

Tales from the Villages

An Historical Map of the Saugatuck, Douglas, & Lake Shore Environments: Landscape, Villagescape and People.

The Saugatuck area is on the edge of the White Pine Forest. The area that extended southeast from northern Michigan, along the coast from west of Saugatuck to the south of Douglas, was a collection of small villages and was of great value as a collection of small villages. The area that extended from the south of Douglas to the south of Saugatuck was a collection of small villages and was of great value as a collection of small villages. The area that extended from the south of Douglas to the south of Saugatuck was a collection of small villages and was of great value as a collection of small villages.

Legend
Scale in Miles
Site numbers are keyed to computer devices and physical structures moved from Saugatuck
Road building yards
Information credit to Holland 1899-1920

Crossing the Kalamazoo Waters

Chippewa River
After years of crossing the river by boat and by foot, a wooden bridge was built in 1850. The bridge was built by the Chippewa River and was used for many years. The bridge was built by the Chippewa River and was used for many years.

The Chippewa River
The Chippewa River is a tributary of the Kalamazoo River. It flows from the north and joins the Kalamazoo River at the mouth of the river. The river is about 10 miles long and is used for many purposes.

The Saugatuck River
The Saugatuck River is a tributary of the Kalamazoo River. It flows from the south and joins the Kalamazoo River at the mouth of the river. The river is about 10 miles long and is used for many purposes.

The Douglas River
The Douglas River is a tributary of the Kalamazoo River. It flows from the south and joins the Kalamazoo River at the mouth of the river. The river is about 10 miles long and is used for many purposes.

Front Cover
Concept and art: John B. Borden, III & M. L. Lane
Map: John B. Borden, III & M. L. Lane
Design: John B. Borden, III & M. L. Lane
Copyright: John B. Borden, III & M. L. Lane
Printed by: John B. Borden, III & M. L. Lane