SCHOOL

The British International School
in Hong Kong

Once again our students, parents and teachers have worked together to capture another exciting year at Kellett. The following pages show us just a glimpse of the year that our students have had; the celebrations, the events, and some of things that they have learnt. I hope that you will enjoy browsing the pages as I do and reflect on the year past.

My thanks to all those involved in the production of this fantastic year book; our students, teachers and of course our editorial team.

Robin Hood meets Maid Marian

A long time ago there was a girl called Marian and a boy called Robin Hood. Marian's father wanted Sir Guy to marry his daughter but she didn't want to marry that horrible person. So Marian changed as fast as she could and rode away and bumped into Robin Hood. At first they did not know each other, they started to fight while Robin stroked Marian and Marian hit Robin's arm. After knowing each other they dropped their swords and went back to the village.

By Alex Lawrence

Once upon a time a man called Robin Hood who lived with a band of outlaws in Sherwood. One day Maid Marian bought a castle next to Robins old home. Marian's father wanted her to marry Sir Guy. He plundered the poor and had no mercy for those he plundered. When Marian heard she was going to marry Sir Guy, she swore an oath that no mater what she would not marry Sir Guy. A few minutes after that Sir Guy came by and asked for her hand in marriage.

At that moment Marian slipped passed disguised as a boy and ran away chanting, "Good bye, good bye old Sir Guy hope you had enough meat pie!" She ran away to Sherwood giggling like a monkey. She was wondering whether she would ever get home. At that moment she caught a glimpse of a man. He was all dressed in green but he wouldn't let her past. So she drew her sword ready to fight, then Robin drew his and you could hear the sound of clashing swords. When they stopped Robin had gashed cheek and Marian had a cut arm. Suddenly their eyes met and Marian asked Robin to marry her. Of course he said, 'YES!!!!!". Marian joined the band of outlaws and joined in all their adventure. And they lived happily ever after.

By Thomas Green

A long time ago, there was a man called Robin Hood who was kicked out of his house. But before he had been kicked out of his house he had a next door neighbour called Marian.. She and her dad were having a humongous fight because Marian's dad wanted her to marry a guy called Sir Guy but Marian didn't want to. "You can't make me marry Sir Guy and if you do I will disguise myself as a boy and when Sir Guy walks into one door I will sneak out from another door."

When Marian snuck out the next night, it worked, there were no guards and Marian was shocked and surprised at the same time. So when she set one foot in Sherwood's forest she knew she was alone and that she had no one to depend on. But she was wrong, when she was wandering through the forest she ran into Robin Hood but not recognizing each other Robin looked at her and said, "What a wealthy young lady." But all Marian did was yelled "I ORDER YOU TO LET ME PASS!" And as quick as a flash they both got out their swords and in no time the forest echoed with sword clashing. But they finally stopped when Robin had a gashed cheek and Marian had a cut arm. Just then Robin revealed his true identity, they started to talk and finally recognized each other and Robin romantically asked, "Should we marry?" and Marian yelled, "Why not? Of course, we will!"

Once upon a time there was a maid named Marian. When Marian arrived in their home, her father thought of something. He wanted Marian to marry Sir Guy! But Marian did not want to marry him. So Marian said that she will run away if Sir Guy stepped one foot in their house. Guess what, he did, so Marian as quick as a flash got on the boyish suit and set off to the woods.

Robin was looking for wealthy guests. Suddenly Robin found Marian but he didn't recognize her so he asked what her name was. Marian refused to answer and took out her sword instead. "Let me pass," she shouted at Robin. Robin and Marian had a fight. Robin had a cut cheek and Marian a gashed arm. At last Robin declared his true identity. Finally their arms linked and Marian became one of the merry outlaws and Sir Guy became Robin's sworn enemy.

By Alexander Ludwick

Once upon a time there was a girl called Marian, she was asked to marry Sir Guy by her father and had a huge argument with him because she did not want to. She thought she would sneak out of the opposite door that Sir Guy would come through and would dress like a boy. So she set off walking swiftly in the woods. While she was walking it got darker and darker. At the same time, Robin was hunting, Robin asked Marian "What is your name?" But Marian wouldn't respond and didn't recognize Robin. So Marian took her sword out of her pocket and started to fight with Robin and he got a cut on his cheek and a gash on her arm. Then they recognized each other and they leaped to each other's arms. Now Sir Guy is Robin's enemy.

By Charlie Heithersay

A long, long time ago, far, far away Maid Marian was having an argument with her father King John. Marian didn't want to marry Sir Guy. She screamed if Sir Guy would set one foot into her house she would dash into the woods.

One night Sir Guy sneaked into her father's castle, she was curious she wanted to run out so she disguised as a boy hoping Sir Guy wouldn't see her into her house. She disguised herself as a boy and she brought a saw for safety. Safety came first she thought. And dashed into Sherwood forest she was a bit scared then she met a boy; he was Robin Hood. But Maid Marian didn't recognize him so Robin Hood challenged her for a fight. The forest rang of clashing swords, the fight went on till Robin Hood had a cut cheek and Marian had gashed arm. Robin introduced himself he said, "I'm Robin Hood," but before Robin could finish his sentence Marian ran and hugged him, Marian joined the merry men and they lived happily ever after.

By Charlotte Elliot

Once upon a time Marian's dad wanted Marian to marry Sir Guy. She refused to do that and one day Sir Guy came into her house and she disguised herself as a boy and ran away from home into the forest.

When she got there Robin Hood was there but he did not let Marian go past him. So they fought until Robin Hood had a cut on his cheek and Marian had a gashed arm. They were both hurt.

As soon as they recognized each other for five minutes they stopped. They looked into each other's eyes and Robin suddenly held her hand and took her to Sherwood Forest. She joined to be an outlaw with Robin and his men and Marian stayed with Robin forever.

By Ciara Canniffe

A long time ago, King Richard was on a tough, hard ,long ,bloody Crusade ,so Prince John was gaining power. Prince John's friend, Sir Guy, wanted to marry Maid Marian. Marian refused the proposal. "If he sets one foot in the house I'm leaving!" exclaimed Marian horrified. Well very soon, Sir Guy arrived at the house and Marian ran. She ran through Sherwood. At the same time, Robin was looking for a wealthy guest. When he found Marian, he thought she was a wealthy lad and stopped her. Marian didn't recognise him and ordered him to let her pass. Robin taunted her to fight and soon the forest was filled with the clashing of swords, until Robin had a cut cheek and Marian a gashed arm. Then Robin revealed his true identity. Suddenly their eyes met and they recognised each other. Then the two of them linked arms and Marian joined the merry men.

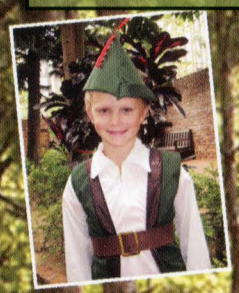
Long, long ago there was a girl called Marian. Her dad wanted her to marry Sir Guy but he was as evil as King Richard's brother.
So she refused to marry him and Marian said to her dad that if Sir Guy put one step into their house she would run away from home. One day Sir Guy came, and went right into their house. So Marian disguised as a boy climbed out the window of their home and ran into the forest. Then she saw Robin Hood but she didn't recognize her and Robin Hood was looking for a rich person. So Robin Hood didn't let her go past and then Marian took out her sword and said, "Let me go or I will challenge you to a fight." But Robin Hood didn't let her go through so they began to fight until Robin Hood got a scar on his cheek and Marian got her arm slashed. They stopped fighting and Robin Hood told his true name and their eyes met and they recognized each other. Then Robin Hood showed his outlaw friends to Marian and now Robin Hood's arch enemy is Sir Guy.

By Filip Henriksson

Once upon a time there lived a girl called Maid Marian. One day Marian's father demanded Marian to marry Sir Guy. Marian didn't want to marry Sir Guy so she kept arguing with her father. After Marian and her father stopped arguing Marian told her father if Sir Guy comes then she will leave. When Sir Guy came Marian disguised as a boy anxiously went into Sherwood Forest. Then a boy called Robin Hood saw Marian. He asked Marian for some money.
But Marian refused to give Robin Hood some money. So she pulled out her sword and wanted to fight. So Robin Hood pulled out his sword and they started to fight. They both stopped when Marian had a gashed arm and Robin Hood had a cut cheek. After that they gazed into each other's eyes and realized that they knew each other and Robin asked Marian if she could join Robin's gang. Then the cruel Sir Guy became Robin's sworn ENEMY!

By Isabel Henchman



This is the story of when Robin and Marian finally meet. Once long ago in the time of kings and queens there lived a lovely maid called Marian. One day her father King John kicked her dearest friend Robin out. Later that year her father forced her to marry somebody. The king and his servants wanted her to marry Sir Guy but Marian was having none of it. She swore she would leave if she had to marry him. So when Sir Guy came Marian slipped out disguised as a boy. Everything went well until she came to an old crooked bridge. . . Robin had been looking for rich travellers and seeing a fit, young and healthy fellow surprised him. He demanded her to tell him her name but she refused to. Just then Marian drew her sword and Robin did to and they fought until Robin had a cut cheek and Marian had a gashed arm. Then Robin demanded her name and as they looked into each other's eyes they realized who they really were. Marian joined Robin and his merry men and they lived happily ever after.

By Jake Christopher

A long time ago there was a girl called Marian. She wanted to marry Robin Hood. But her father said "You will marry Sir Guy and that is final" Her dad yelled. Maid Marian said "No way!"
"If Sir Guy steps his foot in our house I will go into Sherwood Forest," snapped Marian. Then Sir Guy came into their house. So Marian disguised as a boy set off to Sherwood Forest. At the same time Robin Hood was looking for a wealthy guest. Then they meet again " Let me pass," demanded Marian. They got into a fight. Soon later they got injured Marian had a cut arm and Robin had a sore cheek. Then Robin stopped. He told Marian his true identity. Then they remembered each other and how lonely they had been. Robin asked if she would like to join Robin and his friends and she said, "Yes". From then on Sir Guy was Robin's sworn enemy.

By Lachlan Ross

A long time ago in a town called Nottingham, hey wait a minute do you know Robin Hood and Maid Marian? Well this is their story.
Maid Marian was Robin's next door neighbor. One day Marian was having an argument with her father "But Papa." she protested " I don't want to marry Sir Guy!" "I want you to!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!" her father roared. "But I don't." "Yes you do!" "No I don't!!!!!!" "Yes you do!!!!!!" Finally Marian said "Fine but if he sets one foot in the house I'm out of here!!!!!!"
But he did, you're probably wondering who did, Sir Guy of course! So Marian decided to sneak out disguised as a boy to Sherwood Forest. As she went she bumped into a stranger, "let me past," she roared. He chuckled. So she drew her sword and had a fight, but they soon stopped when the stranger had a gashed cheek and Marian a scratched arm. But then they finally managed to look in to each other's eyes. "Yes," they cried and embraced. So Sir Guy became Robin's worst enemy.

Once upon a time there was a maid named Marian. She lived in a castle. Her father wanted her to marry Sir Guy. Sir Guy is a horrid man. Marian's father persuaded her to but Marian said no. Marian shouted out, "I am not marrying that man! If he sets foot in this house I will run away." She complained so much that her father just could not bear to hear listen to her any longer.
That morning Sir Guy came crashing through their house. Marian heard him and had a billion ideas. She dressed up like a boy and took a razor sharp sword. She rushed out to Sherwood Forest. As she was walking along a path, Robin Hood came out of nowhere. Robin did not know it was Marian. He thought she was a lad. Marian did not recognise Robin either. Marian drew her sword out and shouted "Let me through!"
"No!" said Robin. He drew out his sword and there were crashing and smashing of swords in Sherwood Forest. They were well matched. They only stopped when Robin had a cut cheek and Marian a gashed arm. Robin then asked Marian if she would like to join the gang. Marian said yes and they lived together for the rest of their lives.

A long time ago on a sunny day the king and his daughter were having an argument. The king wanted Maid Marian to marry Sir Guy. But Marian said if Sir Guy put one foot in the house she would run away. Sir Guy came and she ran away in the forest. There she saw Robin Hood and they didn't recognize each other. They both drew their swords and had a fight. In the fight Robin cut Marian's arm and Marian cut Robin's cheek. When Robin had a cut cheek they stopped fighting and recognized each other. Finally Marian and Robin lived together in Sherwood Forest.

By Nicholas King

That time it was hard, Marian's father wanted Marian to marry Sir Guy. Marian didn't what to marry Sir Guy. She told her father that if Sir Guy stepped in her house she would run away.
Marian disguised herself as a boy. She went to Sherwood Forest. Then Robin Hood saw Marian. Robin Hood thought that Marian had money. Robin Hood was brave. So then they had a fight. Marian got her sword out. Marian cut Robin Hood on the cheek and Robin Hood cut Marian on the arm. Afterwards they became friends in Sherwood Forest.

By Lizzie Abelman

Once upon a time there lived a girl called Maid Marian. One day Marian and her father were having an argument about Marian marrying Sir Guy, but Marian didn't want to marry Sir Guy, she wanted to marry Robin but her father did not. So Marian said, "If Sir Guy puts one foot in this house I will instantly leave the house and this is the end of this argument oh and one more thing Sir Guy is EVIL!"
So Sir Guy appeared one day and Marian disguised as a boy set off to Sherwood Forest. Suddenly Marian bumped into a strange looking man. "Let me past or we will have to fight," said Marian. So they fought until the strange man had a cut on his cheek and Marian had a grazed arm. The strange man introduced himself as Robin. Then both of them recognized each other and they fell in love. Then they got married. They lived happily ever after and Sir Guy became Robin's ENEMY!

By Petra Deacon

Once upon a time long, long ago there lived a girl called Marian. One day Marian had a fight with her father about Marian marrying Sir Guy. Then Marian shouted "If Sir Guy steps foot in this castle I'm out the door," Then she strolled out of the room. One night Sir Guy sneaks in, when Marian saw Sir Guy, she sneaked out looking like a boy. The next day Marian woke up and she found herself in Sherwood Forest, suddenly Marian heard something in the distance, suddenly a man jumped out of a tree.
Quickly she took out her sword and shouted, "Let me pass this instant." Then the man said, "Give me your money then I'll let you pass " said the man.
"NO, " shouted Marian. Suddenly the man got out his sword and they started fighting. After a few minutes, the man had a cut cheek and Marian had a gashed arm. One minute later the man told Marian his name. Robin Hood took Marian to his friends and shared their adventures together Sir Guy became Robin's arch enemy forever.

A long time ago on a very sunny day there lived a girl called Maid Marian and her dad lived in a castle next to the woods.
Once Marian's dad said to Marian "You have to marry Sir Guy'" But Sir Guy was mean like Prince John. So she didn't marry Sir Guy. She argued with her dad.
Then Marian went to the woods. Robin saw Marian first, he thought that Marian had some money. So he fought for the money with a sword and Marian took her sword. Marian got a cut on the arm and Robin got a cut on the cheek. Finally Robin recognized that Maid Marian lived next door. Robin and Marian went to the woods. Marian joined Robin's friends in Sherwood Forest and did not marry Sir Guy.

Once upon a time there was a grand house. This whole house belonged to a rich man who had a daughter called Marian. Marian was so beautiful that every man kept begging her father if they could ask Marian's hand in marriage. But the rich man had already told a horrible man named Sir Guy that he would be the one to marry Marian.
When Marian heard all of this she was livid. "I will run away as soon as he comes!" That night Marian tiptoed down stairs and into the cellar. Marion cut her hair, grabbed a sword and disguised as a boy fled through the night. Marion rode through Sherwood until she came to a wooden shack. The shack belonged to Robin Hood but Marian didn't realize that in the first place. Marian climbed down her horse and tied him to the tree that stood outside the shack. Marian burst inside. The shack only had a table, chairs and a hammock. There was no food in there so Marian unpacked her own supper.
Meanwhile Robin Hood was hunting some of the king's deer when he saw Marian's horse outside his own shack. Robin Hood was shocked, he burst inside the shack. That moment Robin Hood and Marian were locked in a battle. Sherwood was filled with the sound of clashing swords through the night until they had hurt themselves. "Now it is time to stop fighting and be friends," Robin Hood told Marian. Suddenly they gazed into each other's eyes and fell in love.

Once upon a time there lived a girl called Marian; her dad wanted her to marry Sir Guy while Marian would not like to. Marian and her dad got mad and had a fight.
One day she disguised herself as a boy, and went into the Sherwood Forest. She saw a guy and his name was Robin. They got into a fight, Robin had a cut on his cheek and Marian had a cut on her arm. Just then Robin noticed it was Marian and they linked arms. Then Marian became a fighter with Robin and Sir Guy became Robin's enemy.

A long time ago there was a man called Robin Hood. Robin Hood got kicked out. But before he got kicked out he had a friend called Marian. Marian's dad and Marian had a big fight about marrying Sir Guy. But Marian didn't want to marry Sir Guy. So Marian said she would go to the forest if Sir Guy came to the house and Sir Guy did come. So Marian disguised as a boy went into the forest. When she got there she saw Robin but did not recognize Robin. So they fought with their swords. When Robin got a cut cheek and Marian got a gashed arm Robin called a halt and recognized Marian and Marian recognized Robin. So Marian joined Robin and the merry men.

A long time ago in a town called Nottingham lived a girl, a very rich girl and she was called Maid Marian.
One day Marian's father and of course Marian were arguing about who Marian should marry. Marian's father thought that she should marry Sir Guy but Marian didn't, she thought that Sir Guy was mean like Prince John. So Marian promised if Sir Guy took one step into the castle Marian would go into Sherwood Forest and fight.
And you know what Sir Guy did turn up so Marian set foot, (disguised as a boy) into Sherwood Forest to fight.
On her way through she met a man and that man was looking for a wealthy guest and that man who was looking for a wealthy guest was called Robin Hood.
Now Robin didn't recognize Marian because she was dressed as a boy. Now they decided to fight. They fought and fought till Marian had a gashed arm and Robin a cut cheek.
Finally they looked into each other's eyes and found out that they knew each other so they linked arms and since Marian turned out to be a successful fighter she decided to join the Merry men and Robin, and Marian had a lovely life with them.

Adventures in the Epic Citadel

In the dark, dark spooky town in a dark, dark spooky street lived nobody. It was so spooky all the people had run to another peaceful land where they could die in peace. A dragon might come again and scare me away but he can't come or fly that quickly, because of that I can run to my boat and row really quickly. I could hear ghostly whispers like crazy humans running and bumping into things. After that I didn't only hear some things I saw some things that were very spooky. I thought there was a murderer here who had murdered everybody . . . . . but the dragon took them all.

The Epic Citadel

One spooky afternoon I was walking through a strange world. There was no food, no people and no animals. There was only me and houses. I told myself, "Don't be afraid", but I was afraid anyway.

Suddenly I heard a growl. "Who's there?" I said coldly. I couldn't believe my eyes it was dra…drag…drago…dragon! I ran for my life.

"Get away fire breath!" I screamed.

"RAAA," it said, then I realized all the people were dead because of the dragon.

Then a spear and shield caught my eye. I snatched the spear and shield and I slashed the dragons horn "RRRRAAAAAAA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!" The dragon was so angry he was on fire! He spewed out a fire bolt which was as big as two thousand houses! I ran to the river and dived in. I saw the dragon's fire bolt and it exploded the whole town! I was furious, I was going to slay that dragon, he was going to wish he was never born. This was going to be the day I slayed the dragon!

I took out my spear and shield and came close to the dragon and made a cut on his back "RRRRAAAAA!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!" he roared and showed his claws. He scratched me, I quickly blocked with my shield but now my shield had splinters.

I was going to be brave. I was going to be strong. I was going to be fast. The dragon breathed his fire bolts at me, I dodged the fire bolts.

"You missed me!" I jeered.

The Epic Journey

When I was down in Epic Citadel, it was dark and spooky. I ran through tunnels, jumped in meandering rivers, walked through towering turrets and jumped over cobbled paths. I wonder what or who made this town so dull. I could not call for help because the next town was 1000,000,000 miles away (or something like that). A few minutes later I came to a castle so I went inside. Running through the castle, I could hear my footsteps echoing. I was going so quickly that I tripped. Soon I decided to leave. I walked through an open door and luckily there was a beach. It was so nice it looked liked a hotel! There were even tents so I decided to stay for the night. The next morning I looked out of the tent and a big pile of snow fell down! That was strange! There was no way out! Except…

"The spade! Dig, dig, dig!" I shouted. At last I was through. Then some money fell.

"Good," I said. Then I found a dinghy store. Next I bought a boat; anyway, I was tired of that zone. Before I left, I said goodbye to the man who sold me the boat and left.

Adventures of the Epic Citadel

As I start my journey through the ancient Epic Citadel, I feel very scared because a long time ago there was a very bad illness that spread across the city and most people died of it. There are huge walls towering over me and I feel very cold because the colours of all the turrets are very wet and grey. There are also birds, all furry and black, flying very happily and extremely free in the nice cool wind. There are also lovely temples with fires burning just in front and inside is amazing. There is a huge statue at the end of the hallway. On the outside of the castle walls are all the war tents and the war grounds and also the sea and rivers.

The Adventures of the Epic Citadel

As I was walking I noticed the land was deserted. I was shaking and shaking. The road was covered with rock but it was bumpy. The place was scary and I heard the wind howling at me. I heard my echo on the wall the sea was howling at me but . . . I had to be brave and bold. There were no people in the village I could hear my footsteps; I could see the doll on the steps; I could feel the stone wall!!!!!! Oh, do not go to the Epic Citadel!

