Resolutions adopted by the

Chiraga
Mercantile Exchange

December eleventh, 1919, in memory of

Charles Henry Weaver

Whereas, it is given to some men to so live that they not only become commanding & figures in their own business organization and in the line of trade with which they are associated, but by sterling honesty, & fairness and genial personality they add lustre and give standing to their entire industry in the eyes of the world at large.

When a list of those who stand for the best thought and the most progressive action in the community or the nation is made, their names are always included.

Such a man was Charles Henry Weaver, long a member of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange and its predecessor.

Whereas, it has pleased a Divine Providence to call ✥ him to his great reward, ✥ Therefore, be it Resolved, by the members of the Chicago Mercantile ✥ Exchange, in regular meeting assembled, that we extend to the family of Charles Henry Weaver our deepest sympathy in their hour of bereavement—a sympathy that we can more fully bestow as the loss of Mr. Weaver is quite as much our loss as it is their own.

LAST HONORS TO MR. WEAVER.

Funeral Largely Attended by Trade—
Floral Offerings Beautiful.

Chicago, Dec. 12.—Charles H. Weaver, the veteran commission man, who passed away last week after a short illness, was buried at 2 p. m. Saturday from his late residence, 2943 Washington Boulevard. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. Polson, pastor of the Universalist Church, and interment was at Rosehill Cemetery.

There can be no more fitting and conclusive indication of the esteem in which Mr. Weaver was held than the fact that despite the storminess of the day the attendance was the largest recorded in the history of the trade for a similar occasion. The floral offerings were plentiful and beautiful and represented a sentiment from practically every association and business institution of the trade. South Water St. and kindred businesses in other sections of the city were abundantly represented, and those in special prominence among the attendants were the old timers of the trade, who had pioneered with and long known Mr. Weaver.

The pallbearers were William L. Wagner, of G. M. H. Wagner & Sons, ex-president of the Western Fruit Jobbers' Ass'n and the International Apple Shippers' Ass'n; L. B. Kilbourne and F. W. Morrill, both of whom have long been associated with Mr. Weaver in the business; John W. Low, of Wayne & Low, ex-president of the Exchange and president of the Chicago Cold Storage Warehouse Co.; Wm. J. Ellis, of W. J. Ellis & Co., and S. Edward Davis, executive secretary of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Every member and employee of Weaver & Co., as well as many ex-employees, were present to pay their last respects. Among those who attended were L. A. Goss, manager of the Minneapolis Cold Storage; Chas. E. McNeill, president of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange; Joseph T. Milnarick, vice-president of the Exchange, and John C. Scales, ex-president of the National League.

The Chicago Mercantile Exchange adopted suitable resolutions as drawn up by the committee appointed for

"WHEREAS, it is given to some men to so live that they not only become commanding figures in their own business organization and in the line of trade with which they are associated, but by sterling honesty, fairness and genial personality they add lustre and give standing to their entire industry in the eyes of the world at large.

"WHEREAS, it has pleased a divine Providence to call him to his great reward.

"THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED by the members of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, in regular meeting assembled, that we extend to the family of Charles Henry Weaver our deepest sympathy in their hour of bereavement, a sympathy that we can more fully bestow as the loss of Mr. Weaver is quite as much our loss as it is their own.

"BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED, that these resolutions be suitably engrossed and a copy forwarded to the family of Mr. Weaver. W. S. Moore, John W. Low, S. Edward Davis, Committee.

DEATH OF AN OLD PIONEER.

Hiram H. Marsh Died Last Monday
Evening, Aged 75.

Hiram Hosmer Marsh, the pioneer settler of Monte Vista, died at his residence Monday, January 22, at 9 o'clock p. m., of neuralgia of the heart and his funeral was attended from the residence at 2 p. m. today and his remains now rest in the Monte Vista cemetery.

Mr. Marsh was born in New Hampshire in 1824, and early in life moved to southern Illinois where for several years he was engaged in fruit raising and afterwards went to Chicago to engage in the commission business. He came to the San Luis valley in 1881 for his health and was one of the pioneers in the building of the Lariat ditch and conducted early and exhaustive experiments, showing what could be done in the way of fruit, grain and vegetable raising on the mesa lands of the valley which previous to his coming here were not considered worth 25 cents an acre.

Mr. Marsh was liberal to all enterprises which commended themselves to his judgment and he contributed over $3,000 to the building of the Soldiers Home. He was a cousin and playmate and an intimate friend of Harriet Hosmer, the noted sculptress, and was himself of a strongly literary and scientific turn of mind. He leaves here a property probably worth the result of a lifetime of careful and intelligent industry, which Mr. Charles Weaver of Chicago, a nephew of Mrs. Marsh, is here to look after.

