

[OBVERSE]

To the student in the Faculty of Medicine attending the lectures on [...] anatomy in the University of Kings College.

Gentlemen

I approve you that it [face?] me great great pleasure to receive the very [kneel?] and flattering [...] which you presented me, at the close of one studies for the present lecture.

The pursuits in which it had been my duty to direct you all as you have found extremely labourous [sic] we calculated to try your patience and task your contrary of prefer you have seen that no extent of mature talent no powers of invention will in the [comparison?] you have chosen supply the place of instruction and painful investigation.

I have used my best endeavours to adjust you in labours which you must after have formal unknown and wearying.

J [Could?]

[OBVERSE 1]

Could not have been surprised without any recognition on your part of my share in your instruction but it is very gratifying to me to find that you remember the many hours we have spent together in the pursuit of knowledge with feelings most honourable to you as pupils and most welcome to me as your instructor.

I gladly take the opportunity you have given me to repeat my thanks for the decorum and respectful attention which you have uniformly preserved in the course of our lectures and to promise you that in the close and attention study of [...] anatomy you are laying the best foundation for future usefully and [eminence?] in your [...] as well as taking the work effective means of during [...] to the institution in receive your education. My sole reward for my humble exertions will be to [...] the future success of my pupils and of this I have no doubt of you persevere in exercising the same.

[REVERSE 1]

Same patience [...] and [indirectly?] which I have had the pleasure to observe during the [haste?] season.

Believe me
Gentlemen
Yours very sincerely
Henry [Lullway?]

University Kings College
March 22nd 1845 [underlined]