The Epic Citadel

In the light, spooky town of Epic Citadel, which is quite small, I began my fearsome journey across the dry, empty land. At first, I went through a short, tiny tunnel and slowly approached a deserted place with a gigantic, stone castle with towering turrets. I could hear the sound of the lively music and the golden ringing of the church bells 100 meters away from me. I could smell salted mackerels and some baked beans coming from the colourful war tents on the sides of the peeling, castle walls. I felt scared and wanted to go home but deep inside I wanted to explore even more. I cautiously walked across a cement, arched bridge over a raging river with rocks in it. It seemed that everything was really loud but all the people had left because of a hurricane that was there the week before and everything was left in a mess. I went back to my country right away and never ever came back.

The Epic Citadel story

In the dusky spooky town I discovered sewage on the floor which was disgusting. I found these wooden trap doors which led me to the crystal clear sea in the water. At a time it was dark and spooky and I required getting back into town but I forgot the way back! I found an open gate in the castle. So I followed the passageway to the open as fast as I could before it closed. I could hear my foot steps while I was walking. The echoing in the cave was spooky. I discovered the underground cave. Then I started sky diving over the river and I got back to town. Then I saw clothes dangling in the sky. I felt isolated in the street. I wish it wasn't lonely. I actually was digging and digging until I got to the bottom.

The Epic Citadel

I personally am walking through the attractive Epic Citadel, it is beautiful. I have just recognized it is an Argentinean place. There are colourful army tents. It is lovely to watch the towers with giant holes in them. There is a graceful temple with a heroic statue.

I have seen the meandering river and the deserted temple with the beautiful plate of flames. I feel really cold and I smell a cart with food on it. The food on the cart is carrots, beans, green beans, potatoes, peas and kiwi. It is a beautiful city. I am amazed at what I see. It is cobbled rock and it is really gleaming. It is beaming with light.

The Adventures of Epic citadel

As I started my journey I noticed that there weren't any people. I saw a big castle with big gold bells hanging on it. I went into the castle and I saw statues and I smelt delicious pudding. I walked across the winding river and I saw stripy tents, maybe people used to live here. I walked in the village and I saw yellow leaves on the trees and I saw a waterfall. As I was walking I saw a curvy bridge and a lovely blue sky. I heard my footsteps as I was walked along the path.

My Epic Adventure

As I walked into the darkness before me I saw this crystal clear river and some birds soaring in the sky but when I walked around a little further I smelt this horrible smell. I turned and right in front of me was a sewage pipe, so I pinched my nose and walked past.

After a while I explored more of the town but then I got a little bit scared because it was getting a bit quiet in the village. I felt a chill up my spine, so I went back a bit until I didn't feel scared.

After that, I went a different way to before and explored that place instead, but then right in front of my eyes was a really big statue and it said Epic Citadel with a person next to it.

Later I came to a really big temple, inside there was a really old statue but it looked really beautiful and inside it was a really big pearl that gleamed like diamonds sitting in the sun. When I turned around I saw an old house with some fake people in it and when you press a button the people do some jobs and it looks really cool. Then I saw a really big Egyptian and he was holding an ice cream in his hand and it was really funny when I looked at it but then I went out of the temple and I really wanted to water slide on the river so I did. Then I wanted to explore another place of the Epic Citadel but I didn't have time so I went home to have some lunch.

The Epic Journey

I see no people, just statues reaching out as though calling for help, but I ignore them and go on. I ponder over a thought, "where are all the people?" I then throw the thought away and wander into an archway leading to the magnificent castle where I see the ashes of a dead queen which spends prickles down my spine! I then look at the walls and see red liquid oozing down the wall which makes me run and run, until the smell of fresh fruit attracts my attention and I feel suddenly hungry. Under the control of my hunger I go to the smell and find a cave which is weird since I didn't think anyone would be living here. I go in . . . AAAAAHHHHH!!! I know why all the people have left, there's a giant! Help! I am being chased and have come to a dead end. Is this where it ends? Apparently it is . . .

The Epic Citadel

Once in a ghastly and horrible town I was wandering around and I found a letter. I opened it. It said get out of town or I'll eradicate you today. So I ran and ran. I passed archery places and even shops with lots of food in them. I had to swim across the rivers with fish. As well I saw dead bodies along the way. I met a villain disguised as an old woman begging for money. Because I was generous I threw a couple of pounds at her. When I looked back she had vanished into thin air.

The Epic Citadel

I see nothing, no people, I'm all alone. I hear a noise. As I walk closer to the sound I realize it's just a waterfall. The path is very rusty I can't bear to put my feet back on there but I have to. The river is bubbling and I also see the river shine that means I could see my reflection in it. As I stared into the river a little fish jumps up. I walk along and I see a big castle with white and blue stripes. Down on my feet there is some grass as green as a green apple. I don't realize that I am walking on a beautiful bridge. I feel really scared and then I smell something it smells very like smoke. I look above me and I see shapes in the sky. There is a sweet sound that's when I think Epic Citadel is a wonderful place.

The Epic Citadel

As I started walking through the city no one was there. As I went through I found towering turrets and a food cart but still no one was there. Every one was at battle.
The kids were sick, people were starting to attack but no one could rescue them so they didn't stay. They left every thing you could imagine but now they were back.
All of a sudden, I saw ships coming back. I started running out of the village and never came back.

The Epic Citadel

I personally am walking through the ancient town of Epic Citadel. It is very spooky… It's frightening because there are no people; the only moving things are me and flying birds. It is scary, everything is mysterious! I can only hear my footsteps and water. I have no company because there are no people. With no company I was even more scared; this may be the scariest day of my life! I can smell fish from the grocery, no one owns it, but I am too scared to take some. It's breezy too but that doesn't cheer me up, I'm too scared.
I go to the castle because I think it might be cozier but it is just scarier. I tell myself it's spooky everywhere I go, I'm really scared now! There are tents but no one inside. I reach a river; I can hear my feet splashing. I follow the river and almost fall down a waterfall! I go back to the tents. I go to the door but there are just bars, so I go out .....

Adventures of the Epic Citadel

When I was walking though the Epic Citadel I was alone. There was nobody but me; the people must have ran away. There were big buildings with statues and glass stones. The burning fire around me was light but also had some dark. The beautiful meandering river slowly goes sailing alone to the sea. As I was walking around the stalls there were strange signs, but no interest to me. The fruit stall had lots of big smelly fruit and old doors. It was super quiet and calm in the city. Right at that moment I felt scared because there must have been a dragon in the town and he might eat me. I smelt fish, I saw lots of birds screeching and the echoes from that told me there was no one there. But at that moment I heard a roar and fire. It was so far away it was a very low noise, so I had time to escape before he ate me! From now on I would never come back.

The Epic Citadel

As I stepped through into the magical world there was nobody there. All I could hear was the whistling wind. I walked into a castle, it was huge, and I saw a statue of God. After I went to the river there was a tall bridge and I went across. Next I got a good view from the bridge. On the other side of the bridge were some tents and they were big ones. Then I went to a long street, it was a bit smelly. I went into the castle again but this time I saw dogs, and the sea with falling washing lines; in the streets was washing lines hanging from the building.

The great adventures of Epic Citadel

As I followed the path into the city I started to notice lots and lots of bright colourful tents and when I looked inside them there wasn't even a person inside any of them. As I walked further along the path it led me to the inside of a castle. It had shimmering gold all over the floor. I felt amazed I had never seen anything like that in my whole entire life. Standing outside the castle I smelt fresh fruit and vegetables coming from markets with red, blue and green sequins flashing and sparkling in the bright yellow sun.

Adventures of the unhappy ending

The first thing I noticed was that there were no people in the village, but there was washing, food and sewage. I felt scared and unsafe; what if the dragon swooped down and killed me? Suddenly I heard a roar, could it be the dragon? I felt horrified, terrified and alarmed and too scared to explain.

It was getting late. The moon was full and I could hear the wolf's howling. I could smell burning and in the air I could see fire. It was the horrifying dragon. I ran inside the temple without thinking twice. In the temple there was a statue of the Epic Citadel.

Explore Epic Citadel

It was quiet; I could not hear a thing but beautiful sounds of music. It was ghostly inside but clear outside. As I came outside, I felt the breeze in my face and I heard the tweeting birds in the sky. But inside it was cold and dark, with a disgusting smell too. As I walked outside again I could hear the clear sound of the river.

The exploration of Epic Citadel...

The bare town of Epic Citadel was freaking me out. I felt a cold breeze from a wind brushing against my timid face. The city of Epic Citadel was deserted. There was nobody around me so I could ask them what had happened around here. I was worried about what had happened to all the people. After another few minutes of exploring Epic Citadel I knew there was a mystery to be solved through the smell of the air.

Then I heard a sound, I don't know what it is. I sniffed for a few seconds. It smelled like black smoke. I couldn't smell any sweetness any more.

Meanwhile my heart was thumping too fast; I couldn't think properly. I had a choice, to run or die. I had to choose to run, I won't die, dying is too painful. Thinking of dying, maybe something like that happened to the people here. Maybe the fire grew so big the people here had to swim away.

Just then the fire went out; there was something mysterious about this land.

I had spent a long time in Epic Citadel. Now I just couldn't stand staying here any longer. So I walked across the land. Luckily there was already a boat by the ocean, I stepped inside the row boat and I swiftly rowed away from this creepy but magnificent, beautiful and empty city. I thought I'd never go there again in case it started over.

The Epic Citadel

I was walking in the middle of the Epic Citadel. It was deserted like the Kalahari Desert. Waving slowly were 94 clothes hangers: green, blue, purple, white, black and yellow. I was afraid because I was by myself. The smell was my favourite, peach, apple and orange from the castle. They gave the warriors good luck.

Dogs were barking loudly and fiercely at cats because they were trying to steal stuff from the dogs. I went down to the water and slipped and fell on a slippery rock, and scratched myself. Then I saw some tents that were yellow, blue, red, black and white. They were shaped as a clown's head and there were nine of them. I could smell roses and sunflowers that were in the garden of the castle. I went in the castle and I saw chandeliers as big as me, and then I saw a suit of armour and a shooting range. A puff of black smoke came right out of the chimney when I walked by. It had a little bit of fire in it and when I looked at it again it was a lot of fire.

On the streets it was deserted, also in the castle there was nobody there. Perhaps there were statues of people who died in the war. The water was flowing very, very fast and really warm. The sea looked really good to swim in. In the sky were swirling birds, hawks and dark grey and white clouds. At night they were black.

Amazing Sights in the Epic Citadel

As I stepped through the magical world I saw amazing sights. I saw lovely grass, colossal cliffs and an incredible stable. I went outside and I saw that actually the castle was huge! My heavens! It's beautiful.

Trees, mountains, rocks, even a stream so I sprinted along it and oh, I almost forgot, I WALKED BY ARMY TENTS!

Birds soared in the sky. Amazing sights of grass!

I continued to the next part of the fortress.

Terrifyingly bandits attack us like a raging bull,
Heavy rocks fall rapidly from a giant mountain,
Emeralds shiny and green, gleam like snake eyes,

Savage roads are so treacherous and cruel,
Ice as cold as the North Pole,
Lovely trees surrounding us and they protect us from the mid-day sun,
Killing packs of wild ferocious dogs,

Rocks as sharp as crocodiles' teeth,
Oasis are like welcoming open arms,
Amazing hills and mountains with lovely fragrant smells,
Dangerous nights are as deadly as the sharpest knives.

By Oskar Johnson

T-Thunder is as freaky as the Silk Road,
H-Horrifying rocks on the uneven deadly road,
E-Endless thundery mountains filled with crystal,

S-Sleepy beautiful waterfalls,
I-Insatiable riches which entice you because they gleam,
L-Loud dogs run at traders,
K-Killers killing and murdering people,

R-Rocky roads with slippery rocks,
O-Obeying slaves obey their masters,
A-Amazing jewels in caves,
D-Deadly rocks come from mountains.

By Ben Prentice

T-Terrifyingly the route twists like a snake's body,
H-Heavy thunder makes us feel that we have been attacked by a mad, roaring beast,
E-Emeralds glisten like the Northern Lights,

S-Savage bandits kidnap us as if we are their enemy,
I-Ice is as slippery as an eel's skin,
L-Lovely beautiful deserts you pass filled with sand storms as dry as dust,
K-Killing, terrifying, vicious tigers look at you as if you are their prey,

R-Rocks as sharp as knives that would go through you if you fell on them,
O-Oasis as calm as if they have open arms,
A-Amazing mountains that look so good people think they are fake,
D-Dangerous creatures that will kill you as fast as a gun.

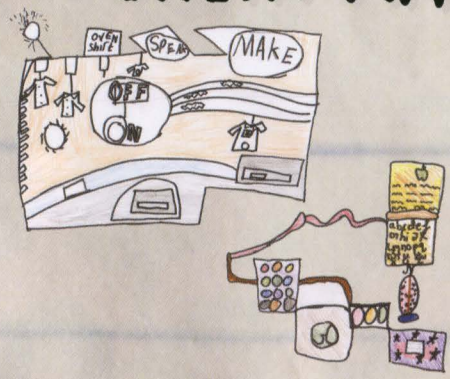
P4-13 PRESENT THEIR AMAZING SHIRT MACHINES!

First of all, when you have an idea, you go to the machine. Second, pull the lever down to 'on', CHUNK. Then press 'speak' and speak into the microphone. Tell your idea to the shirt machine, it will slowly load it all in. Also, you can press 'make' and this will cause it to suddenly POP out, all folded up very neatly. Then it will be ready to send to that special person it is for.
An inventor named Joe made this machine by screwing and slotting everything together. It was very hard to find just the right parts for his machine, but within 5 years, Joe had completed his magnificent shirt machine.

Joe Moore



Emily Harrow

The shirt machine works in a simple way really. To start, simply click on the big green go button with your feet until it turns slowly green. Then, it will turn a very pale blue colour which will take a few minutes while it is loading. But after you have waited patiently, your outstanding t-shirt will pop out in a neatly wrapped star covered with wrapping paper. POP!
The machine is made out of all sorts of interesting stuff like metal, wires, buttons and cables all glued screwed tied nailed hammered and slotted together.

Firstly, type in the kind of amazing shirt you would like to make. Then, slowly slot some fabric in the hole at the front of the brilliant shirt machine. After that, stamp on the huge green button and then the spectacular machine will start making this sound, ZIP ZIP ZIP POP! Finally your shirt will be done, although it doesn't take too long. Hopefully you will have a lot of fun with a shirt from the shirt machine.
WARNING! People under the age of 20 are not allowed to have these shirts because they can get really dangerous!

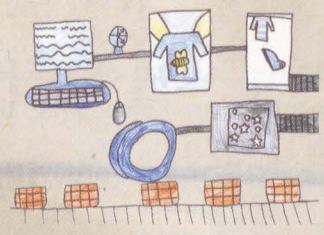
VOOMPERANKERCHANK!

This one of a kind shirt machine was created by a boy named Alexander. Truly successful, this machine is used to create magnificent shirts with awesome magical powers. In a nutshell, it was made by screwing nailing and bashing pieces of metal found around the country, which were put together to make this magnificent machine!
First of all, to start the unique machine, you have to scan the finger prints that belong to Alexander. Secondly, you have to put the resources into the one of a kind shirt machine. Then you have to press the red button, STAMP! But, first you have got to insert a piece of paper with all of the key information on it.

How this fabulous machine got made is extraordinary. First of all, the genius Imogen who made it, gathered all the things up gradually. Some things she found on beaches, some she owned and some she bought. Then very thoughtfully, she drew her ideas of how they should be put together. Next she screwed, glued, nailed and slotted everything together and it made this one of a kind shirt machine.
First of all you type your ideas into the computer carefully and then the ideas go into a box. The timer will sound voomperankerchank!

Imogen Salmon



Alexander Tsai

VOOMPERANKERCHANK! VOOMPERANKERCHANK!

How it works

Press the on button and reform the machine (see diagram). Type in the password and command, the machine will whir, stir and pop! Voila, there's your shirt!

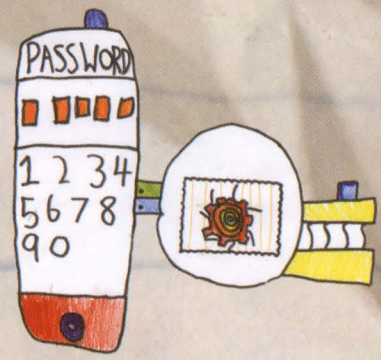
WARNING!

Any sign of a break in and you will get bonked on the head and pulverized.

How it was made

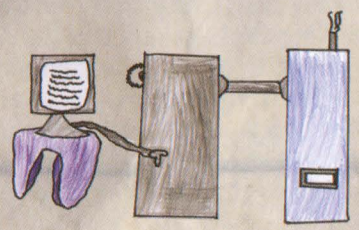
This was made by an ingenious child inventor called Alessandra Walsh. If you too feel you are up to the challenge, the following steps explain how this shirt machine can be made:

- Send off for a mini computer and reset it to take commands in only.
- Put in a new button and control it to fold things in and out.
- Connect a chip to the computer, to that add another disk of unique style.
- Get whirs, spokes, bits and fits. Cram those in the disk.
- Add a conveyor belt to the disk and there you have it, a shirt machine!



Alessandra Walsh

ZIP ZIP ZIP

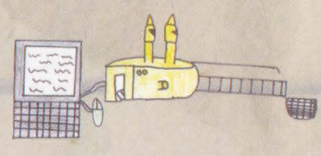


The Shirt Machine goes through an extremely difficult process when making each shirt. This extraordinarily designed machine is one of a kind. It is made out of metal even though it is glued, screwed, nailed, zipped and slotted together. It works by typing the shirt design in to the computer, stating what it looks like. Then, you have to press the go button. Beep! For about 10 seconds the machine makes an odd sound... VROOMPERANKACHANK, VROOMPERANKACHANK... ZIP, ZIP, ZIP and BOP! Out comes the clean, brand new shirt, wrapped in spotty wrapping paper.

Iwan Thomas

Making the shirt machine was a complicated process that included all sorts of metal. An extraordinary inventor named Adrian Cheung made the shirt machine by the age of 8! To make the shirt machine, it was screwed, glued, slotted and nailed all together. To operate the machine, you firstly have to type your ideas in the computer and push the switch. BEEP. Secondly, you wait until the funnels sound, WHOOSH. After that, the shirt machine rumbles, meaning it is getting ready.

Adrian Cheung



How it was made

The Shirt Machine was slowly made from a variety of different things such as scrap bits, some bits sent from various websites and other bits brought in by the sea. Screwing, slotting, nailing and gluing was how this magnificent creation was gradually but cleverly put together.

How it works

First, insert a boring T-shirt into the large tube, ''PLOP!''

Then, type in a command in on the computer.

Next, choose a colour and add in any other objects you will need, PLOP, PLOP, PLOP.

After that stamp on the big green "GO" button, ''BOOM-CHIC-A-BOOM-BOOM!''

Then, smack the ''Wrap'' button; wait for the shirt to come out and VOILA, it should result in a personalized, shirt machine shirt!

POP!

POP!

Lydia Lane

Ashwin Gopalan

This magnificent machine was built by Ashwin, an extraordinary inventor!
The machine has solar panels (that are environmentally friendly), pipes, spinning bits, sliding bits, pushing bits, squashing bits and pulling bits! Making this shirt machine was extremely difficult and complicated because it took ten years to find all the pieces and then slot them, screw them and glue them all in the perfect place! Gradually he made it as it was a tiring process. So, you can see how unique this shirt machine is.

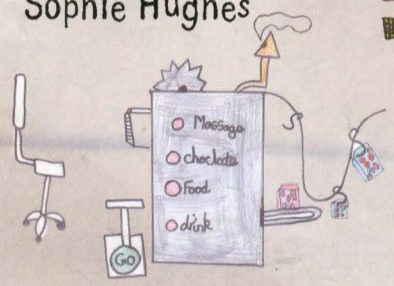
How it works

It works like this. You step on a GO button, BEEP! While stepping on the go button type in what type of shirt you want, CLICK CLICK. It's quite quick really, it just takes a little while. Also, it makes a few noises like, VOOMPARANKACHANK! VOOMPERANKACHANK! ZIP ZIP ZIP ZIP ZIP, BOP!!

CLICK

The shirt machine was created and assembled by a most humble girl called Sophie at the young age of nine. She went to the beach every day to look for all sorts of odd little bits and bobs. So, she gathered all the little bits and bobs she had ever collected and started to make the shirt machine. It was an extraordinary little thing and was set to be a big success.
Now the shirt machine was made from a series of bits and bobs. It has a leaver to make the machine start as well as a few more buttons, which give chocolate, massages and coffee. At the end of the machine is a conveyer belt which holds onto the packages until the washing line with the 's' shaped hooks grabs on to them. These hooks hook up the packages while the line slowly and steadily brings them to the post office. As the machine starts it goes, "voomprankachang,voomperankachang" then it goes "zibzibzibzibzibzibzibzib, bop"! Out it comes on to the conveyer belt, neatly wrapped in horsy wrapping paper.

