the finish rock and was finally induced to leave the water when he crossed an imaginary line which all agreed marked the completion of the task.

MAYOR HELPS TO PULL SWIMMERS FROM WATER

It was a cold, bleak day and Mayor Rossi and Supervisor Shannon, who represented the city of San Francisco in this event, found their heavy overcoats most welcome. The photographers kept his honor the Mayor busy when Olds and Egan arrived. They had the Mayor pulling the swimmers from the water and dragging grease-covered mermen from the bay, and that is no snap.

Captain Walker, of the Fort Point Life-saving Station, had his baptism in this Gate swimming racket and handled the situation like a veteran. With three boats out from the station the Coast Guard boys saw to it that there were no casualties.

The swimmers finished in the following order:
