"Young Japanese Papermakers' Association Leader: Katsuo Tadahiko"
Many people who draw our attention are charismatic, and others are uncommonly generous and accessible. Katsuo Tadahiko was both, and at the same time, intensely devoted to his craft. Much of his commitment grew from his apprenticeship with National Living Treasure papermaker Eishiro Abe. But at its heart was Katsuo's own conviction that the history and future of the craft rest on the shoulders of young artisans working today.

Thursday, March 17: CATHLEEN BAKER

"Dard Hunter and the Mountain House Press"
The most important American paper historian in the 20th century, Dard Hunter not only studied the history of world papermaking, but also created his own press, Mountain House Press, so that he could publish limited edition books about his findings based on his travels between the two World Wars.

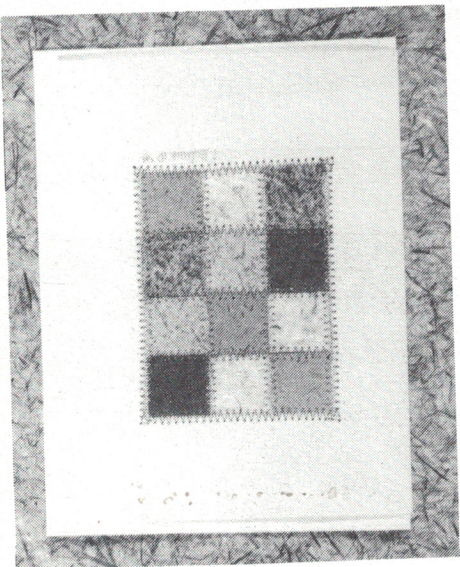

Thursday, April 14: EUGENIE BARON

"Douglas Howell: Father of the American Revival of Hand Papermaking"
Douglas Howell's contribution to hand papermaking spans over 40 years. As a self-taught papermaker, Howell built his first beater in the late 1940's and was the first to apply paper as a painterly medium in the 1950's. This presentation will concentrate on his technical progress and research in general, and specifically as he resolved various artistic problems while working with pulp as a medium.

Artist-Designed Cards

Deborah Mulnick, Enormous Egg Designs

This quilt-like motif is an original collage made with recycled paper by artist Debra Mulnick. The various squares are handmade papers made from sage, flax, cedar bark, willow leaf, milkwee and grass. Pictured here, these 5x7 cards are blank inside, come with an envelope, and are suitable for framing. Each one is stitched with gold metallic thread and signed by the artist. Debra also works extensively with Japanese printed papers. Cards made from these papers can be seen at the American Craft Museum shop as well as ZONA, Inc. in New York City.
Tom Bennick makes the papers Debra uses from natural fibers he gathers from the high desert of Southwest Idaho. He boils the fibers with washing soda, runs them through a recycled garbage disposal, beats them by hand and finally dries them in the hot desert sun.
Enormous Egg Designs are available for $8 each through Dieu Donne. To purchase cards, please fill out the enclosed order form and send it with a check to the Mill.