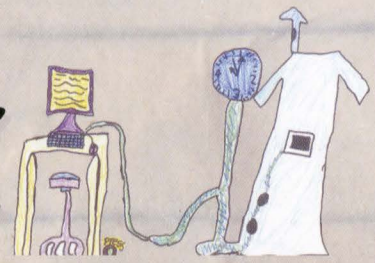
Sophie Hughes



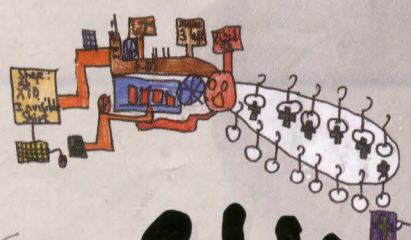
This extraordinary, magical shirt machine is one of a kind. It was made by nailing cogs, dials and bits that were sent to the inventor, Daisy Collins. One of the most famous shirts that Daisy has ever made is the Kitty Cat shirt that was made for a very special Princess.
First of all, to start the machine, type in your idea into the computer and press the go button. BOOM! The popular, unusual, machine flows into the dial. That makes it hot so that in the winter it will keep you warm and cosy. Then the machine designs the shirt, and then it gets wrapped neatly in purple and yellow polka dot wrapping paper. VOILA! It comes out of the machine ready to send off!

Daisy Collins

CHUNK



An inventor named Sena Clarke made the machine by collecting all types of bits and bobs. For example he collected: sliding bits, squashing bits, pulling bits, pushing bits and turning bits. Slowly I fitted them together and finally made THE SHIRT MACHINE!
This Shirt Machine works by mainly the computer. To operate it type what you want on the computer, then you stamp on the 'go' button. No earlier than a minute will the shirts come bursting out.
The Shirt Machine is environmentally friendly and solar paneled. The T- shirts come out by machine's mouth and hang on to the railings. They fall of the railings when it is turning. Be careful to insert the cotton and the wrapping paper before you start.
If you turn on the machine then type in the wrong information this will cause a big problem and the machine will make a lot of nonsense shirts straight away, which keep repeating the word 'wrong'.



Sena Clarke

CHUNK

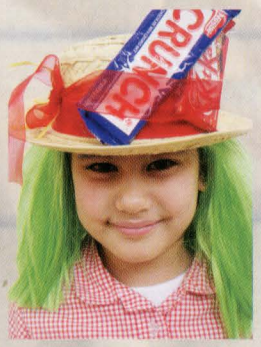
Joe Share

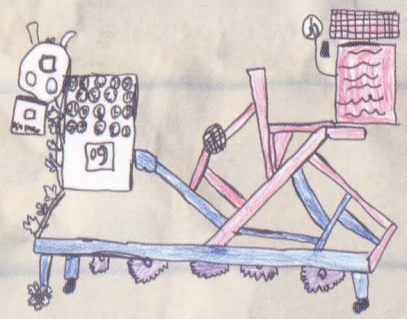
First of all, the excellent shirt machine works by you deciding on the shirt you want to make. Then you hit the go button which causes a Scalextric car to hit which causes lots of noises. VOOMPERRAKCHANK! VOOMPERRAKCHANK! Then, ZIP ZIP POP!
Joe Share the inventor made the machine once he had found all the pieces in England. The inventor collected the parts including a plane wing that had crashed, some gauges and tyres from a crashed b52 jetfighter and tonnes and tonnes of fabric. Joe also found on the same plane, an old boot and some metal.
The inventor has sold about 600 shirts and they are unlike in any way. There is a plane shirt, a helicopter shirt and a very clever shirt if you are late for the bus.

Eddie Bischoff

Sticks and stones were glued together with metal, screws and light bulbs to make this machine. A young boy called Eddie made this machine and it took 9 years to build. This means he was only 1 month old when he began to make this spectacular machine.
First you have to put a plain shirt into the machine. Then it will make a sound, "bum pa rack a chance... zip zip zip zip zip zip zip, pop!" It will only take 5 seconds. There you go - your beautiful shirt is made, wrapped carefully in spotty red and yellow wrapping paper.

WARNING
If you stamp on the green button wrong, it will explode! Then there's your button gone so nobody can make a shirt ever again...





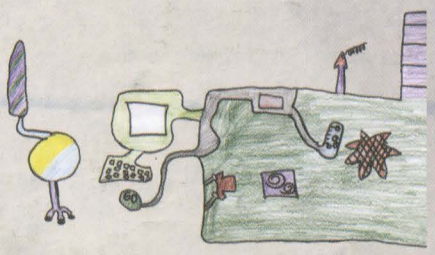
Alex Lomas

BOP

The shirt machine was made by a young girl called Alex. She found some bits in a scrap yard, down a well, in a rubbish dump and she even found some special modern techno bits that she had to send off for. The shirt machine needed various bits gluing, bits squashing and bits pulling together to make it. This machine is one of a kind. It is a real money maker- it is extraordinary, popular and astonishing. This machine is brilliant!
As it works, the shirt machine goes "vooperankajank, vooperankajank!" And, to finish it goes "zib zib zib zib zib, pop!!" It is really quick when you think about it! While the machine makes the shirt, Alex nibbles on a piece of chocolate because it helps her concentrate on her new creations. She is really ace because she is 8 years old and she made the shirt machine on Christmas eve all on her own.

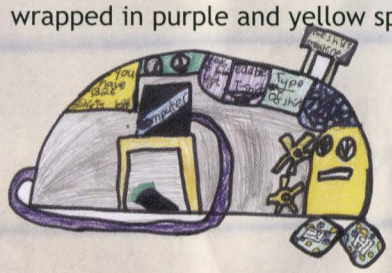
One day 10 years ago Katy made a truly extraordinary machine called the 'Shirt Machine'. It is made out of a lot of different and interesting objects, the objects she used were very unusual. For instance she used: pipes, clogs, metal and timers. Here's how it works, first she pulls down a massive lever so it's ON. Eating some chocolate and stamping on a big green button turns on all of the interesting things inside the Shirt Machine. Next she types what t-shirt she wants, CLICK.
Now the t-shirt is nearly created and the machine makes a series of noises for instance: BOOM! VOOM VOOMARANGACHANG VOOM!
When the t-shirt is done she wraps it in exclusive Scottish wrapping paper and writes her amazing discovery in her dairy. She has made a lot of brilliant shirts here are some of them: The One and only Invisible shirt so if it is cold you can still show off your favorite shirt and be warm, the edible for when you're on the train and LOADS MORE!

Katy Wood



BEEP

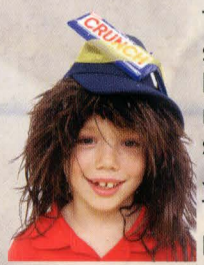
This shirt machine is simply astounding according to the talented worker who made this lovely shirt machine! In addition, this machine is able to carry a large amount of multi-coloured fabric to make these special shirts.
It only took Anya a few months to find all the bits and bobs she needed such as: timers, sliding bits, slippy bits, bouncy bits, long bits and other lots of other interesting bits!
This machine won various prises and lots and lots of money. Gradually when she thinks that a shirt would fit someone perfectly, she goes into an old shed next to her house and gets to work!
Stamping on the big green go button beneath her feet, it then turns green and then very pale blue, only taking a few minutes to load. But after you have waited for a short time, your T-Shirt will appear neatly wrapped in purple and yellow spotty wrapping paper.



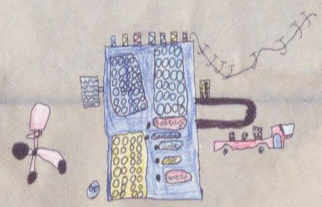
Anya Oliver

Tom Mowbray

Tom Mowbray thought of something bigger and even quicker. So this is his very special shirt machine.
The shirt machine is powered by computer, meaning when you start your computer, the machine starts up too. It goes, 'CHUGA CHUG CHUGA CHUG CHUGA' and then 'BRRRRRRRRR...BOOM!' Next, the shirt goes through a series of circular pipes, tubes and electric boxes. After only 30 seconds, the neatly wrapped shirt comes skidding out of a clear pipe and goes into a box. Then it flies down a lump of metal and then it is pushed into a truck which delivers the shirt to all of the different houses.
The most famous shirt of all is the TV shirt. With two Wii remotes, a TV, a disc packet, a channel number pad, an on and off button and a volume switch, this shirt is very technical!



The shirt machine was made up of hundreds of different strange objects such as pipes, cans, spikes, buttons and rulers. It's pretty complicated actually. But amazingly, it was invented by a boy at the young age of 9. His name is Jared and he is believed to have a bulging brain! The shirt machine is definitely a one of a kind thing as well as being very famous and popular. At first, the shirt machine was most unpopular, however now hundreds of people are getting in contact with Jared, to get their very own special shirts.
The shirts are similar to the machine in that each shirt is one of a kind. The most famous shirt has to be the musical that Jared made especially for the Duke for when he went to important posh dinners so if nobody knew he was there, he could simply press a button on the sleeve that would activate drums, trumpets and trombones to announce his arrival.



Jared Sharman

I've never seen Eliza before, but I do know quite good things about her. Once she made an amazing machine called the shirt machine, the shirt machine is a great, it makes lots and lots of different types of shirts such as the edible shirt, the flying shirt, the musical shirt and lots and lots of other very unique shirts.
Eliza found lots of bits to make the shirt machine such as, pulling bits, screwing bits, pushing bits, sliding bits and lots of other very special bits.
Now when Eliza gets an idea, she types it into her computer and then she stamps on the big green go button.
Then the Shirt Machine makes a very strange noise, 'Boomp A Rank A Chang Boomp A Rank A Chank!" Then to finish, 'Zib Zib Zib Zib Zib Zib Zib, POP!" Out of a little slip comes the brand new shirt.

Eliza Sherry

WHOOSH!

Firstly insert the plain white shirt into the fat tube. Now press the GO button. Next it will ask what type of special feature you want to add. Then you just tell the shirt machine what type of special feature you want. After that the machine will carefully wrap the shirt. If the shirt isn't right it will be reused but unfortunately the special feature will be taken off. If it is fine it will pop out and fall into the boot of your car. But, the machine will stop when the boot is full and the amazing shirts will be taken to your awaiting customers. So now you know how the magnificent shirt machine works...

Bill's New Frock by P4-14

Bill Simpson is a boy who wakes up one morning and discovers he has turned into a girl. The book explores how people treat him differently as a girl.

Since it was wet play at lunch time all the class had to read comic books. At first Bill was reading one called Horse and Pony and he skimmed through the pages. It was really boring so he asked a girl called Astrid to swap with him.
Astrid replied, "No thank you." Someone else said, "I will swap with you."
So they swapped, but then Rohan shouted, "Give it to me!" Bill did not want to let him have it so Rohan tried to get it off him and it ended up being torn in half.
Bill screamed. "Look at what you've done to the comic." Immediately, he punched Rohan and they had a big fight. Nobody had seen such an enormous fight in the class room.
Peter Katiforis

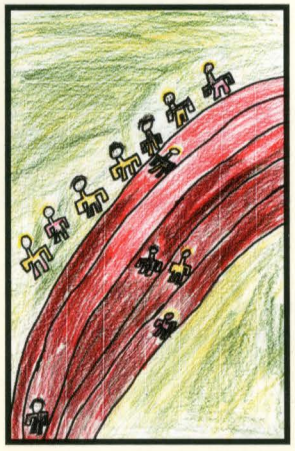
Bill's mum put a pink frock with shell buttons on him and then rushed downstairs. So Bill had to go to school in it feeling very silly and then he heard whispering.
It was Mean Malcolm saying, "Oh look at that pretty dress. How nice! You better not get it dirty."
Bill ran over to an old lady to cross the road beside her.
"Come and hold my hand little girl," she kindly said.
Then she grabbed Bill's hand and they crossed the road together away from Mean Malcolm.
Then he heard the headmaster talking to the boys who were late and soon it was his turn to go in and get told off because he was not on time. Surprisingly, the headmaster was nice to him because he did not realise that Bill was really a boy.
India Woolhouse

It was raining outside at lunch break and they were all reading comics when suddenly it was sunny again.
Mrs Collins said, "Let's have running races outside'' and then everybody ran outside. They had lots of races. Paul was always coming in last. He had this disease when he was little so he couldn't run but he still had fun.
When it was the finals, Mrs Collins let Paul be included because he would never usually make it into them. Bill was in the finals too with Astrid, Kirsty and Talilah. Bill was lying on the ground next to the girls who were planning to make Paul win because his mum would be so happy and proud of him.
Guy Osborn

One day Bill woke up and found that he was a girl. To make it even worse, his mother came into the room and told him to wear a pink frilly frock with really fiddly shell buttons.
Bill left for school but when he got there he was a bit late. The headmaster said, "Come on little girl, we don't want to be late for assembly do we?" Soon it was time for English and to his astonishment he was writing more than he usually did and it was neater than usual. However, Mrs. Collins did not think that it was neat at all and she said that Philip's work was neater when Bill's was twice as neat as Philip's. Later that morning it was reading time and Bill was chosen to be the lovely Rapunzel.
Harriet Lomas

When Bill was passing the art supplies cupboard the headmaster said, "You look like a sensible little girl. Do you mind taking these little ink bottles down to the office?" Before Bill could answer, the headmaster had already plopped the little ink bottles in his hand, shut the cupboard and walked away.
Very carefully, Bill cupped his hands into a sphere after placing the tiny ink bottles in them, and kept walking. When he had only walked a few more metres he saw the nurse trudging up the stairs.
"Be a darling and take these files to the office for me."
Before Bill could even open his mouth the nurse had already dumped the files on top of the ink bottles.
"And make sure you don't drop them because they're in alphabetical order."
"Not your best move," Bill whispered under his breath.
Lois Andrew

Bill studied his reflection in his mirror. Was it just his imagination, or was his hair a bit longer? Then he looked at his frock again. It had fiddly shell buttons and a pink sash. Bill hated it, especially as it was covered with lace.
A sudden thought raced through his mind. "I'm a girl!" thought Bill worriedly, "and that is the only reason why my mum would put me in a frock and call me Poppet, she never calls me that!"
When he went down for breakfast his dad came and kissed him. "Goodbye my little honey puff," he said. "Honey puff?" murmured Bill under his breath. "He never calls me that."
"Keep that frock clean when you go to school," said his dad.
"Don't forget to bring your library books to school," reminded his mum as Bill ate his cornflakes quickly, spilling some milk down his frock as he did so.
Lana Davies



Paul was the slowest runner ever in the school so Mrs. Collins let him race on his own because she was feeling nice. Paul, Astrid, Talilah, Kirsty and Bill were in the finals but Mrs. Collins had to go and get something. Soon the children were all making a plan and it was a plan for Paul to win. The idea was that they all had to trip over or have a stitch and do it in style so Paul wouldn't suspect things.
It was only Paul and Bill left in the race and Bill was zooming ahead, but he just couldn't get the stitch. He could only win. When Paul finished everyone was cheering for him and all the girls were glaring at Bill. He explained that Paul would have suspected something. All the girls agreed and then ran away.
James Chalk

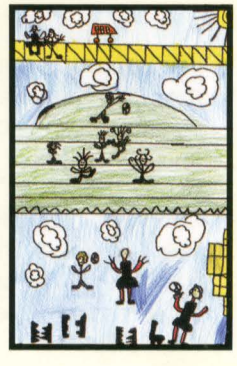
Bill Simpson's mum made Bill wear a frock and sent him to school. His teacher, Mrs. Collins, said, "Let's go and have some races."
Happily, Paul shouted, "I'm through to the finals." The four other people in the finals were Astrid, Kirsty, Talilah and Bill and now Paul.
Astrid said, "Let's all let Paul win the races and I will pretend to have a sore foot and you guys have to pretend to have a stitch, OK?" So it was time for the final race. Halfway in the race Astrid shouted, "Owwww! My foot!" So she was out of the race and then the other two groaned, "Ooooh, I have a stitch!"
Now there was only Bill and Paul. Bill was supposed to pretend to have a stitch but he didn't. Soon Bill was about 10 steps from the finish line and Paul was a metre behind him when Bill.....
Alex Slater

The janitor usually left the window open a bit. Bill came in and said, "I bet I could get that ball over there into that window. What will I get if I do it?" "A Wumpy Choo," said Talilah. He took the challenge.
So when the ball bounced over to him he caught it right in the palm of his hands.
The boys tried to snatch it from Bill but they just couldn't.
Finally one boy came over and said, "What's the ball worth?"
"A Wumpy Choo," answered Bill. The boy reached into his pocket to get the Wumpy Choo. As he showed him the Wumpy Choo Bill looked in horror. "It's a 1p chew," said the boy as he handed it over.
Jemima Kenyon

Bill passed about nine boys before he reached Rohan, the boy with the ball.
By now, everyone had turned to stare. Bill didn't like this a bit. He grabbed the ball from Rohan, but Rohan had a good grip on the ball so now they were trying to make the other let go. To everyone's surprise, Rohan loosened his grip on the ball. "Why didn't you say so? Here" Rohan dug his hand into his pocket and handed Bill a square the size of a penny wrapped in a white paper wrapper. "What's this?" Bill asked, puzzled. "What you asked for. My very last 1p chew." He slowly walked off the pitch, and if there weren't as many people there, Bill would've cried.
Kiera Moran

"If you kick a ball through the window you get a Wumpy Choo,'' Kirsty, one of the girls in the gang, said.
The boy wasn't taking care of his Wumpy Choo. Bill guessed it was an animal.
Bill said, "I will kick a football through the cloakroom window and get the Wumpy Choo."
"Done!'' said the other boy. He started digging in his pocket and finally he pulled out something.
"What is that?" asked Bill.
"It is my very last 1p chew," the boy explained.
When everyone started laughing Bill realised that he had been tricked and started walking to the cloakroom where he sat down and started crying. He would never make that mistake again. Never ever, in his whole entire lifetime.
Oliver Corso

Bill Simpson, a normal boy, was living a normal life until one day he turned into a girl. When he got to class he was asked to take a key to the office and on the way he saw the headmaster again who asked him to take some coloured inks to the office for him.
"OK," said Bill.
Next he met the nurse who asked him to carry some yellow slips, which were in alphabetical order, to the office without dropping them. Finally, he met the gym teacher who asked him to take some tennis balls to the office too. So Bill took the things to the office, but just as he approached it, he tripped and dropped everything. The ink splashed everywhere, the slips scattered and the balls rolled in the ink, but the key stayed in his hand. Soon the secretary came out to help him.
Madeleine Howl



One day, in London, a ten year old boy called Bill Simpson woke up and went to look in the mirror when he noticed he had turned into a girl. He didn't know why yet. After that his mum came rushing in through the bedroom door very quickly and she said, "Come on now you lazy pants. Get your new frock on now." So he got out of bed very slowly and his mum shouted at him furiously, "We don't have all day." In a minute or so he finally got to the mirror and was ready to change. A few minutes later he ran down the stairs and ate some of his breakfast; not all of it, but he did eat some. Meanwhile, his parents were rushing to get out of the door in time for work. Then they came out all together and Bill went to school.
Robbie Bowring

As Bill stood up, the headmaster said strictly, "Give these little bottles of ink to the people in the resources room. But be careful not to drop them, or else." Then the nurse came storming down the hall with lots of papers. "Bill," she said in a rush, "Take these special important papers, but don't drop them at all because they are in alphabetical order." He was almost at the resources room and took very careful steps.
Next the sports teacher came with some balls and put then onto Bill's pile. "Take these to the resources room and don't drop them or they will bounce everywhere and we will lose them." Bill said to himself, "Maybe there might be pockets in this frock so that I can put the ink bottles in them." He searched for pockets. None were there.
Andrew Knight

One day Bill was on his way to school in that pink frock when he heard some whistling from Mean Malcolm. After arguing with him at first he then just walked past him stomping in anger.
When he got to school the Head Teacher was at the front gate shouting at the boys who came late (because it was a bit late) but being nice to all the girls who were also behind their time. When it was assembly time, they sang songs and afterwards the Head Teacher called out for four people to come and carry the tables away. Sadly, it was only four boys and no girls were chosen. Next was handwriting in the classroom and his teacher went over and asked Bill, "What is that? You've been chewing on the paper, didn't you have enough breakfast this morning?"
Finlay Scott

The Head Master who knew that Bill was going to the office said, "Take these coloured inks to the office and don't drop them." Going down the stairs he saw his P.E. teacher who was sprinting up the steps while doing jumping jacks. She told him to bring a lot of tennis balls to the office to keep them safe.Then he saw the nurse who told him to take some medical forms to the office and explained that Bill should be careful not to drop them because they were in alphabetical order. As he got to the office, he pushed the door open with his head then he tripped and all the tennis balls went bouncing around the place, the ink fell on him and the medical forms dropped to the floor and went completely out of alphabetical order. Now he lay on the floor and felt embarrassed with the coloured ink all over his pink frock.

