hill, Pioneer Farmer, Today

The rites for George Hill, 81 years old, who died March 18 were held Friday, March 24, from the Jones Funeral home, Kansas side, the Rev. W. A. Bowren, pastor of First Baptist church, in charge. Hill, a farmer, had lived alone several weeks on his small tract of land in Indian Springs, Kas.

The aged man suffered a paralytic stroke two weeks ago. He was brought to Douglas hospital, Kansas side, by Sam Ross, taxi stand owner, who owns property near where the farmer lived.

Hill was a lifelong resident of Wyandotte county. He was born in Clay County, Mo., but was brought to Kansas shortly after his birth. He looked after the work on his plot until he became ill.

Neighbors say that he bought several parcels of lands from Indians more than 40 years ago. Most of this property was sold piece by piece and about three acres were owned by this pioneer citizen when he died.

Mrs. Gertrude Haynes, a niece, survives.

Interment took place in Westlawn cemetery.