C. H. Weaver, Commission Man, Bank Director, Dead

Charles Henry Weaver died yesterday morning at his residence, 2943 Washington boulevard. Mr. Weaver was born Jan. 10, 1843, in Utica, N. Y. His forefathers on both sides took part in the revolutionary war. In October, 1863, he became associated with H. H. Marsh in the commission business on South Water street, Chicago. Five years later Mr. Marsh retired. Shortly afterward the present house of C. H. Weaver & Co. was established.

C. H. WEAVER

Associated with Mr. Weaver for many years were L. B. Kilbourne, his son, C. A. Weaver, and F. W. Morf.

Mr. Weaver was president of the Produce Exchange during the World's Fair year. He was a director of the Continental and Commercial National bank and was president of the Chicago branch of the National League of Commission Merchants.

multiplied and each year as time advanced they came more and more to value the genuine friendship and good fellowship that was part and parcel of every business transaction, both large and small, with which C. H. Weaver and his many business departments had to do. He succeeded as a business man away beyond the average, and yet his pleasure did not come from the accumulation of this world's goods. Rather he counted his greatest earthly gain and his personal comfort and satisfaction was derived from playing the game to render a genuine service and help others. He was clean in all his business transactions, he stood for a high code of ethics and his unusual success was attained as naturally as the flow of the water down stream. There is a lesson in every great business success and invariably the answer is one and the same: The rendering of a service that attracts and holds the confidence and friendship of customers. That explains the C. H. Weaver success.

C. H. Weaver left the trade better than he found it. He did a man's part in building up the industry in its broadest sense and he long will be remembered for the good he did and for his application of the Golden Rule in all his transactions.

IN MEMORIAM.

WEAVER—Charles H. Weaver, in fond memory of my beloved husband, our dear father, who passed away one year ago today, Dec. 4, 1910.

ed among the foremost in the country. In business methods and ethics Mr. Weaver always was a leader. He was among the most active members of the National League of Commission Merchants, Western Fruit Jobbers' Association and International Apple Shippers' Association. He served as vice president of the latter organization in 1901, and as president in 1902-3. He always took a great deal of interest in the trade organizations and at all times was a hard worker in up-building the fruit and produce industry.

Mr. Weaver was a far-sighted business man. Years ago he started to surround himself with able men to carry along the business of C. H. Weaver & Co., and has built up an organization that is recognized as the peer of any in the country in this line of industry. So well is the organization managed that his personal presence was unnecessary in carrying along the business, although he always has supervised its operation and together with his colleagues made plans for the future. C. Arthur Weaver, his son; F. William Morf and L. B. Kilbourne, all of whom have been associated with the firm as department managers for more than 20 years, and who shared with Mr. Weaver the responsibility of the business, will continue the firm under an unchanged policy.

Mr. Weaver became ill early in November but apparently was recovering nicely when a cold developed which later turned to pneumonia. He is survived by his widow, Carrie Edmonds Weaver, and their son, C. Arthur Weaver. Burial will take place in Rose Hill cemetery.

The trade has lost a big man.

C. H. WEAVER, MAN.

C. H. Weaver has written into the record of fruit and produce history a chapter that will ever stand as an example worthy to follow. A manly-man, a gentle-man and a noble-man, his motto was to serve others and he served well. Customers once served liked the Weaver Brand and they clung to the Weaver house. Customers

$860,000 Estate Left by Charles H. Weaver

An estate valued at $860,000 was left by Charles H. Weaver, late head of the commission firm of C. H. Weaver & Co., at 67 West South Water street, according to a petition for letters of administration presented today to Raymond J. Darby, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner.

As Mr. Weaver left no will, the estate will be shared by his widow, Mrs. Carrie A. Weaver, and son, Charles Arthur Weaver, both of 2943 Washington boulevard.

Letters of administration were issued by Mr. Darby to the son at the request of his mother. The estate is said to consist of $700,000 in personal property and $160,000 in real estate. Mr. Weaver died Dec. 4 last.

WEAVER—Charles Henry Weaver, Dec. 4, aged 76 years, beloved husband of Carrie A. Edmonds, father of Charles Arthur Weaver. Funeral services at late residence, 2943 Washington blvd., Saturday at 2 o'clock. Interment Rosehill.

Chicago, Dec. 5.—Yesterday morning at 11 o'clock that Hand which guides the destiny of all saw fit to bring to a close the life of one who was dearly beloved of all, C. H. Weaver, of Chicago.

Mr. Weaver was one of the best and most favorably known figures in the fruit and produce industry. He was born in Utica, N. Y., 76 years ago. He came to Illinois with his parents when four years old and in 1862 came to Chicago and founded the following year the business which bears his name, and which is now in its 57th year, C. H. Weaver & Co.

From a small beginning more than a half century ago Mr. Weaver saw his organization and business grow steadily year after year until it rank-