One morning Bill found that he had become a girl. On that same day his mum asked him to wear the frock that was her favourite and put it on him. Because of the frock, Bill felt extremely uncomfortable as he made his way downstairs to the kitchen to have breakfast.
After breakfast, he said goodbye to his mum and left to go to school. On the way there, Bill met an old lady who said to him, "Oh, what a lovely cute frock you're wearing." This made Bill turn red with anger but eventually he got to school. Everyone was staring at his pink frock, especially Mean Malcolm. A few minutes later the school bell rang and everyone started to make their way into school.
Amber Dolan

Bill Simpson was an ordinary ten year old boy. So when he woke up one morning, he was astonished that he had turned into a girl overnight.
Even worse, his mum made him wear a pink frock to school! How was he ever going to survive a whole day of school? He was dead!
That day at morning break nobody noticed any difference. Astrid went up to Bill and said, "Hi!" Anyway, once he got to know her, Bill found out she actually was not that bad and soon he really was getting to like her. But then she started blabbing on about how girls were better than boys at everything. Well, that really set Bill off and he wanted to punch her in the face, but no, he managed to keep it in. He did not want to get into a fight.
Eoin Pickstone

Bill thought the day couldn't get any worse until he saw Mean Malcolm sitting and whistling. So he walked up to him and pushed him into the dustbin and then Mean Malcolm's sidekick ran away.
When Bill reached his house his mum looked at him and had a shock.
"What happened to your pink frock? I spent hours cleaning it and now look at it!"
"I can't believe you would do that to such a beautiful pink frock. Just go up to your bedroom and remove it and get changed!"
Instead Bill got undressed and decided to go to bed early because of what type of day he'd had. He absolutely hoped that he would be back to being a boy in the morning.
Tej Sheopuri

Everybody looked around for something that was all pink. "Oh no you don't! I'm not all pink!" Bill protested. "Yes," the teacher mumbled, "fiery hair, pink frock, rich rosy freckles and a nice deep blush. Now come into the middle of the room so everyone can see you." And without a word she grabbed Bill round the wrist and tried to pull him to the middle of the room. Bill reluctantly gave up struggling and allowed himself to be led to the middle of the room where the teacher made him sit on a chair. "There," she said, "all pink." Bill scowled all through the art lesson. The teacher came by. "Stop scowling! You'll ruin everybody's picture." The teacher moved away, Bill was too angry to scowl at the teacher's head.
Seiya Peacock

Bill walked in to the classroom where everyone was staring at him and his pink frilly frock. His teacher, Mrs. Collins asked him to bring a key to the office. Just as he walked through the corridor the head teacher asked him to bring some paints to the office. Later the nurse asked him to give some medical forms to the office and told him not to move them around because they were in alphabetical order. As he was a few metres from the office, the P.E. teacher asked him to bring some tennis balls to the office. Just as he made it to the office, CRASH! The paints spilt, the medical forms went everywhere, the tennis balls bounced up and down, but luckily the key was safe.
Taylor Dees

Bill Simpson was a ten year old boy who had a dad, mum and a sister. One day Bill found that he was a girl and everything seemed to change for him. His mum asked Bill to wear a lovely pink frock to school. After a while his dad came rushing and said, "You look lovely dear!" because, he was late for work. When Bill got to school his teacher asked him to give the secretary the key that she had just handed to him, but he needed to go to the bathroom. So he rushed to the toilets, and when he looked at them, he thought about whether to use the girls' or boys' ones. He thought that the girls' one would be more private so he went to theirs.
Sean Hargreaves

When Bill got to school he went straight to the playground and over to the girl's section. They were talking about what would happen next and if someone kicked the ball through the window you could get the last 'Wumpy Choo'.
Bill said, "I'll do it." So he ran over to the boys' football and grabbed it.
Another boy called Rohan and his friends came over and said, "Give it back, it's ours. I need it for a bet for the last Wumpy Choo."
"OK. Kick it through the window," Rohan suggested. Bill kicked it and he got it through.
"So hand it over," he demanded.
"OK. There's my last 1p chew." Bill felt a shudder along his spine, he'd been tricked again. This was definitely his worst day ever.

P4-15 Travels the Silk Road

Once in Venice there was a fantastic adventurer called Marco Polo and that is me. One of my unbelievable adventures was when I travelled the Silk Road with my dad and uncle. We went over huge mountains and through boiling hot deserts and into gloomy caves. One extraordinary day in the Sahara desert when the Sun was hotter than ever, my dad, uncle and I were riding on our own golden, lumpy camels. I moaned," Can we have a break now, I am boiling?"
My lovely dad replied, "OK! We'll have a break. Is anybody really thirsty for water?"
We all looked in our pockets in the clothes that we had been given by Kublai Khan (a few days before). In my pocket I found a water bottle and a sparkling coin. I showed it to my uncle and dad. My dad gasped. He gave me a cheerful look and spoke with excitement, "Marco you have a gift, Kublai Khan wants you to do something" ...

Ella Doubleday

Eventually, after riding his camel for hours Marco Polo found a small pond of cool, clear water. His dad called to him and waved. Marco Polo was so dehydrated he felt totally sick. Marco Polo's friend said that when they went higher into the mountains that he would feel better. After ten long years Marco Polo finally met Kublai Khan and saw many wondrous sights.

Andrew Ascough

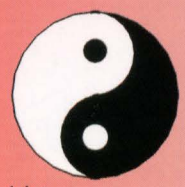
Desperately Marco Polo, Niccolo and Maffeo were trying to get to China. They travelled through some of the most thunderous and mightiest storms ever.
After three long years, shattered and dressed in rags they finally got to China. They were all stunned by all the wonderful sights that they saw and the inventions they came across. I was astonished when I first met Marco and had to tell my father, Kublai Khan the Emperor of China, all about him. I rushed all the way to the palace and whilst still panting for breath told him what I had found out about the Polos.

James Barber

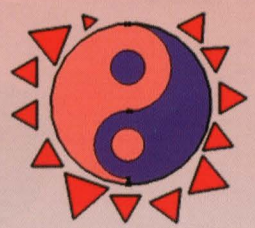
Hi I am Rusty. I was stuck in a sticky old prison with someone called Marco Polo. He was put into jail when he was sailing home to Venice from China. As the days passed I wrote a story about him called the Travels of Marco Polo. This is how it started...
He was a nice young fellow born in Venice. He travelled with his father Niccole Polo and his uncle Maffeo Polo to China by boat, by camel, horse and by walking too. They took the Silk Road.
Once they reached China, they found a fabulous kingdom with jewels all around. It looked stunning from top to bottom. They met the Emperor Kublai Khan. He welcomed them and told them all about Cambaluc (now known as Beijing.)
Polo together with his father and uncle had many adventures and they found extraordinary things like people with tails (monkeys), huge cats with stripes (tigers), nuts the size of heads (coconuts), giant lizards (crocodiles) and mountains of gold, jewels, silver and money!

Noor Mansuri

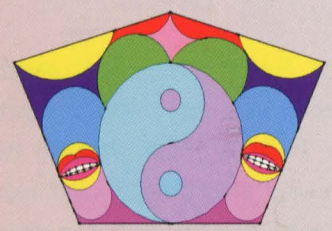
Of course I knew who he was, but he didn't know who I was. I told Marco my name was Tabitha Khan daughter to Kublai Khan.
He asked, "Then why are you here if you are his daughter, surely you know the jungle is no place for a princess?"
"I know but my father was forcing me to get married so I ran away and now I live here." I replied.
I beckoned for Marco to follow me and led him to a little wooden hut I had made, he was impressed. I told him some bad news I had overheard. "When I left China my father came looking for me, but got kidnapped by men with tails."
"Why didn't you go after them then Tabitha?" questioned Marco Polo.
"Well I don't know where they took ..."
Suddenly I heard a loud scream for help.
"That must be my father, "I said ...
Polly Hanning



When Marco Polo finished his Chinese test, I asked him,
"Do you want to explore to find rivers of gold, mountains of silver and caves full of jewels?"
He said, "Sure, but I need to know who Kublai Khan is."
"Oh! Kublai Khan is a ruler of the Mongols, a tribe of nomads. He was the Emperor of China during the Yuan dynasty. His nick names are Setsen Khan, the Great Khan or Wise Khan."
On our travels we talked about many things and got attacked by what he called men with tails, who threw nuts as big as people's heads. I knew they were just monkeys throwing coconuts but Marco had never seen anything like them before.
Caitlin Galloway

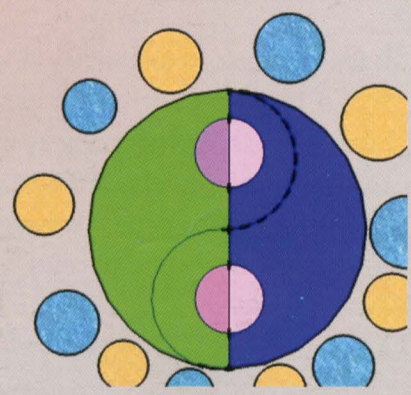


I am Marco Polo and I made an amazing journey that started in Venice, where I was born. I travelled along the Silk Road and finally arrived in China. It was marvelous, everything was amazing because I had never been out of Venice before. After living in China I went home but Venice was at war and I was captured and thrown in jail...
Sophia Madden



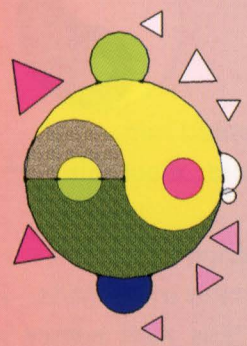
Eventually, Marco Polo and I arrived in Cambaluc (Peking). It was stunning. The people were dressed in clothes made of brightly coloured silk thread. It was lovely. The Palace was very tall. We went inside the palace which was absolutely amazing. There were emeralds and rubies all the way along the walls, and then we saw Kublai Khan.
He said in a happy sort of voice, "Welcome to my Palace!" and led us through the palace ...
William Hudson

Eventually, Marco Polo with his father and uncle finished their long, tiring journey.
"Wow! That was a horrible journey" muttered Marco. Then his eyes lit up, 'WOW', he thought, 'this is stunning!' Cambaluc (now known as Beijing) was brilliant!
"Come on let's go and see Kublai Khan," Uncle Maffeo suggested.
While they were on their way to meet the great Khan, Marco said to himself, "These people are dressed beautifully and their food smells delicious."
They thought Khan's palace was amazing and were very impressed by it. When they met Kublai Khan, Marco Polo said, "I am going to tell you all of my adventures".
"I am looking forward to hearing these." Kublai Khan answered excitedly.
Victoria Barker



This story starts in 1296 in Turkey when Marco Polo had a new adventure as well as a big story to tell about his wondrous travels. By the way I 'm Marco's parrot. My master found me on a deserted island near Italy.
Standing on the wooden pier were Maffeo Polo, Niccolo Polo and his son Marco Polo.
"The Polo family and me, nothing better than that," I thought.
It was getting late and we needed to find a boat back to Venice or else what were we going to do eh? A few minutes later we had found a ship but we didn't have much to pay with so I picked up a ruby with my beak and gave it to the captain. The captain was a friendly fellow. He gave me lots of fabulous seeds whilst Marco told lots of unbelievable stories...
Abigail Riggs

The Great Khan welcomed Marco Polo to the palace. After dinner we watched the greatest invention in Chinese history, Fire Works! Marco had to do lots of interesting jobs around the palace and was paid quite a lot. The Khan also taught him things, for example, how to use a bow and arrow and how to kill a deer. When The Great Khan died Marco was rewarded with lots of treasure which he took home to Venice.
Henry Edwards



Finally, they reached the top of the mountain. Marco felt so much better and they carried on walking until they found themselves in China.
Marco, his father and his uncle walked up to a giant tower which was Kublai Khan's castle. Kublai Khan was a very generous man who was born in 1215 .
Marco along with his father and uncle bowed down to the Emperor who was very happy to see them. Marco told him about his adventures and Kublai Khan said," Why didn't you bring me the gold and the rubies?" They replied that they had hidden them...
Georgia Stone

Marco was amazed to see all the different weird creatures. One day while walking, he accidently fell over a big nut, the size of his head! It was filled with milk! Suddenly a man with a huge tail appeared and grabbed the huge nut and ran!
Unbelievingly, he stood up and walked rapidly for a few hours. To his surprise, he found himself standing on the hill of Cambaluc. He suddenly felt really ill and he fainted. The next day was very mysterious because he found himself lying on a bed which was so bright and shiny; it was covered with golden sheets and pillows.
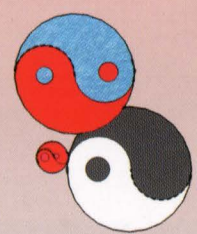
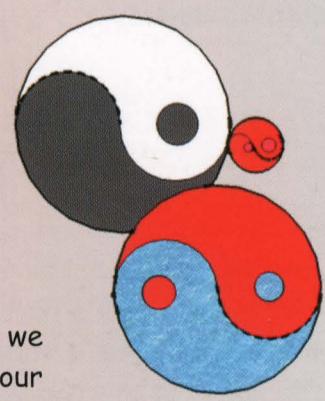
Alistair Atkinson





I am Marco's translator. I was very curious when I met first met Marco Polo in the jungle where we faced big cats with stripes, big green scaly lizards and men with tails that threw nuts as big as your head. These extraordinary nuts contained milk. I told Marco all about China, the rivers of gold, the caves full of jewels and when we reached Cambaluc, Marco was amazed by the silk and the paper money and the great palace. When Marco first met Kublai Khan he was old but very energetic especially when it came to bows and arrows.
Jasmine Barry

Eventually after travelling on the great Silk Road, I Marco Polo, got to Cambaluc in China. There my dad Niccolo, my uncle Maffeo and I met the great Kublai Khan. He was wearing magnificent golden robes made out of silk. His palace was fantastic and the views were great. There were two golden dragon statues opposite each other and the throne was beautiful. The walls were covered with paintings and the entrance was guarded by two guards.
My father was in another part of the huge palace and I was with Kublai Khan, we were the only ones in the throne room. He let out two big orange cats with black stripes, I was frightened. I didn't know what to do! But as it turned out they were his pets!
Kublai Khan was a very generous man but he wouldn't let us leave Cambaluc. I had to stay there for seventeen years!
When he was dying and he tried to give his riches to us, I said," We can't take your riches".
He whispered in my ear and said, "I want to die in peace."
After his death we went back to Venice.
Sean Yau

A long time ago, a great explorer met the noble Kublai Khan, his name was Marco Polo.
Seventeen years later when Kublai Khan was dying he said, "Marco here is your payment for all the things you have done for me?"
"Thanks," replied Marco.
"Will you explore a little more?" coughed Khan.
"Okay!" Marco said. So the next day he set off to go into the jungles of China.
When Marco got to the jungle of China, he saw a moving stick that was slithering over trees and leaves. Marco who had never seen a moving stick before was curious to find out what it was, so he followed it. By accident he stepped on a leaf and for some reason the stick reacted very quickly and shot towards Marco. Luckily he jumped out of the way and ran for his dear life.
The next day he found gigantic orange and black striped cats outside his tent...
Conor O'Malley

My name is Marco Polo and I am an Italian explorer. My home is in Venice, a very beautiful city. I travelled to China with my father, Niccolo and my uncle Maffeo. We journeyed along the Silk Road that wound its way across the dry, barren lands that liked the oasis cities of central Asia. We saw many strange creatures like men with tails and rivers of gold. When we eventually reached China I met the Emperor Kublai Khan who tested me to check if I was a spy! He shouted, "Bring in the saber tooth tiger!" When I had successfully completed the test he said I could stay in the royal palace.
Tom Fletcher

Interestingly, Marco Polo was riding on a really bumpy camel. The camel was taking him through loads of strange and dark caves, through the desert and along the Silk Road. When he eventually reached Cambaluc Marco Polo couldn't believe his eyes. He was so stunned that he looked like a statue.
After staying a while in Cambaluc he wanted to continue his journey. So he decided that next he wanted to go to visit Lanzhou. Lanzhou was important because it was on the Silk Road, and known as the 'Gold City'.
Marco Polo loved Lanzhou and thought he might stay for a little bit longer.
Madison Knight

When Marco went inside nobody was there but he saw a note on the chair and picked it up and read, 'I am kidnapped please can you save me.' And it was signed by the great Khan!
Marco ran out of the castle and went to save him. He raced into the jungle looking for him. As Marco was walking he heard a thumping sound coming from underground so he took his big bag off his back and took out his shovel and started to dig. After a while he jumped down the hole he had dug. At the bottom he saw a brick wall and he pushed it and it opened. He saw lots of cages with people in them. There were so many.
Louis D'Abo

Here I am, the great Marco Polo, in a dark, gloomy smelly prison. My only friend is Rusty a writer. Most of the time I just sit and talk to Rusty about my adventures. He got so interested in my stories that he wrote a book about me and my travels. I told Rusty about the men with tails, nuts as big as your head and the rivers of gold that I had seen. People loved my book but they didn't believe my adventures. The Queen came to learn more from me and she loved my book.
Teddie Bateman

A long time ago Marco Polo, and I were imprisoned together in Venice. He told me about his amazing travels and the things he had discovered, such as rivers of gold and caves full of diamonds. I'm a writer and I thought Marco's travels were exciting and that other people would love to read about them, But, when they read the stories lots of people called it the 'book of lies' because they didn't believe the fantastic stories about his adventures.
Tanya Jamieson

It was a cold and stormy day and I was rushing through the bushes. I was looking for food and then suddenly there he was, Marco Polo, dagger in his hand looking for fish.
"Who are you?" I asked.
"My son I am Marco Polo and who are you?" He said quite loudly.
"I am Tom Coughlan." I answered,"
"Humm, that's a long name." He replied. He took me to his uncle. On the way we heard noises. I looked, "I think it's a big cat with stripes. I don't believe it!" I cried. Quickly, Marco Polo got a stick and lit it with fire, he threw it at the cats and they backed up and ran away. After that he told me stories of caves full of gold and rivers of jewels...
Tom Coughlan

"Welcome," he said in a deep voice. " I am Kublai Khan; also known as the Great Khan, Setsen Khan or The Wise Khan."
"It's a pleasure to meet you your majesty." I replied as I bowed down. "I am Marco Polo. I have travelled a long way and had many dangerous adventures."
"Surprise me!" smiled Kublai Khan leaning back on his throne. So I began.
"Your majesty we have travelled to many places and seen many fantastic sights. We have seen men up in tall trees with tails, throwing nuts as big as your head with milk inside."
Kublai Khan leaned forward on his throne wide eyed, "What else?" He asked.
I continued. "We've also seen rivers of gold and big ferocious cats that are orange with black stripes on them."
Kublai Khan was shocked. After sometime he commented, "You are indeed an adventurous man, but can you pass the test?"

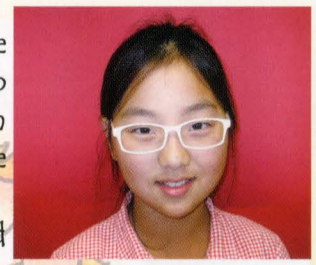
P5-16 Traditional Chinese Tales....

At the beginning of time, a brave and courageous dragon lived on an abandoned beach on the coast of the Eastern Sea. The stunning red dragon danced in the bright blue sky and sped towards the ground as fast as a rocket. Whenever he landed, he burnt the ground with his roasting breath. One day there was a festival. Traditional Chinese clothes, stores lined the festival selling shoes, incense and toys. Lazily, the happy dragon sat back to relax. Suddenly he heard a scream coming from the lake. A baby dragon was drowning in the deep lake. The dragon flew like a bullet and pulled the scared baby out of the gloomy water. As the dragon rescued the small baby, he flew away as quick as a flash. However a mile away people were making a plan to kill the dragon...

Oliver Spanton



Long long ago, before civilization, there prowled an arrogant and ignorant dragon. No one dared to defy him, and rumors of him spread throughout the land. He circled the misty mountains, while down below he remained a legend. Every day every one burned incense sticks, afraid that if they stopped, the glimmering golden-scaled dragon would swoop down and burn the rice fields, crops and everything they worked for. Sculptures of jade dragons guarded every terrified family, for the villagers knew that he was real, even though other people thought he was just a myth. Demanding respect from everyone in the land, he bellowed with laughter when he realized how successful he was in terrorizing the peaceful villagers. Secretly the people begged for help from the Jade Emperor, but all that could be seen of him was the distant speck of his sky palace, a glint of gold brighter than the stars at night. People no longer could carry on their normal, peaceful and happy life and wished desperately for a hero...

Yuri Hwang

Long ago, when nothing grew but thorns, there lived a mighty powerful dog who absolutely loved to play around and be a little cheeky sometimes. One day, the dog saw that there was a problem with the people. They were suffering for food and since there hadn't been any rain in quite a long time, the rice fields were too dry. "This can't be good I must tell the Jade Emperor to send some rain to let the people have some food before it's too late", thought the brave dog. So the dog spoke her word and looked up at the Jade Emperor's dazzling sky castle. "This may be worth it and it maybe not" she said, as she tried to find a way to get up there. The dog jumped up high to get into the castle. At last she reached the top...

India MacMahon

Long before time, up in the misty mountains above the Black River, where nothing ever grew but thorns, there roamed a tigress who was known to be as cunning as a fox and as clever as the cleverest of animals. She knew many important things, including the secret of how to get to heaven. But as well as being wise, she was also a rather kind and helpful animal. But one day, something dreadful happened, all the water in the Heilongjiang River suddenly disappeared. The animals became extremely thirsty, dying one by one. So, the animals (well what was left of them) decided to gather for a meeting. They agreed that the tigress, along with two other tigers, were to go on a quest to the glittering sky palace of the Jade Emperor and ask him to refill the river. But no one knew what terrifying things could happen to them on the way.....

Thousands of years ago, before the dawn of civilization, a young, yellow snake brought his tribe to an old hideout in the majestic misty mountains . They were fleeing from the dragons of the Gods, who had heard that they had betrayed them and were now facing a hard terrible life full of fighting and danger. Time passed and the tribe became more accustomed to golden temples and attacks. Their life was easy until winter came, the hardships of winter were feared throughout the tribe but this time it was worse ....they ran out of food. The leaders snuck down the mountain side but they knew what to expect, they guessed right. They never came back. The tribe fled to the Eastern sea and were never seen again...

Jamie Johnson

Long, long ago, by the banks of the Eastern Sea, a courageous, mighty dog lived with a kind hearted family. In the winter time, the only thing that grew was a poor rice field far up in the north. The enthusiastic dog wanted to help somebody but he didn't know who to help. As days were getting colder, everybody was getting sick and the brave dog was desperate to help. He started sniffing all around the village with a cheeky smile on his face as he thought of a cunning plan. His plan was to ask the Jade Emperor for the golden sun to appear in the grey sky. He waited for the sun to rise. Eleven days passed and nothing happened. People were frozen, no matter how many clothes they wore. Everyone was suffering. The dog knew he had to do something but what could he do...?

Indya Steains

Long ago, in the beginning of time, all that grew were bananas and so many people were dying because of one thing, they all got sick of the taste. One day a snake was born called Tiny. When Tiny was older he desperately wanted to be worshipped so he decided to find fruit to save the village. He had gone on a long journey before he found a rounded seed. He happily brought it back to plant it and save the village. A few days passed before a green shoot sprouted. It took a week to find out what it grew. It grew loads of different fruit and around the great tree grew vegetables. Happily, Tiny was finally worshipped but there was more to come...

Long ago, where there was nothing but trees, by the edge of the Eastern Sea, there lived a monkey as cheeky as could be. There was only one thing different from this monkey to the others and that was that he had found a magic cauldron in a spooky cave, at the bottom of a volcano. It took a while for the monkey to figure out what he had to do with the cauldron. He needed to say what he wanted to eat and it appeared in the cauldron in less than a second. The good thing about this was that the monkey never got hungry. He thought that the other monkeys had plenty to eat so he kept it a closely guarded secret! One fateful day, he came home to find that his cauldron was missing and vowed revenge...

Harri Johnson

Long ago, on top of a misty high hill top there lived a clever and mighty dragon. He was a stunning colour of dark blue with bright yellow wings that were as bright as the sun. He was the cleverest animals in the kingdom. He was strong, friendly and really intelligent. One early misty and cloudy Sunday morning, this dragon called Po Lin crept happily down to the friendly village for his morning stroll. He was greeted as usual with a riot of questions but there was no sight of his wonderful owner, the Emperor. For thousand years there was still no Emperor. The friendly village was slowly being over taken by their mean and cruel hearted neighbours. So the village made a thrilling plan...

Alexandra Williams

Long ago, before technology spread throughout the earth, there lived a clever but cunning dragon. He was a water god ruling over a bright red temple. Every day he would see the incense sticks burn gracefully into the gleaming brass urn. However he had to sit there year after year. One day, he got so fed up, he broke out of his temple, made his way for the, clear Eastern Sea, and hid in a cave by the rocks. After a couple of hours he made his way to the dry rice fields. He took off and sprayed the whole field with water. Suddenly, he heard a noise. He decided to explore and find out who was roaming around the rice field with him and when he turned around, that is when he saw it...

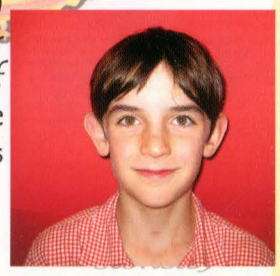
Long, long ago, by the banks of the Pearl River, there lived a sacred giant snake. This magnificent snake camouflaged itself from passers-by then gobbled up the people viciously. The people were becoming more aware of this snake who never went back to the Pearl River. One day a baby boy came crawling up the Pearl River. The snake, finally having something to eat, ate it slowly from head to foot. From then on, nobody dared to go to the banks of the river. The snake, getting hungrier, started to live on grass until another person came along. The very next day a young man came striding towards the snake. He had heard of the snake and was there to capture the beast and use it to destroy the Emperor's palace...

Max Irvine

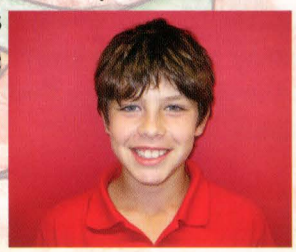
Long, long ago, before roads were invented, there lived a shimmering red Dragon who was kind, jolly and thoughtful and he loved playing games with his friend, the courageous hawk. He lived in the sky and used to love soaring around a snow topped mountain, looking down at the people who lived in the town below. But one day to the snow started melting, pouring water onto the crops causing them to die! It was either the earth itself or the jade Emperor who was causing the crops to die. So the red Dragon decided to pay a visit to the mighty man. "What is the meaning of this!" he boomed ...

Ben Stoneley



Long ago, in ancient China, there lived a clever, cheeky Monkey. He lived in the high, beautiful mountain peaks where nothing grew for miles around. Monkey was a clever creature but also very selfish. One fateful day, Monkey discovered some seeds and decided to dig lots of little holes, plant them in the ground and wait for them to grow. There was only one problem; he did not have any water. Monkey thought and thought. He knew he could not rely on the Jade Emperor so he decided to walk 1000 kilometers to the nearest river. The next day Monkey set off on his journey. Days and days passed and Monkey kept walking. Finally the bold Monkey saw the river. 'Plop'! His face smacked in the water as he drank. As he lifted his head up, he could not believe his eyes...

Ben Henchman



Long ago, in the distant misty mountains, lived a horse named Ching Ma. Ching Ma lived in a small field that was very cramped, near the Pearl River. She had a kind heart and was incredibly bold. As the days got colder, Ching Ma sheltered inside a rundown barn and got very miserable. High in the sky, the Jade Emperor saw how Ching Ma was suffering and summoned his servants to keep watch on her. One day Ching Ma discovered a small oval shaped stone in the ground. Picking it up, she said to herself, "I wonder what this will do if I plant it near that fence, I wonder if it will knock it down?" Ching Ma did just that and as days went by, the stone transformed and sure enough it knocked the fence down. Looking into the glistening river, she could not believe her eyes....

Flora Macfarlane

Long, long ago, by the great Eastern Sea, lived a rabbit called Shio Lan. He was as black as night and had an owner called Mei Lin. She had long black hair and dark brown eyes and loved Shio Lan like a mother loves a young child. One day Mei Lin took Shio Lan for a walk across the nearby beach. The beach had golden sands with small pink shells dotted around and small tufts of lemongrass growing round the path. Shio Lan was a fussy eater so refused to eat anything but corn, carrots and grain. Because of this she refused to eat the lemongrass offered to her. But then he saw the sight that changed her life forever...

Marcus Howl

Long ago, in the misty mountains, next to the Pearl River, was a sly and sneaky snake. He was the most cunning snake in the whole of China. He had never given up any mission and could do anything if he tried. Every year he would go to the eye-catching sky castle and steal an everlasting supply of food and he would never get caught. On the way back, he would come across the dragon temple and sniff the strong scent of incense. He would relax while eating some of his ripe enchanted fruits and every day he would get fatter and less pale. All the animals started to realize it too. So one day, the animals came up with a plan...

Deanna Kotecha

Long, long ago there lived a mighty dragon who was constantly hunting for more power as well as more places to rule. He lived in a truly magnificent palace. Then one day he realised he couldn't live for ever and he remembered a story that if you train hard enough under the Buddha commands you could be able to live forever. The powerful dragon decided to visit the Buddha so that he could take the challenge and learn to live forever. The self-centred dragon disobeyed the Buddha's command. He flew down to the closest village and started to blow fire to destroy the farmland. The poor innocent villagers asked the Buddha to help them to capture the terrible dragon...

Long long ago, by the banks of the Eastern Sea, there lived a sly, selfish and greedy snake. The snake always wanted to win everything, even if was competing for one grain of rice! He would always threaten other animals, even his friends (which he didn't have a lot of)! The snake only thought of himself, he always thought that he was the leader. The truth was he actually was quite kind in heart. He just wanted to be known as the leader, so he would only let the other animals eat his leftovers so they knew that he was their leader. However, one gloomy night, the snake had a dream that changed his life completely...

Centuries ago, near by the Eastern sea, lived four dragons. They flew all around the cloudy sky above. The four dragons had shimmering coats of gold and silver. While the four dragons where having fun in the clouds, the Pearl Dragon spotted the people suffering down on Earth and the four Dragons were willing to help. The four dragons had to go to the Jade Emperor's sky palace to ask for more rain on earth again. Flying through the sky, the golden dragons arrived at the sky palace. "The people are suffering on earth, can you make it rain again to help the people?" asked the Long Dragon. "Ok I'll make it rain again by tomorrow", the Jade Emperor promised...

Long long ago, by the banks of the Eastern Sea, there lived a mischievous and powerful dragon. The selfish dragon would always swoop round and round in the sky, pulling and shoving other dragons that got in his way and only cared for himself. Whenever he sneakily went to steal a few of the mighty Jade Emperor's lovely juicy peaches, the other dragons would ask for some but he would just simply turn around and ignore them. One day, all the other dragons got fed up with him and thought of a plan, it was to go and sneak all the Jade Emperor's peaches and have them for themselves. When the dragon came and saw the delicious juicy peaches he asked them for some since he was starving but they didn't give him any (as he never gave them any). As the dragon went courageously over to the jade Emperor's garden, he slowly tip-toed over to the peaches. As he grabbed some, he heard the footsteps of the Jade Emperor...

Long long ago, in the beginning of time, there lived a sly and sneaky snake who slithered around the Eastern Sea looking for food. All people heard were a rattle and a sizzle as the cunning snake passed them by. He could smell incense sticks burning as he found a warm and comfy lair within a glistening temple to sleep in. When the sun rose and he awoke, he was curious to see something diving rapidly into the river. It was black with a horn and its body was flaming with fire. Its eyes were facing the curious snake. Puzzled, the snake was tempted to see what it was. It looked so vicious, just like himself. The snake looked at himself in the clear blue sea and could see the bubbles spinning around in fury. As the snake looked deep into the depths, he saw it. He gasped in shock...

Long ago, in the Eastern Sea we lived, my friends and I, splashing and climbing above the clouds proving that we were the most highly honored dragons who did everything for earth. We were diving among the clouds, we were better than anyone in every way. One day, while we were drifting thought the clouds, we gazed wide eyed at the people down on earth. While we were gazing down at earth, we noticed that earth had changed a lot. All the crops were no longer living and the trees looked like bony skeletons. I gazed down at the earth's stony cracked floor it had not rained for a very long time and I wished that the changes had never happened I tried to pull my eyes away from the dreadful sight but I couldn't...

Long long ago I was all alone. Then crack! I came out of a massive stone egg. When I got out I ran about the fresh soil of the earth, lively and free. Suddenly I came to a race just like me and soon I became King of the city. I was desperate to learn how to be immortal like I had read in a book, how people were taught to live Buddha's way. So I set of to the land of men and learnt Buddha's life. After many years I was able to fly on a cloud and have eternal life. I wondered how my people would live without me because I was such a wise and brilliant leader. I had no idea that the Jade Emperor was about to put me in heaven because my power had become so strong...

Extracts of tales from Ancient China—by P5-17

A few millennia ago, when dragons and talking animals roamed the earth, the Dragon King, the Jade Dragon was given a job. He was to be the guardian of a small, but powerful, magical village filled with wise, humble and magical people. In order to guard the village, Jade Dragon was given a large, bluish pearl. Should the pearl be lost or stolen the village would lose its magic and the crops would wither and their wells would empty. To prevent this happening Jade Dragon locked the pearl in a chest and carried it wherever he went. Jade Dragon was proud and fond of his job, and he loved the village and its people.

One morning Jade Dragon woke up to glimpse a flash of gold and a monkey's tail disappearing round a tunnel in his cave. Then he looked to his right and found his pearl missing! He had only one feeling building up in him: rage. He cried out in anger. The monkey King had stolen the pearl! "I will find him and the pearl and take vengeance!" vowed the Jade Dragon.

Long, long ago in the western mountains of China, there lived a boy with the name of Xiao Long. Meanwhile in the east, there was a magistrate who had received a painting from someone anonymously in Xiao Long's village. Unfortunately, the parcel boy had taken the unfinished painting the artist was painting to the wrong person. The painter wanted to exchange the painting for no taxes in the village for a year.

When the magistrate received the unfinished painting he was furious. He became so angry that he turned into a tiger. Now he couldn't eat meat, he couldn't sit on his throne and he couldn't even get into his bed properly. Now he was so furious with rage that he turned red and accidentally set his palace on fire. He decided to take revenge on Xiao Long's village and that is exactly where he headed.

Many years ago there was a large forest in the middle of Asia and in the middle of it there was a new born cheetah cub called Mei Ling. Mei Ling was a joyful little cub who would jump around and tumble like a small pogo stick. All the animals liked her, although there was another little cheetah cub who didn't get any attention at all because everyone liked Mei Ling. This cub was called Xiao Long and had a dream to be the strongest cheetah in Asia. He was determined to make that dream come true.

Xiao Long's plan was to leave at night, travel to the Emperor and give him some of his fur so he could become the strongest in Asia. Soon it became dawn and everyone was awake. They went to get Xiao Long but he wasn't there. Xiao Long had already set off for his journey to the safari emperor. Everyone was wondering where he went. They all missed him but Xiao Longs didn't know they missed him - he thought they didn't know he had gone.

Several thousand years ago, in a small town near the borders of China, there was a girl called Mei Lin. She was an orphan girl, who lived amongst the rice paddy fields, feasting on any fruit or vegetable she found. Ever since she had been a baby she had worn a string anklet with a jade amulet hanging from it. People thought it was from a god or a goddess because they had never even heard of jade.

One night, she had a dream. She saw two dragons, one much bigger than the other. She couldn't make out their colours because it was night and they looked like wisps of smoke. They were soaring through the air, something Mei Lin had always wanted to do. Suddenly the bigger dragon looked at Mei Lin. Mei Lin recognized her face, it looked somewhat like her mother. Not a second passed as Mei Lin woke up to see the dragon swooping down; she stood up, gazing in wonder at the Jade Dragon. As she was watching she was transforming into a dragon, that looked just like her mother.

Many years ago, in a small village near the Western mountains lived a boy called Xu Ling. He lived with his family in a small shed on the farm on which they lived. Everyday, Xu Ling had to work long hours on a small rice field to earn money. Xu Ling's family was very poor because no one wanted to buy the rice from Xu Ling's rice field as their rice field was so small. The other villagers would buy the rice from the bigger rice field nearby.

One summer morning an old man moved into the village. He was a very kind and friendly old man, who was also really clever. He helped every child in the village, including Xu Ling. Xu Ling's parents liked the old man a lot and the old man liked Xu Ling's parents a great deal too. The old man started liking Xu Ling and he said that if he worked hard, he could be the cleverest boy in China. The old man told Xu Ling that he could help him make it happen, so his family would never be poor again.

Several thousand years ago, in the vast Chinese mountains near the majestic eastern seas there lived a man, his wife, their son named Xiao Long (small dragon) and there daughter named Mei Lin (beautiful jade). The parents told their children every thing, except for one dark secret that could change their lives forever.

The night before the twins tenth birthday, they were each sent a dream by the Dragon of Many Secrets, so that they could learn their fate and be prepared for the challenges ahead. The children were each sent a dream that revealed the secret that their parents had kept from them for so long.

Mei Lin dreamed that she was a baby in the arms of the queen of heaven and the goddess of truth was blessing her with a son. Xiao Long dreamed that he was a baby in the arms of the jade emperor and he was being blessed by the god of strength. Children awoke at once and knew the meaning of their dreams instantly - they were Gods!

Five hundred years ago, on some distant plains in a mountain valley, there lived two brothers. One was a red and yellow dragon and the other was a blue and green dragon. Every day they would play together, but they always got thirsty. As a result, they had to fly all the way down to the ocean because their main drinking well had dried up from the lack of rain.

One day the two dragons saw citizens praying for rain. The dragons were brought up here - they had to help them but they didn't know how and besides, they needed water as well. They had to do something, but what? First they tried making waves but it didn't reach the village and it would never reach their home. The two brothers tried lots of different possibilities but in the end they went up to heaven to ask the rain god for his guidance.

A few millennia ago, in the mountains of eastern China there lived a small girl named Le Mei Shya (beautiful horizon). She was desperate to make her family wealthy, so one night she decided to pray to the old rice god. The rice god, however, was not impressed. In fact, he was furious at her greed and put a curse on the whole family.

The next morning when the farmer was ploughing the fields, his wife started yelling at them to come and take a look. To her amazement, the rooster was laying an egg. How could that possibly be? When the egg finally hatched, out popped a snake like creature with a rooster crown on its head. The creature stared at Le Mai Shya's mother in the eye, who suddenly fell to the ground, dead. For many years, people tried to kill this evil creature but they never succeeded. Until one day, when Le Mei Shya visited the priest and asked him for help. He told her to find the golden dragon and take his pearl. Then the creature would be able to see its reflection and it would die, just like its victims.

Then Water Dragon and Flame Dragon saw a burnt out tower so they decided to go inside it. It was at that moment something caught the dragon's eyes - it was their powers and as soon as they saw them they put them in their bodies. When they got out of the burned tower Giratina was waiting for them, who then spoke. "You thought that it would be that easy?" he said. The two dragons said no word to their brother, and so the battle began.

The two dragons took their moves but Giratina was too fast for them. Then Giratina destroyed them by making a powerful beam. Both dragons thought he was too powerful for them but they both thought if they worked together he wouldn't stand a chance. So they both used their powers on Giratina and soon enough Giratina just had to give in. The two dragons then entered into a portal and went back to their normal world. From that day on, the people were able to grow food so that they wouldn't go hungry anymore. Both the dragons thought that Giratina was gone for sure, but he still lived and waited for his moment, ready to invade again.

Now lost in the green wilderness, Tian stopped to see the water dragon panting in fear. The legends say he could talk when someone was in trouble, but Tian was still wondering who the creature behind him was. The dragon opened his mouth, now more calmly than before and let out a riddle. "The dark emperor stole, all water in hole, if you're trying to survive your partner will help you strive. You will feel a tingle in your heart, your love will be your partner." The dragon's eyes and mouth closed leaving his half dead soul with an unfinished sentence…

Tian slipped into a burning room, with his hand attached to Lee's. She fell in too. A dark figure slowly crept towards them with a splintered brown stick. "Give back the water!" Lee said viciously. Lightning struck, and Tian felt the bolt painfully in his thigh. Lee faced the mortal with fire in her eyes. She fell down in tears, pressing her hand to his chest. His eye opened…

Diamond Dragon woke up to sound of a voice saying, "Exit the room" and it kept on repeating. He was traumatised! He always had two choices (yes or no). This was quite a mystery and he wanted to solve it so he decided to exit the room he was in. He realized that it was not another room in the Den, it was in fact heaven! As soon as he entered, the Flying God appeared right before his very eyes. As he approached he was saying, "I'll make all dragons fly if you jump one hundred meters."

Diamond Dragon accepted the challenge and they all headed for the track. He took a deep breath and leaped over the track like a shooting star across the sky. He landed with a thump, like a comet that had fallen from orbit. The God was very proud of him. A promise was a promise so he had no choice but to let him fly! Diamond Dragon returned to his home and everyone was amazed by his fascinating tricks in the sky. Every dragon came to see Diamond Dragon and thank him, because it was through him that all dragons could fly.

Way back in time, when the Great Wall of China was still being built, there lived a family who worked day and night until they felt that they could work no more. They worked on a rice field, but it was rather small. They had a second child, named Kui, who had a miserable life spending all his time working on the farm to help feed the family. The trouble was that they lived in the mountains and as barely anyone else lived there, they had nobody to sell their rice to. So they earned very little money, hardly enough to survive.

Then one night, Kui had a dream. It was no ordinary dream, as Kui found himself lost in the mountains. Kui heard a rustle in the bushes and he felt an urge to investigate. But when he did, to his horror he discovered a snake. Kui was startled. Slowly backing away, he heard a voice coming from the trees. He noticed a monkey in the branches saying "It's ok, we won't harm you. It's the dragon you should fear."

Several hundred years ago when the emperors and gods ruled all of China, there lived a girl called Mei Lin and her Jade dragon. They lived in the mountains where snow fell and icicles hung from the cave entrance nearly all year round. They were there because Mei Lin had been captured by dark dragon who happened to be emperor Kong's pet. Mei Lin had been rescued by Jade dragon, who had taken her to the safety of the mountains.

The village was flooded because the emperor had sent a flood. He did this because the villagers had betrayed him and he wanted to get his revenge. Mei Lin and Jade dragon wanted to help the people so they decided to come up with a plan. They flew down to the village and swooped into the water, deeper and deeper. As Jade dragon rose out of the water, all the villagers were on his back. They had been rescued, and the emperor was never heard from again.

Over a thousand years ago, in the mountains north of Shanghai there was a small village, where the residents were poor. In the village on the mountain side there lived a family and their daughter, Jade. She had beautiful glossy black hair that reached all the way down her back. She also had sparkling green eyes and worked extremely hard every day at the lonely rice fields.

Faraway, in a big palace, lived the Emperor of Shanghai. The Emperor had heard about the hardworking girl called Jade. The ugly Emperor was jealous of her beauty and kind heart. She ordered someone to put Jade in to prison so she could be the most beautiful person in Shanghai. She grinned an evil grin and set about her plan...

Several hundreds of years ago, in the Beijing Temple Mountains, there was a small village with the most beautiful, clean water in the land. In the village, there lived a small family with a young girl called Ming-Ming. But her family was very poor and could not afford a lot of things. They lived a very simple life, and everyday they would send Ming-Ming out to the small rice fields to work. Then one day, when Ming-Ming was walking to the rice fields, she noticed the clouds started to turn grey and the rain began to pour. The village people started to run with joy. Ming-Ming had never seen this before. She quickly started to run home, but then she was picked up into the air and she had no idea where she was being taken.

Thousands of years ago in the distant plains of China, there lived a boy named Xei who lived on a farm. Everyday Xei had to wake up very early to walk 3 miles to get to school. Xei was a smart kid but his family was poor and they could neither read nor write.

After a long hard day of school Xei came home, had his dinner and went to bed. As soon as Xei's head hit the pillow he dozed off into a deep sleep and he had a strange dream. A god was telling him there was a famine coming and Xei was chosen to protect the city. The god also told Xei he had to stop going to school and make a new farm near his house. It was the god of plants and farming, and it was he who would help Xei on his quest to save China.

Once upon a time, long ago, a young cat called Chang Ming lived in a huge palace surrounded by delicious plum and peach trees. The palace was owned by the proud jade emperor. Chang Ming lived in luxury while the people outside the gates were suffering, with little food and barely enough money to survive. The selfish, spoilt cat had all the food and all the water he wanted. One night, a huge storm hit the town. A strike of lightning hit the wall of the palace and made a huge crack in it. The next morning, Chang Ming went out exploring, when he noticed the hole in the wall. Instead of returning to his master, he sneaked through the wall, and there in front of him stood the Buddha.

Many years ago in the middle of China, next to the mountains, there lived a young citizen called Meng. He loved going to the mountains and looking down at the colours of the flowers underneath his feet. He would often look up at the sky too, searching for dragons flying in between the clouds above. On the cliff top Meng could see for miles around. He watched as a smoky dragon came down from the skies like a missile. Meng called to the villagers but no-one could hear him.

He ran and ran for his life, but he could not out run the dragon. So he decided to hide in an old mine where he sat and hoped for the best. Meng waited and listened for the sound of movement outside or the dragon's breathing. He heard nothing, so he knew that he was safe, at least for now.

Hundreds of years ago, in ancient China on a cold snowy night, the travellers were in the old inn eating their meal of noodles and warm milk. Unlike Kai, they were all rich. Kai was poor and he had been ever since his parents died two years before when the Mongolians attacked. One day, a traveller annoyed the Emperor so he forced all travellers to leave the country. That night Kai had a dream, and in his dream Buddha told Kai to convince the Emperor to let the travellers back in or face the consequences. So Kai quickly got up and told the Emperor to let them return. But Kai knew it was hopeless - he would not listen to him as he was just a poor orphan. Kai, however, didn't give up. He went back to rest for a while and to think what to do next. When Kai woke up, dragons were all around him, terrorizing the town! Clearly his plan had not worked. In fact, he had made things worse than they were before.

Thousands of years ago, in the middle of China and high in the cloudy mountains there was a village called Fang Shway. In the middle of the village there were lots of rice fields. There were two main farmers of the rice fields and they were always having competition to see whose rice was the best. The first farmer was called Sung Wan and the second was called Fang Fay. They would see whose rice sold better and they would sometimes even fight. One of the farmers lived on one side of the village and the other farmer lived on the other side of the village.

One tragic day the village flooded and all the rice fields were destroyed. The God of Life was not happy about the flood so he cleared up all the water. Instead of letting the all the rice grow back, something terrible happened….

Several hundred years ago in the distant mountains of eastern China, there lived a young boy called Tai. He lived with his family on a small rice field. Tai's family was very poor because lots of the town's people preferred to walk to the bigger rice field nearby. One winter's night after a long and hard day on the field, Tai rested his head on the hay. He fell into a deep sleep and as he did so he started to dream. In his dream he was watching himself grow up. Suddenly an old man appeared from nowhere and said, "If you believe you will be set free." Then he suddenly disappeared, leaving Tai feeling dazed and confused. Tai woke up next morning and walked around the fields of his farm. He wondered if he would see the old man again.

Outside of Beijing there was a small, crowded village which stood by a rushing river. A little old woman lived in the village and her name was Mei Lin. She was very lonely because she had no friends and she was the last one left in her family. As time passed and Mei Lin grew older she became very weak. One morning Mei Lin woke up with a big frown on her face. She had had a terrible night. She had been tossing and turning so much that in the night she nearly fell out of bed! As she got out of bed she walked straight into a wall. The Jade God was watching over her. She needs a lot of help, she thought. Stumbling out of the door, Mei Lin muttered to herself, "I need some friends, I feel so lonely". Suddenly she saw a bush shaking….

Death at the Door

Cixi was jealous, jealous to the bone. For many long years she had been working at the Emperor's Palace. It had been far too long. Cixi yearned to be the Empress of China and when the Emperor himself spotted Cixi across the crowded hall she knew her world would finally change. He instantly saw her beautiful face with lips as red as blood, however he did not know of the evil inside her. Things would go wrong. Cixi wanted all the power she could get her filthy hands on. Her plan was in place and Cixi would use a vicious dragon to become Empress...

The Dragon

I woke up wondering why I felt a breeze in my hair and then I remembered. I was still on the boat. I saw my dad staring at me with big eyes. He said one word slowly "Dragon". My eyes widened and I felt my heart pounding inside my chest. "I've never seen a ferocious dragon before" I stammered. My flesh turned cold and warm at the same time. I went numb, in my hands and my feet first, then my whole body. I looked up and I saw it, a real dragon! My dad started chanting but I wasn't listening because the dragon was coming closer...

Xiao Long

Xiao Long the dragon lived on a mountain near the Great Wall. The Emperor had invited him to the Summer Palace. On the way he met a young boy. He was caring so they made an instant bond. The dragon invited the boy to go to the summer palace with him. Emperor Qin was just about to have a fit when they finally crashed in. "Ni Hao Xiao Long, you finally arrived" grunted emperor. "I've heard a rumour that you know where the elixir is...give it to me now!" commanded the Emperor "Is that why you invited me here?" Roared Xiao Long "Take him away!" Declared the Emperor...

The Dragon vs. the Emperor

It tasted horrible but it was worth it. Emperor Qin was looking for the elixir of life and I had it. I'm Ming. I'm the last Golden Dragon in existence. Drinking the elixir of life was just one of the terrible things I've done. The worst had to be destroying the Forbidden City to get it. I drank it without a care and I almost choked, I was very lucky that I didn't. I've been alone for ten years. Emperor Qin has killed all my friends; they all suffered. I felt ashamed not helping them, just hiding in my cave till that day the soldiers piled in...

The Best of Friends

Gazing at the golden sun, I walked along the deserted lakeside when suddenly I saw a fire ball falling out of the sky. I dove for cover as it fell. BANG! There was a huge hole in the dirt and I looked up and saw an exotic dragon, fifty feet tall with razor sharp teeth. I didn't run away, something forced me to stay. The dragon lifted its tremendous body and bent down towards to me. Closer and closer it came until it finally whispered a single word "Friend". I jumped on his back, swoosh! And we lifted into the air...

The Dragon's Hunger

I woke up. Dawn was coming, by the look of the sky. I had been having a restless sleep in my hidden cave, tossing and turning all night on my bed of straw. I was exhausted, but I still managed to fly over to the nearest tree and snatch two birds, gobbling one whole and tossing the other in the enclosure where I saved some for winter. Having nothing better to do, I decided to count how many birds were left to eat. As it turned out, there were was only one, not enough for the rest of the day let alone the winter!. And then came the terrible hunger...

Empress Cixi's Glimpse of the Dragon

The wind swept across the scales of the dragon; his name was Blood. He got up and glared out of his cave. He started to fly and caught his usual prey. He swooped steadily but suddenly the leathered beast dropped, right next to Empress Cixi's palace. He landed at the front of the gates under the grey sky. The word got out and spread around the palace and stopped at the Empress' ears. Cautiously she crept down the stony surface of the front steps. She looked up and saw the vicious golden dragon. Her heart was in her throat...

The Dragon

My city is the greatest in the land and beyond. Despite that, I have one problem. A giant fire breathing dragon called Death, is terrorizing my home. I constantly send the most powerful, most courageous and most dangerous warriors but none succeeded. This dragon was born in the year of the dragon and therefore he has special powers. I saw it one morning, the dragon. Its eyes were raging with fury, its scales were glistening in the sun and its teeth were sharper than any sword. That morning he let out a roar so loud that the entire city shook with fear. Would this be the end...

The Shadow Dragon

I looked up. Luminous yellow eyes stared back at me. I screamed and ran moving as fast as my legs could carry me, but it was still following, sticking to the shadows. I was so terrified I lost concentration and fell over. I saw the old oak table and dived for cover. Collecting up all my courage I raised my head and looked over. It was a huge, black dragon. In the sacred language of the dragon tongue it bellowed "I am Grockle!"

"What are you doing here?" I stammered.

"Searching for someone..."

The Black Dragon

The luminous yellow eyes stared into my face; they were coming from the dark shadow in the corner of the room. The black dragon crawled out in front of my eyes and by then I could tell that death was getting closer by the second. I backed up against the dusty wall but the dragon made an ear piercing scream. I jumped back and hit the wall once again. I tried staying calm but I couldn't. The huge dragon was getting closer and closer. Inside I was screaming but on the outside I was paralyzed. I could feel his fiery breath against my face; death was at hand...

The Cherry Blossom Tree

The wind playfully danced by the small cherry blossom tree perched on an island in the middle of the moon silver river at the Summer Palace. The sun shone down in just the right amount to please the Emperors. Birds sang sweet melodies from the sky above, bees buzzed looking for nectar and golden luck swam in the sweet water. In the distance you could hear monks chanting to the gods for advice and there was the smell of food cooking in the Palace. A blossom slipped off the cherry tree and gracefully glided into the water. As it touched, a dragon emerged...

The Sweet Dragon From China

The dragon was flying through the crystal clear sky like a rocket. You could see from out of his mouth the heaps of fire pouring out. He flew along to the Summer Palace and nipped down to the lake for a quick drink of water. In their faces all the villagers showed how much they were scared to death! He flew down to Empress Cixi and circled around her like an enormous, fierce ghost. She trembled with fear but this dragon was no ordinary one. Though it looked fierce and frightening like all dragons, it was actually sweet and not horrible at all...

The Dragon of Jade Mountain

"I want a dragon!" Cixi yelled "I am royal and I should get what I want!" Dummies, she thought to herself. "It's Chinese New Year, I want a dragon, and if I want one, I should get one!" Without a second thought, the outraged Empress raged out into the Hutongs to ask about dragons. She searched the entire village but it was in vain, not even the wisest soul knew anything about dragons. The Empress, so desperate and so angry thumped on every last door. Meanwhile in a faraway cave Ming Li, The Dragon of Jade Mountain was listening...

Dragon's Friend

It was autumn in the middle of the Qin dynasty and the leaves danced from the trees to the ground. Despite the cold weather, Chin-Chin was warm under his cosy blanket. He changed into his toasty clothes and went outside for a morning walk. The wind was aggressive and whistled very loudly; already the markets were like beehives. Chin-Chin walked for an endless amount of time. Eventually the sun illuminated the whole of Beijing and as time went by, Chin-Chin got back to his house and saw something on the roof top. Strange, it seemed to be in the shape of a dragon...

The Dragon Who Couldn't Fly

Golden eyes sparkled as the boy walked into the cave to find his ball. A big red scale glistened in the darkness. Wet drips echoed as drool hit the floor. Out came a red, scaly dragon with teeth as sharp as blades. Its wings were so graceful but unfortunately, it couldn't fly. It always wanted to fly but it remained grounded. He had tried everything; moving the wings up and down, jumping off high places. It was no use. He would be stuck in his misery forever...

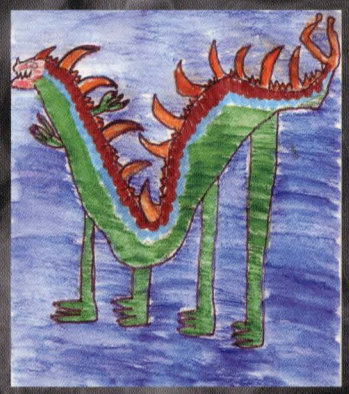
The Dragon in the Painting



Li Shang gloomily stared out his window and grieved. Recently the cruel soldiers had kidnapped his unfortunate father. In this painful state Li Shang started wandering about the ancient house. He came to the room he was never allowed in. His heart was thumping like somebody stomping up and down. Slowly, he opened the creaky old door. Inside, the room was full of paintings his father had painted long ago. Across the room he saw something that interested him. It was a painting of a mighty dragon breathing fire across a green field, destroying the crops. Instantly something started sucking him into the painting...

A Dragons Friend

Dandruff was a lonely dragon. Realizing he had no friends and after giving the matter careful consideration, he decided to find a companion. Flying high and low seeking a friend, he soured past the Forbidden City constantly flapping his majestic wings. Several hours later he gracefully landed by an old Hutong house. Peering into the window, he saw a boys gaze catching a glimpse of his own. He was the one. Seeing two dancing fireflies glaring at him and a body smothered in golden scales, the boy gasped. Dandruff plucked up his courage and asked: "Will you be my friend?"...

The Fireless Dragon

"I bet you can't do that" boasted Long's older brother as he blasted fire into the sky. Long was a dragon who could not breathe fire. Because of that, he got teased all the time. Sighing, Long looked out to the starry sky. Every night, he wished he could do something wonderful that would make tears come to the people's eyes. Tomorrow was Chinese New Year and maybe, just maybe there would be something or someone at the celebrations who could help him. Then out of the corner of his eye he saw something. It was perfect, so perfect...

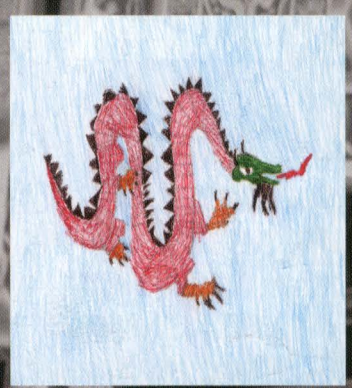
The Dragon that Couldn't Roar



As his Mother and Father peered over him, they wished that he could roar. Unlike the other dragons who couldn't breathe fire, their dragon could do everything except roar. So before very long, Papa Dragon (whose name was Papa Dragon) decided to fly to Emperor Qin to see whether he could help find his son's roar. Carefully and purposely, he flew down to Emperor Qin's temple and cautiously knocked on the door. "Come in!" boomed the great man. Dragon crawled through the door as his heart desperately pounded. Looking up he was face to face with the Emperor...

P6-19 Rock Star Biographies

Randomly Out The Sky

Jade Sophie Green (Diddy) was born on July 6th 1985; Liverpool, England. Diddy had a fairly standard childhood and overall school was quite a good experience for her. Year 1 was a bit dull, however in Year 2 she met Rocky and Sven – who would later become her band mates from Randomly out the Sky. At age 10, she had the opportunity to perform a drum solo in her class assembly. She was delighted and became a huge musical success! In spite of this, Year 6 was her favourite year, as she started to rehearse with her band mates, Rocky and Sven and played in many of the school events.

By the time Diddy was 20, Randomly out the Sky's song 'Ego on Fire' was a number 1 hit!

Tayler Coates

Sven Wilde attended Vegas Town Secondary School. Leaving in Year 11, he then went onto work in a Tom Lee music store in the day and in the evening he rehearsed with his band members Rocky and Diddy.

The bands first gig was in the Buttered Goose, where they were filmed by a YouTube user! Megacal1990 became a massive hit and they were given a contract by Simon Cowell! 2 years later, they were a hit band touring around the world.

In the 2006, they performed at the opening of the World Cup as well as the closing ceremony of the 2010 World Cup.

Alec Drew-Prior

Rocky moved to Nevada and attended Westminster Primary School. Starting in year two she met Diddy – also known as Jade Sophie Green. Rocky loved her music lessons where she and Diddy were always the best! Several years later, in year six, they finally met and became friends with Sven Wylde. They all liked the same type of music, which of course was rock!

A year later, they transferred to Vegas Town School, where they studied the same subjects and met each other everyday after school to either play music or visit the music store. Rocky worked really hard and school and achieved straight A's in all her subjects!

The Tigers

Bull Dog - also known as Charlie Webster - was born on the 3rd of November, 1990. His birth name was Charlie Peter Stanton – Webster! Later referred to as Peter, Charlie Stanton - Webster. His father was called Julian and his mum (liked to call herself Raggedy) was named Jane. Having two sisters was annoying for Charlie since he was the only boy in the family. They were called Jemma and Katie and were both older than him.

As a child, Bull Dog's earliest memory was of listening to his dad playing the harmonica whilst sitting round a fire.

From the age of 3 to 10, Charlie attended Kellett Primary School in Hong Kong. There he learned to play the drums and discovered that he has a great passion and talent for music!

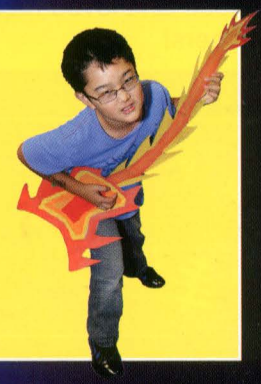
Charlie Webster

In 2010, The Dawg (Fletch) and The Flame (Tim) had just finished recording their new song, so they went to a local pub to relax and celebrate. Jamming in the corner was a drummer and a bass guitarist (just what Fletch and Tim needed to become a full band). They heard them play and liked them, so they offered them a position in their band.

Several months later, they had renamed themselves: The Tigers and were playing in a selection of 5 star hotels around the country. After a few months of hard work they played their first concert in Boston.

From there, they took their tour to Australia and then onto America.

Xavier Banson



Stripes (formally known as Zac) was born on the 6th of December, 1989, in a town called Sackfron. Abruptly entering the world – he was only 5lb, due to his early arrival! From the moment he opened his eyes his parents admired him. His mum, Jane, was a science teacher at Sackfron High School, while his dad (Philip) was an Insurance Broker who made millions of dollars for his company, ensuring a good living for Zac's family. Sadly, when Zac was 2 his dad tragically died of a bee sting.

Zac was a curious little child and at the tender age of 3 he discovered the radio! Flicking the switch one day, the room was filled with rock music. Immediately, Zac began dancing around in circles! That was the beginning of his passion for music!

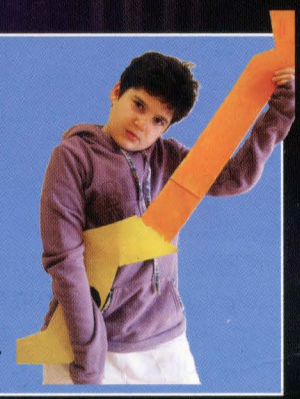
Joshua Ponter-Kirkham

The Dawg and his band starting playing bigger venues: 5-star restaurants and part time in a hotel, earning $500 a week! After 2 months, the whole of Boston knew them! Subsequently, they decided to hold their first concert. It was a major success and they earned millions of dollars from it. They stayed in Boston for several more concerts, until they decided to take their music over to Australia.

In Australia, they performed in several small venues around Sydney until finally they were given the opportunity to perform in their first major stadium! It was a sell out for both nights! Soon, The Tigers were performing world wide!

Currently, they are back in America working on their latest album!

Fletcher Koder



K K Krunches

In 2007, Kit Kat graduated and became a tutor. Every night, after the students had gone home; she would go and sit in her own sound room to practise her guitar and record the song she had written. However, Katrina missed family, so in 2008 she moved back to the Philippines, this is when her luck changed! It was something that was going to change her life forever! She bumped into her old neighbour Nicole, and her friends Katie and Rihannah! Quickly, they got talking about music and decided to meet up have a 'jamming' session! From that moment on, the K K Krunches were formed!

Katrina Chan

Katie was born on October 18th, 1987 in Los Angeles, UCLA hospital. From an early age, her nickname was Kutie Kream. Susan - her mum - was a magician and David - her dad – was a film producer. Katie also had a brother called John, he was 2 years older! Sophia and Elizabeth are her younger sisters by 8 years. Katie had always dreamed of being a rock star! One of her earliest memories was when she started learning to play the bass guitar. At the age of 4, Katie went to Primary School. She loved meeting new friends, learning new instruments (xylophone, piano and the timpani) and meeting her teachers!

Katie Ko

In 2010, Star Rock finally got his dream! He met the other band members in Triple O's. Jim, (Rock Star) Louise, (GaGa) and Mia (Pixie Flame) were sitting eating hamburgers and discussing their music, when he overhead them talking about their need for a drummer! Subsequently, Rock Star seized his moment and two months later, The Winged Weasels were formed!

Since that day, Star Rock's band has been very successful! Currently, they are getting ready for their first tour starting in Hong Kong! Their hit song 'Broken Dreams' sold wildly across the globe!

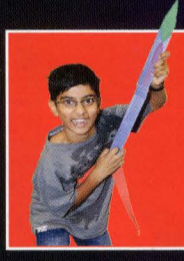
Ryan Lockett

Pixie's earliest memory was when her dad bought her a guitar. At first she didn't know what it was, however her father explained to her that it was an instrument. Her Dad (who wasn't that much of a musician) taught her how to play it and over the years her family saw her passion for music grow!

When Pixie was four, she attended Southend Primary School for girls. As well as music, she enjoyed art and creative writing. One day, after school, she heard the school choir singing and decided to become a member. This would be the start of many great performances.

Mia Konn

Gods of Rock



Crackpot, was born in South London, England, was born on the 1st January 1983. His real name was Jimmy Paul Cartlidge and was born at Lewisham Hospital at 11:58 pm. His father – Harry – was a pilot who worked for the RAF (Royal Air Force). Crackpot's mother – Kathy – was a nurse. She had a PHD in nursing was born in the same hospital as she is now working in! Crackpot was the youngest of three children. In addition to his parents, he had a brother (who was older than him) named James and a very lazy sister called Jemima.

Hamza Apabhai

When Ken, or Kenstar, as his friends called him, was 5 when he started attending Stockton Wood Primary School. From an early age, he was bright, although he often helped other children with schoolwork; other kids were jealous - consequently, he didn't have many friends. Nevertheless, his schooldays were happy times. It was there that he started learning guitar, and where he discovered he had an unusual talent for it. When he was 12, he joined Amber Shore Middle School, situated in a town a little to the west. While he was there, he also began learning the saxophone his second musical instrument, after his acoustic guitar.

Nicholas Hirsch

Rihannah, the eldest Samson, attended George Washington Primary School (at the age of 4). Unfortunately, she hated school especially history, as she found it meaningless and boring! Everything else was average in her eyes – except music! Music was the absolute best! She really enjoyed the fabulous lessons, especially as her favourite teacher – Mr. Notewriter – taught her. He was her drum teacher and the funniest teacher in the whole entire school actually the best teacher in the whole world! He had a funny looking moustache and an Australian accent. It was during her lessons that she realised not only did she love music—she was good at it!

Ronnie Ng

A random visit to McDonalds changed Ko Ko's life forever! She had arranged to meet Kutie Kream (her best friend) in McDonalds. While she was waiting, Kit Kat came and asked if she could sit down next to her because there were no other seats available. At first she didn't recognize her, however then she realised it was her neighbour from when she was young! A minute later, Kutie Kream and Krazy Kaz walked into the crowded room and they spent all afternoon chatting about their common love: music! The craziness had only just begun...

Sophia Perronet Miller

The Winged Weasals

At the age of 6, Louise started playing the piano, although she soon realised that was not her talent. By the age of 8, Louise had tried the violin, trombone, tuba, flute and finally the drums. Surprisingly, not one of those instruments she could play and so she gave up! However, a few years later, she tried the bass guitar. She was actually okay at playing it, but the main thing was she loved playing it! Once she had more practice, she eventually got the hang of it. Several years later, she was performing at fairs and charity shops.

Olivia Pearce

Rock Star (real name Jim Taylor) was born on 1991 in Wimbledon, England. His mother was called Catharine and she worked as a clothes designer, and his Dad was called Mike and he was a banker. Also he had 2 sisters, one called Hannah and another called Claudia.

Rock Stars earliest memory was when he got his first play drum set, when he was two years old. Each day, after preschool, he went straight to his room without even getting a snack to eat and play on his little play drum set. His drum set was red - his favourite colour!

Joshua Taylor

After Harvard, Benjamin moved to Oakham! However, feeling restless he decided to go to Russia for a holiday. One night he found himself in a pub listening to the most amazing singer. After he had performed, Benjamin asked if he would like to meet up for a jamming session. That was the start of the brilliant 2 man band! By 2003, they had written many good songs and were playing regularly in bars around Las Vegas. It was there that they met Jimi and Ringo and in 2006 they formed: The Gods of Rock!

Alex Kent

In 2000, he was on holiday when he met Benjamin at a bar in Russia. They sat together and over the course of the evening they became great friends and decided to form a 2 man band. Their most famous songs were 'Little Lady' and 'Hello Hell'. About 3 years later, rock star Ken (Ringo) and Jimmy (Crackpot) saw Rick and Benjamin playing in a pub in Las Vegas and from that moment on they were known as the Gods of Rock! In 2008, they played their first concert in Europe. Gods of Rock's most famous album is 'Up In Smoke', which includes their hit singles 'Spitfire' and 'Lighting Strikes.'

Yorke Pittar

REVERSE

In 1999, Avery was living in France! She was sleeping on the streets with no future! One morning she woke up next to a hobo named William, they were both the same age roughly. They soon discovered that they both enjoyed music and used to play in the streets for money. It was on these that her life changed forever! Late 2001, they were overheard by two guitarists Lucas and Tom! From that moment on Avery's life changed forever as Reverse was born! 2 years later, they had come second in 'Britain's Got Talent' and they are about to go on a World Tour in Europe!

Avery Champion

Lucas Marcus Thomas Chalk (also known as Sacul) was born in Bermuda, at midnight, on the 14 June, 1979. His Mum's name was Jacqueline (Jax), his Dads name was Timothy (Tim), his big brother's name was Max and his little brother's name was James. The occupation that his mum and dad had were: his mum was an architect for Grand Designs and his dad was the boss of 7-Eleven in England. Sacul's earliest memory was when he was 3 and his mum bought him an electric guitar for Christmas. He played every day when he got back from school. However, he couldn't play a proper song; he would just play around with it and strum the strings.

Lucas Chalk

In 2000, after exhausting the talent in the UK, Samoht and Sacul, decided to travel a short distance to France to find themselves a drummer and a singer. Doing auditions in Paris, Lyon and Marseille all things looked bleak, until they were walking down an alleyway towards the bar where the final auditions were being held when they heard singing. Following the sound, they found themselves looking at their future drummer and their singer. Mailliw was banging a pair of sticks on make shift drums and Yreva was singing! It was basics, but sounded amazing! Even before they auditioned them officially, both the young boys knew they would be amazing!

Tom Lipton

William – was born in France in 1980. He's not exactly sure when his birthday was as he was given up for adoption when he was 2. However, before he was given to his new family, he had a big interest in playing the drums. Unfortunately, his family was quite poor so they were unable to provide him with his own drum kit. However, he did use several other household things instead. William didn't go to school until he was six as he spent 4 years of his life being moved around between families. Finally, at the age of six it came true and he was given to family who were all blond haired, except the cat!

P6-21 Present Diaries of a Rock Star.

Today was the day! From the moment I woke up, I was walking on air!
Practicing is not much fun but it can really pay off.
Arriving at the concert was a blur; I can't remember what happened. When the concert was about to start, our manager Lola jumped on stage and shouted "Let's here it for… FIRE and ICE performing their hit song... Fire and Ice!" Meanwhile, we were back stage getting changed in to our costumes. We walked on in the middle of Lola's explanation of what inspired us to produce our band and first song.
I am starting to fall asleep now so I better finish writing.

Erin Winstanley

It was time. I could hear my fans screaming our band's name. The feeling was sensational as I went onstage. At first my stomach was aching with nerves but as the night went on it became more and more enjoyable. Smoke filled my head and blurred my eyesight. It was extreme! The lights shone in my eyes with an irritable pain, but I didn't care. The concert seemed to fly by and before I knew it we were on our last song. We all played as if we would never get the chance again. I didn't care about the future, all I knew was that was an amazing night!!

Ethan Sherry

What an exhausting day! In a blink of an eye, I'm rocking out to 20,000 people. I was extremely nervous that I had to go out on stage to perform tonight; in the end, it was the most exciting night ever!
A bright shining limousine was waiting patiently outside my mansion. The concert was held in Hollywood, starting at 9:00pm. I could hear the deafening screams from the front of the stage. What would the show be like? I felt intense but my body was ready! Suddenly, the music started, I stuttered a little, although the words came back, flowing smoothly through my head smoothly. The show was a huge success. What a great day!

Chak Lam Yau

Today was THE day! From the moment I woke up, I was walking on air!
After all the chaos of getting out of the door, I was finally on my way. The members of our band (the A5's) would be performing on an open stage. My drum kit had been delivered earlier and was set up on the side of the stage, Nikki's microphone was centered at the front of the stage and two guitars were propped up against the wall. Our band was to perform in front of 150,000 people!
The next thing I knew, I was taking a step up onto the stage. I walked on and as soon as the crowd caught sight of us, they just cheered and cheered. They didn't stop. The lights were glaring down on us as we started our song. I started to feel less nervous once I had been playing my drums for about a minute or so. We actually did really well! I felt so relieved. I went home after a huge party; feeling like a rock star should!

Annabel Preston

Today was THE day! From the moment I woke up, I was walking on air! My stomach filled with nerves and excitement as I awaited for the big performance.
I arrived at the concert in my fancy helicopter, the crowd cheered me on and waved banners saying things like 'we love u' and 'u rock'. The atmosphere was amazing in front of me; I saw a sea of faces looking directly in to my eyes. My heart pounded! This was it, the moment I had been waiting for all my life…

Finn Galloway

As soon as I got to the stage, there was an intense argument about something silly; something about some lights and a delivery; someone ordered for 50 lights and got 50 kites! Anyway, we practiced and so far so good. Later, we got the lights and the crew changed the old lights with the new ones, then everything was good to go.
At night, I went into the helicopter with my band to make the big entrance; we were to fly in the helicopter and land on the stage. I was so excited I was bouncing. Here goes!

Francis Coghlan

Today was THE day. From the moment I woke up I was walking on air. Today, The Shadow Masters performing at Wembly Stadium. There were 100,000 people coming to see our performance, imagine how anxious I was!
When we had our final rehearsal, one of my electric guitars strings broke when I played my first note! So after that was fixed, we continued the rehearsal and there were no other complications. Then we had to practice the entrance since it was extremely demanding, but we mastered it.
The moment had arrived! We were all in a helicopter and there was a super long cable attached to the guitars' and we started playing in mid-air.

Christopher Howe

Excitement had woken me up this morning. Later I called my band and they came right over to practice. Today was definitely THE day!
Arriving at the concert was amazing! We decided that we should take a helicopter and skydive off! Every-one would be amazed!
The crowd went wild! It was thrilling! The audience had dressed up so weirdly! This one guy had dressed up like a woman; tutu, tights and all! Lights; Smoke; Audience chanting. It was all too much! My eyes closed behind my shades. My heart was pounding. This was by far the best day of my life.

Kate Mason

What was wrong with my voice? Here I was, at our biggest and most important gig yet, and my voice had broken down. Fans were screaming into the small cluttered room. I couldn't face them. Voices echoed in the room all shouting my name. "Blaze Blaze Blaze!" echoed around.

Freddie (my stepbrother) stuck his head in and shouted because of the screaming fans. "Charlie, you have got to keep it together, think about the fans!"

"Ok Freddy, but not for the fans, for the band!" Walking out, I prepared my voice and dared myself to sing. That night I sang the best I'd ever sung before, what a night!

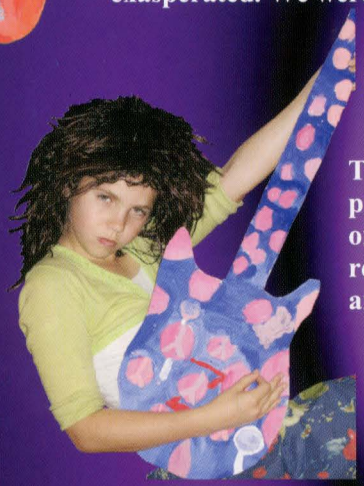
Neil Griffin

Today was the ACTUAL day!
It was our first concert (we wanted to make a good impression!) and we had only practiced twice! However, we couldn't postpone the concert; fans had come all over the world for us!
As we got there, in our limo, fans of all ages were screaming and cheering at us. Their screaming made us even more worried and we ran (as fast as our legs could carry us) into the back door.
It was time to perform! My heart was beating as hard as Flora's drums. We started out great, singing and playing our instruments. The rest of the performance was a big blur…
Got to rush….

Lauren Lee

Everything went to plan; me and Death bringer were rocking it out on our guitars. Then my big moment came, without Blaze's singing, it was just me and a sound from my guitar. My heart was pounding. I played my part, and I felt elated! After all those practicing, it finally paid off! I came to a big stretch on my guitar, and I went for it! The audience sounded like a thousand trumpets rolled into one! We walked off the stage; exasperated. We were so tired! Arriving back at my house, I slumped on my bed, exhausted! Goodnight!

Justin Cheung



Today was the day! I awoke to the sound of the screaming fans. Getting ready to go out, the phone rang; it was Snowstorm, asking where I was. Glancing at the clock, I realized there was only 15 minutes left. I had to run out of my house really quickly. When I got to the stadium, we rehearsed, then afterwards we went to a resort to relax. Finally, it was time to get ready to go and perform and we had the best night ever.

Elysia Moseley

Today was the day! From the moment I woke up, I was walking on air! Unfortunately time was going astonishingly slow!
The view was amazing and I knew I was a lucky person. As we arrived I felt nervous and excited at the same time. Reaching the stadium, all the cars were parked, there were over 100 thousand people! Everybody went nuts when we came on! It was a phenomenal feeling and that was only the beginning of the night! They loved the concert and I loved the concert. Singing the last song, Viva la Vida, was the best moment of my life!

Cameron Roberts

Today was the day! Oozing with excitement, I was the king of the world (well almost). I prepared myself for the big concert tonight.
Stumbling forward, an earsplitting noise came cascading down onto me as they caught a glance of me. No words can describe that feeling of coming onto a stage. There, stood in front of me, were 101,003 screaming fans. With a huge thrill of excitement, the sounds of the crowd became even louder! As we switched our song to our most successful tune, the crowd went bonkers, but unfortunately that was our last song for the night. Our most successful concert yet!

Erik Henriksson

TODAY WAS THE DAY! From the second I woke up I was ready to rock! I could feel my heart pounding.
I soared over to the concert with all my fancy clothes - I was heading to the concert in a private jet! It was an amazing sight! We landed a mile away from the area to be safe, but luckily a limo came and picked us up. Arriving there, my mouth dropped at the amount of fans coming to watch us. I played madly; it was amazing; smoke all over the place, cheers and screams, it was one of the best concerts of all times! It was a hit!

Thomas Robinson

Today was THE day!! From the moment I woke up, I was walking on air! Nervous but excited; I was ready to rock the fans, and blow their minds!
Appearing with the crowd shouting my name again and again, I made my way back stage to get myself in my costume. I and fellow band mates started down the narrow hallway… My heart was pounding…I could hear the crowd roaring and saw people beyond people shouting and screaming. I had really rocked them dead and I was completely shattered after the performance. Wearily, I walked into the limo and made my way back home to the hotel. I dived onto my bed and fell asleep.

Vinay Hirani

Today I was so excited because I was performing at the biggest stadium in the world. When we arrived, there were only a few minutes to get ready before it was time to perform in front of 100 thousand people! The stadium was full! We started singing and the stadium was rocking. It was a huge hit, so many screaming fans chanting my name. At the end, our manager came over to us and offered us a contract for a new album with a music video. The night was a big success for all five of us!!

Tom James

Today was an experience that I would never forget. I woke up with a huge smile on my face. Today I performed in front of 60,000 people! I was so happy I couldn't even eat my breakfast properly. As I hopped into my limo, I suddenly screamed with excitement, when I saw my friends in their fabulous costumes. Mimpy had even got highlights, and they were hot pink! And Jazz had bright green nails. When we arrived at the stage, I stopped and stared at the marvelous sight of the buffet! There were cookies, fudges, donuts and a huge chocolate fountain. It was such a fun time. People were screaming trying to get our autographs and by the end of the day we could hardly move our hands!

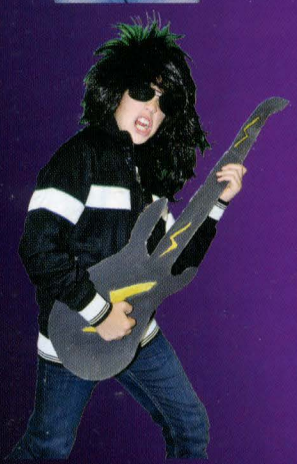
Sophia Mortensen

Today was the day of the concert! We had prepared for ages the day before and we were finally feeling confident enough to perform. I suddenly felt very nervous, what if I made a big mistake?
When the concert started I felt a mixture of excitement and tension built up inside my head. Everywhere I looked, people were staring at us. When we started, all went well, Nikki was singing, Mimp was drumming, Jazz was lead guitar, Smorty was bass guitar, and I was playing second guitar. When the concert finished we went to our favorite restaurant: The Big Boom! I fell asleep to the sound of drums and electric guitars; the others were still celebrating!

Louisa Van Aeken

After our introduction, the stage manager gave us our cue!
I was so nervous about messing up! We picked up our instruments, and Nikki announced the song (Dynamite).
As we played our song, the crowd went wild; banners, posters and T-shirts, all with our name on them!
We played a lot of songs! I was getting really tired, everyone was!
At the end we said goodnight and got picked up by the tour bus!
On to the next destination!
I was so tired that I just had my shower, got changed, brushed my teeth and now I'm going to go to bed!

Jasmine Phullar



The limo was so relaxing but the practise wasn't! The stage was a buoyancy stage, like the ones in break dancing clubs, so I could do backflips and jump really high; I asked if I could have one in my house. Boy, I'm so looking forward to that. My entry was fun but dangerous because I swing down on to the stage with a wire strapped to my back, thankfully I didn't get a wedgy. Going home my ears hurt because of the loud sound checks.
Arriving was so intense, but not as intense as the feeling of the actual concert. I warned the crowd, "you might want to block your ears because it's gonna be loud!"

Sam Tuckwell

Today was super; it was the day of the ultimate concert. As I walked down the stairs and out the door, lights flooded into my face, blinding me. Shocked by all the attention, I struggled to get through the masses of people. Finally I made it into the building where the band practice was due to be held. Band practice was great, there were no mistakes and everyone was really tense for the concert. The practice was long; everyone was nervous and excited. Walking back the crowds had gone away climbing into the bus. I wondered whether we would be successful tonight?

Harry Mowbray

Tonight we played at the Crystal Whirlpool Stadium. We definitely rocked the house; when I walked off stage I could hear them cheering (or it could have been the sound still ringing in my ears!). I sang 'Dynamite' and 'Hey Apple' (in Weasel version, Hey comma Apple). I'm soo exhausted, and we still have to go to the Cave! Tomorrow we are going back to the Mega Max Stadium to have one last concert in Japan. It is time to go to the Cave (I can tell because I can hear Mimp rattling on the walls with her drumsticks!). Got to go, wish us luck ...

YEAR 7 ELECTRONS

English and Drama:

I really enjoyed the film project. It was a lot of fun and I found out that it's actually a lot harder to make a movie than you think it is!

We looked at all the different types of camera shots, and studied some examples of short films. Then we came up with some ideas for our movie; my group decided to do a horror film about a murder. We worked together and transferred our ideas onto a storyboard, including details like the type of camera shot and any sounds or music that you would be able to hear. The editing was also really fun but challenging.

Overall, I was pleased with our final product and thought that the film project was great! I would definitely do it again.

The Silk Road

During The Silk Road unit I learnt a lot about how things have changed throughout the years, about the Silk Road itself and about how to make a story realistic. I was delighted that my poem was picked to be entered in to The Hong Kong Young Writers Award this year. My favourite line of my poem is the last line, "I shake my head and cry in great pity" because it has a lot of emotion and feelings attached to it. Also, it explains how the person really cared about the city that used to be there. I learned a lot about the Silk Road and I really enjoyed writing my story and my poem.

Jemima Steward

Growing Through The Years.....

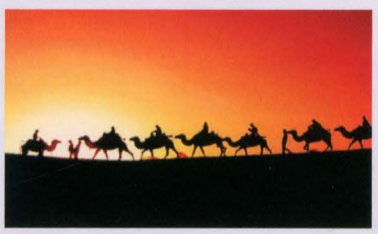
By Jemima Steward

The whipping wind and dusty sand dunes,
The calling birds fly above,
Traders trade in bustling markets,
The Silk Road no one could not love,

I sit and sit from day to day,
Listen to the Silk Road music play,
But as I listen, the village builds up,
People no longer put money in my old plastic cup.

The people rush, the people shout,
Thatched roofed huts are no longer about,
Skyscrapers stand strong and tall,
Busy streets and fancy town halls.

My village has gone and turned into a city,
I shake my head and cry in great pity.



Chinese Studies:

This year's Mandarin was fun and a good learning experience where we learnt a big range of things. We first learnt about pinyin and basic strokes so that we understood what Chinese characters are and how they are formed. We then learnt how to count from 1 to 100, which was practical for when we came to doing dates, ages and telephone numbers. We learnt useful things to say in daily life like greetings e.g. hello, bye, how are you? etc. We did tests to help put all of this learning together. We learnt how to introduce ourselves, our family members, and our parents' occupations. Now we are learning about time, daily routines and means of transport.

By: Athina Hostelet

This is the first time that I have learned Mandarin, but I have already learned: how to introduce myself and other people, how to write, speak and listen about family, how to tell the time and a lot of other topics.

"The thickest resistance wire made the current faster and the thinnest resistance wire made the current slower. This is because the electrons have a smaller area to travel in a thinner wire. This experiment could apply to the real world because people might like a dimmer light so they could use a thinner resistance wire. The increased resistance in a thinner wire would slow down the electrons and make the light dimmer."

A walk around Great Shelford

Country side code

- Never litter or pollute rivers
- don't take things from animals or destroy their home
- Check the weather before you leave so you are not standing in the poring rain and is not boiling hot.
- If you have a dog keep on a leash

List of interesting points on route

- Place of worship- 472,521
- River Grant– 473,51 to 483,51
- Fox Hill– 482-531
- Nature reserve– 486-545
- White Hill– 469-537

Introduction to the walk

This walk travels around the beautiful countryside of Great Selford, and is great for all ages as, you can see some beautiful views on top of some fantastical hills you can also wander around the interesting nature reserve, if you get hungry when you are on the walk you can just stop of and have a snack at one of the picnic stops!
You will also see walk by some rivers and stop by a place of worship.

Walk Instructions

You will travel South from the place of worship 47,51, heading towards the River Grand 473,51 to 483,51. Next you can admire the beautiful fields of Stapleford as you walk by them 48,51. You can now walk up North East by the bumpy ground up to a small town 481,532 where you can clime up the side and take pictures of the lovely view! After that you are probly hungry so if you wish you can stop by and have a few snacks 483,534. When you have had a snack you we will walk to a nature reserve which is great and has lots of animals to see and watch, you will walk north, as you do you can admire the grassy land scape 485,545. After that you will walk North West to a picnic sight (optional) 477,549. Next you go along a road South West, to White Hill where you will get fantastic view of the town and of lots of country side 469,538 ! Now we go back to the spot we started on walking along the same road we walked along to get to white hill in to the small town of Great Shelford.

Conclusion

I chose this walk because it had lots of things to walk by and see, and that it had some human features, and physical features. I have learnt how to read maps and how you can see what things are. This was a important topic for me to learn otherwise I would not be able to read maps.

Bonjour, in this photo me and Lili are making La Galette des Rois. This cake is specially made for the 3 kings, visiting baby Jesus.
The really exciting part of the cake is when someone gets the little toy gem called la Fève hidden inside. And the person who has the Fève wears a crown and is the King or Queen for the Day!
To make this wonderful cake for 4 to 6 persons, you need:
1 egg
50 grams of butter
100 grams of almonds
2 round pastries
2 small toy gem (Fève)
1 egg yolk
Overall the class had a wonderful time making this cake. As a class we made 2 whole cakes. It was VERY yummy. Matilda Andrew and Sarah Bannister were very lucky because they had the Fève.

Swimming is a fun and enjoyable sport. It helps you with your health and fitness. It also helps me when I play other sports such as football and rugby. You learn a lot about strokes and technique from the start of the swimming unit to the end. What's fun about swimming is that you race against other people. I definitely improved throughout the swimming unit.

GERTIE THE GORILLA

How long does a gorilla live for?

The typical age of a gorilla is usually 30-50 years.
The oldest gorilla to live in a zoo died at the age of 55 years (human years).

What should you feed Gertie while she's pregnant?

Since Gertie is pregnant she will need to eat lots of vegetables, meat, fish and fruits. She should also eat a lot of vitamins; they are essential for the growth and development of the unborn baby. Vitamins should keep the body fit and healthy. This is not only for when Gertie's pregnant but every day of her life.

How will an unborn baby gorilla get its nutrients?

Like humans an unborn baby will get its nutrients from the mother's umbilical cord. The umbilical cord will send down the nutrients which the mother has eaten. Then it is placed in the baby gorilla's stomach. The same thing will happen for the liquid that will go down there for the baby gorilla to drink.

Why did William win the Battle of Hastings?

Another reason that William won the Battle of Hastings was that he was a brave and skillful leader. He made great preparations which helped him win the battle. It was clear that William had organised his army before the battle. He had a good strategy because he ensured the "crossbowmen were at the front. Next came the infantry, and the knights were at the back." Without William's leadership, these preparations might not have been made and William might never have won without such an organised military force.

My Room

I slowly push open my door to reveal the hidden secrets within. I enter my room and slowly push my way through the toys and junk that aimlessly lie spread across the floor. In the corner is my desk; it doesn't look anything like a desk though some people say it just survived World War II. Pens scattered everywhere, paper just left there, a bin that looks like volcano ready to explode. As sunlight seeps through the half open shutters and shines down onto the bed, it looks like a dog has been on it.

To me, my room is like a castle and I am the queen! The reason being, I can do whatever I want to in it, whilst it is being guarded to keep away the evil siblings.

In my room I have a stereo as black as the night sky and as loud as an elephant that is charging full speed at you. I have a case to keep all my books in, but my case is so full of books I used to read when I was three, that there is hardly any room to keep new ones in.

No matter how messy my room is, it will always be the only place that I can really have time to myself. I love my room.

My Room

As soon as I touch the door handle I can feel a shiver rushing up my spine. I feel terror. As I hear the sound of the door closing behind me, I feel alone. When I stare in my room, it is like staring into a jungle. You can't find anything. The smell of the room is like no other. It is indescribable. In the corner sits my desk. My desk is the neatest object in my room. It is almost as my mums, but not quite there yet. It looks like it has grown legs and shaken everything off. On the other side of my room is the wardrobe. If you open it, regret is heading your way. EVERYTHING soon piles out onto the floor. Right in front of the wardrobe is a pile full of who knows what! And trust me, you don't want to even look at this pile of mess!

Amber eyes that shine at night.
Long stripy tail, two furry ears.
Two strong paws and claws like knives.

They're not good climbers,
But they're good hunters. Hunting the same one they choose.
They eat rabbits, antelopes and more.
Their favourite is wild boar.
They give birth to cubs about five a time, they're little and cute but they will bite.
If you're in the forest, be very careful, you never know if one is near.

In this work, I have learnt how to write poetry using different techniques. Mr. Marsh told us to write a poem about an animal.

I chose to write about a tiger because it's my favourite animal. My favourite bit of my poem is where I said "An orange coat with bold black stripes. Amber eyes that shine at night." I like this sentence because it rhymes and because I used strong words like 'bold' and 'amber'. I enjoyed writing poems about animals because I learnt things from doing research on them.

I stared into the dark sky, the moonlight shining bright. My eyes were filled with adventure. The tall buildings surrounding me, the sound of owls hooting in the dark; I was at peace. Sitting down at a cafe with camels lined up on the street, I took a sip of my drink. The smell floated through the air, it was so heavenly, another thing to soothe me. I smiled at the moon with my arms behind my head. I was so relaxed. I bit into my food and it spilled into my mouth. It tasted so heavenly and I gasped and let out the heat. The sun was just about to rise above the horizon. I saw my first crew mate emerging from behind the boxes of equipment and food; It was time."

An extract from Lauren Wood's History sources assessment in which she had to answer a question based on three sources and her own knowledge:

"King Richard was a good King of England." Using all the sources and your own knowledge, explain how far this statement is true.

Source C refutes the statement that King Richard was a good King of England. Source C states that "Richard I only visited England twice. Both times he came simply to raise money for his wars." This suggests that he was a bad king because he was absent from his country for most of his reign and a good king should be in his own country most of the time. The source also argues that "by the time Richard died, he had made England a poor country." There is evidence to substantiate this as Richard is purported to have said that he would sell London if he could find a buyer.

Bertie Bateman- Bertie's Food Miles Project

A positive of importing food is that people from different countries can taste different foods; however there is a downside of importing food. When we transport food by plane we are polluting the earth because we are using a lot of fuel for the plane. Also on vehicles the food can rot and go bad and not be good for sale, making it a pointless journey. We should be concerned about food miles because it affects the environment. However, if we did not have food miles we would be stuck with same small ranges of food in Hong Kong.

My Hypothesis: 'Does 50% of my food come from Europe?'

Bertie Bateman and Nikhil Shah

Nikhil Shah- An extract from Nikhil's Food Miles Project Introduction

'Food miles is a term which refers to the distance food is transported from the time of its production until it reaches the consumer. Food miles are one factor used when assessing the environmental impact of food, including the impact on global warming. The more food miles attached to a given food, the less sustainable and environmentally desirable that food is (i.e.- the bigger its carbon footprint).*

The positive of importing food is that at any time during the year there is a wide variety of food from all over the world available to the consumer. It is also a good idea to import if the country that you live in does not have the food item that you want. Importing food can also be good when a specific food that is out of season in your country is in season in another country. The location of a country may make it difficult to naturally grow food or breed animals. If that is the case there is no choice then to import.

But there are some bad points about importing food. The amount of carbon emissions that are created to get the food off the tree and onto your plate can be huge. The food travels from the farm, to the plane, to the supermarket and then to your plate and wastes lots of carbon footprints. In the U.K food travels an incredible 30 billion km each year. This includes imports by boat, by plane and transport by lorries and cars. Food transport is responsible for the U.K adding nearly 19 million tons of carbon dioxide into the earth's atmosphere each year. Choosing local foods can have a dramatic effect on reducing carbon dioxide emissions.'

French Drama Workshop with Artist: Stéphane Lam

In April we did a French Drama Workshop with French artist Stéphane Lam from Lyon in France. We worked a lot with our voices and breathing.

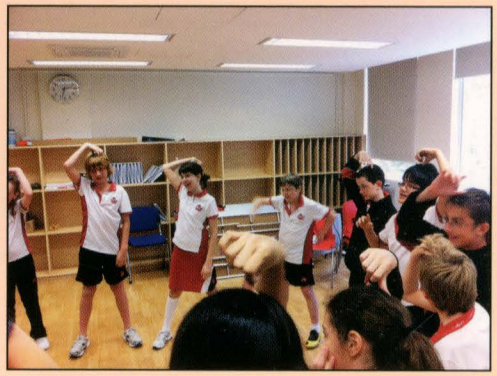
The best part of the French workshop was when we had to play with our voices. We had to make our voices loud, quiet, high and low. Then we had to follow instructions from our friends who were guiding us with their hands!

I also liked the part when we had to pretend to have a long piece of spaghetti in our tummy, and we had to use our breath really well and "eat" as much as we can without breathing. If you took a breath after you started then you were out.

We also did a game where we had to be able to tell where the sound vibrates in our body when we said a word! The sound vibrates in different places. The French sound "u" vibrates through the top of your head! The "r" vibrates in your throat and the "o" and "a" in your back.

The workshop was really fun, and I think we all agree that we learned something new with our French pronunciation.

By Sebastian Ball



Stéphane Lam taught us some French Drama and we had to imagine we were walking in Paris. We greeted each other silently at first, and then used different voices to express our feelings in French. We ended up all walking in a circle and Stéphane had to remind us that "Paris is not a circle!" It was a great experience and more challenging than we thought it would be!

This is an extract from a piece that we all did on travel writing. In this subject we looked at different examples of travel writing, such as Bill Bryson. This was a writing task, and I was really pleased with my overall piece and level. We picked out different techniques that the writers used including humour, similes, facts and information and personal experiences. We then tried to use those techniques ourselves.

"Travelling to the resort on the Ferry, I had an image in my head of a luxurious beach resort with lots of hot tubs with powerful jets and gourmet food. How wrong could I have been! Of all the 3219 kilometres of beach in the whole of Thailand, we had to be stuck on the worst kilometre! Why us?!
We arrived at the hotel on the disappointing beach, having to wait for what seemed a lifetime, so when we got our room, I was overjoyed and, literally, started to jump on the bed. Once we had unpacked, we went to go and examine the dinner choices. Thailand has a huge range of food and flavours - Unfortunately, I'm not the world's biggest fan. But still, I gave it a shot…Unexpectedly, as I was walking back to the room, I decorated the floor with what looked like to be this morning's airplane food. Macbeth Essay:

An extract from Sarah Abbasi's analysis of Macbeth, using PEE:

"In Act 1 Scene 2, Macbeth's character is first spoken of. The king and noblemen talk of "Brave Macbeth" with pride and how he definitely "Deserves that name". This "Worthy Gentlemen" is also referred to as a "Valor's minion". Shakespeare is using language and other characters in the play to infer that Macbeth's character is a brave, loyal and noble one. Because Shakespeare makes Macbeth's character like this at the beginning of the play, when he turns into a greedy selfish man later on, the effect on the audience is more shockingly powerful."

I really enjoyed doing Macbeth because I loved reading Shakespeare. I found it really interesting to analyze Macbeth in great detail because I found Shakespeare's writing so intelligently beautiful. It was also interesting to see everyone's different interpretations of his writing and style.

"Olaudah Equiano was the most significant factor leading to the Abolition of the Slave trade Act (1807), which abolished the slave trade in the British Empire." Discuss:

Historian James Walvin argues the key to the rise of British abolitionism lay not in the economics of slavery, but in "social change within Britain itself, notably rising demands for reform in general and a growing appreciation of the brutality of a system that incorporated increasing numbers of Christian slaves." However, economics is one of the most significant factors to the abolition of the slave trade because as soon as it became unprofitable, the Slave Trade Act was passed as nobody wanted to invest. Most people cared about money.

World Science Day

It was March 9th 2011 and the whole of year eight and nine had been waiting patiently for something that was stirring inside room 104. Teachers had been bringing box loads of materials for the event that was happening today: World Science Day! We were led in and split into two teams per tutor group and were seated at tables covered with sealed envelopes (containing our different tasks). This was a competition not only involving our science knowledge but also our ability to communicate through a range of methods. Communication was the theme of the day after all.

Some of the challenges that lay before us involved:

- deciphering a Morse code sequence by putting our eye to a small cup with a light inside that provided the flashes of code
- identifying some famous scientists from their pictures and achievements
- texting quiz answers on mobile phones
- using iPads with Google Docs and other Science apps to find information and email it

One of my favourite events of the day was where we learnt how to control a ProBot (a small car that could be moved by programming it). After our training we were asked to draw a square followed by completing a short drive to a cone, a full 180 turn around it and a sprint (a fast 0.5 miles an hour) back to the start.

At the end of the Year 8 and 9 competition, my class won (Panthers)! In the Year 7s the Protons won.

Netball

During Netball we learnt the correct technique to pass the ball, to shoot and the different ways in which you can attack and defend. We developed our knowledge of basic game strategies to outwit our opponents. I particularly enjoyed game play and the challenges that Miss Hill prepared for us.

Mathematics:

Olivia Sherry

Personally, I think that I have improved my maths skills and developed my knowledge this year. I enjoyed World Maths Day the most this year because we got to work on our laptops answering questions as quickly as possible against other students around the world. This helped me with my mental arithmetic and has improved my multiplication and division. There were also other games and activities, such as poster making and the Year 8/9 Interform World Maths Day Competition. The competition was fun, challenging and involved working together as a team. Overall, I think that Maths has been great this year and I have enjoyed every minute of it.

我叫张海珉，今年十三岁，在启历中学上九年级。 我们汉语班一共有三个学生：一个是美国人，一个是澳大利亚人，还有我是韩国人。 今年我上十门课：数学、英语、 汉语、 音乐、体育、美术、地理、 科学等等。 我喜欢上数学课、美术课和音乐课。 我不喜欢上科学课和历史课。

Weather Summary in Seoul:

首尔今天多云，气温零下二到四度。明天是晴天， 气温零下三到四度。后天是晴天， 气温零下三到五度。

The picture shows a short Chinese advert we made for "Magic Cough Medicine" while we were studying sickness. The school life passage talks about the nationalities of my classmates and the subjects I like and dislike at school. The weather summary comes from when we were studying weather and the seasons. This year we also learnt how to make polite telephone conversation and next we will learn to talk about our hobbies.

Seasons in Hong Kong:

香港的春天天气有时候阴天和多云，很暖和，不冷也不热。最高气温二十九度， 最低气温有十九度。我常常穿衬衫和长裤。香港的夏天天气最糟糕，很热，常常下大雨，有时候也有台风，最高气温三十三度， 最低气温有十九度。我夏天常常穿汗衫和短裤，有时候也穿外套。香港的秋天天气最好，不冷也不热。气温在二十度左右。最低气温有十六到十九度。我秋天可以穿汗衫。 香港的冬天不很冷， 最低气温有九度。香港冬天不下雪。人们穿外套和长裤。

In the text above I wrote about the weather in Hong Kong during summer and autumn, and what people wear. The photo comes from a Chinese advert we made for "Magic Cough Medicine" when we were learning about sickness. Sickness was my favourite subject because it may be really useful in everyday life.

Extract from Chicken Wing Dissection

"A human arm and a bird's wing have a similar structure. They both have the bones: Humerus, Ulna and Radius. However, they are different in two ways. One difference is that we have hands and a bird's bones are joined at the wing tip. Another difference is that bird bones are hollow so that they can fly whereas human bones are filled in with bone marrow."

Athletics

During the athletics module I learnt different ways of improving my running techniques for different races. For example, your running technique for sprinting is very different to that for middle distance running. I have also been able to improve my high jump technique which resulted in me beating my previous record. I really enjoyed learning about discus as it was something I had not done before.

Geography:

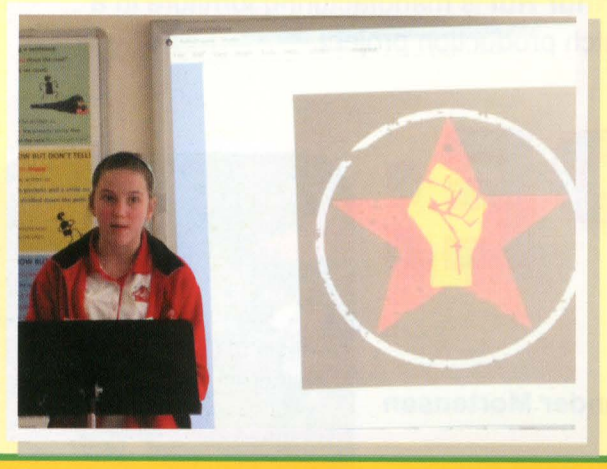
Explaining why maps are important to IGCSE Geographers…

'Maps are important because they help us find our way around places and locate cities and countries. Maps help us understand our place in the world, but they also give us important information about rural and urban landscapes. Maps can show us where there are rivers, mountains and different types of slopes. We can use maps to assess functions and advantages of different settlements. '

English and Drama:



Freya Darnton

This half-term in English we have been studying 'Animal Farm' by George Orwell. Animal Farm is about a group of animals that take over a farm from the farmer 'Mr Jones' and is an allegory of the Russian Revolution. Communism plays a big part of the story as the animals establish their society and the 7 rules that were on the wall of the farm are broken.

George Orwell wrote about political problems so we then made our own political party and competed against our class in a political campaign. We had to make our own logos and slogans and try to get people to vote for us by creating our manifesto and delivering persuasive speeches. I was part of a Communist group and we named our political party the 'Socialist Union Party' with a strong emphasis on equality and togetherness.

Mathematics:

We started our IGCSE in Maths at the beginning of Year 9 and it is really great as it opens us up to loads of new challenges. We will be getting our Maths IGCSE at the end of Year 10. We could possibly get another IGCSE in Maths when we study the Further Maths IGCSE course afterwards.

History:

Richard Atkinson

After a class debate, Year Nine had to write an essay. This is an extract from Richard Atkinson's History essay entitled:

"President Truman was right to drop the first atomic bomb". Discuss:
President Truman was right to drop the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima. If it wasn't dropped then lots more Japanese and American soldiers would have died while fighting if the US forces had invaded Japan itself. More people were killed by Allied bombing in Germany than were killed in the Hiroshima bombing. At the time, Truman was under a lot of pressure to end the war and radiation poisoning as an effect of the bomb, was unknown. Truman only authorised the bomb as he believed it would cause less loss of life than if Japan was invaded.

Rebecca Lim

After a class debate, Year Nine had to write an essay. This is an extract from Rebecca Lim's History essay entitled:

"President Truman was right to drop the first atomic bomb". Discuss:
President Truman was not right to drop the first atomic bomb on Hiroshima. It was not dropped on the Japanese military, but on Hiroshima's civilian population and they were the ones who suffered from damaged buildings, illness and thousands of deaths. Thousands died instantly from the heat and many died later of their wounds, infection, disease and dehydration. Black rain fell and many people who had not had a drink for days drank as it fell from the sky, but no one knew it was poisonous. Thousands died from radiation poisoning and there was not enough medical help to comfort the dying or save the thousands in need. These were innocent people, not soldiers.

French:

In March 2011 Stéphane Lam from the French Theater Company Les Asphodèles came in to do a French workshop with Madame L'Hévéder's groups in years 7 and 9. We all had to act out an emotion and the others had to guess what emotion it was and say it in French. Then we all sang our favourite songs at the same time.

Overall I really enjoyed the workshop and learnt new words which I can use during my French lessons.

Alanna Freear

Bonjour, je m'appelle Cameron. That's French for: Hello, my name is Cameron.

This article is going to be about our French lessons. In lessons, we have a wide range of resources available for use, such as our books, the teacher, and our laptops. But possibly our best learning technique is to use the interactive whiteboard.

At various points during a lesson, we will be called up to the interactive whiteboard to complete various exercises. Not only are these exercises fun, but they require greater focus, meaning we pay more attention to the finer points of conversation, allowing us to have a greater understanding of the language. The whiteboard can be used for various activities, such as ask and answer, mix and match, and other games. The whiteboard really does add to our learning. And, since we introduced it, my grades have increased significantly.

So here is a picture about how I work on the interactive whiteboard.

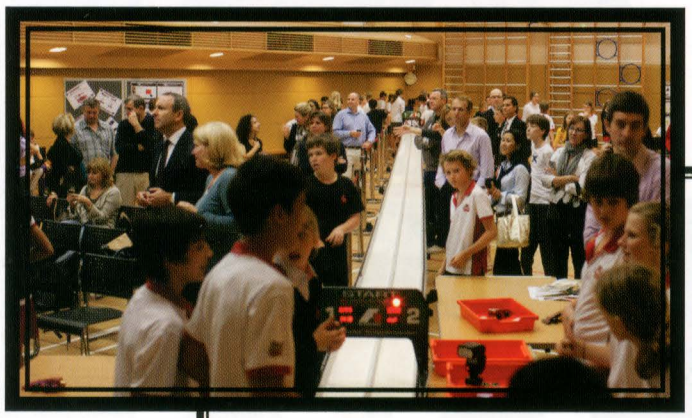
F1 in Schools



It was a busy afternoon in December 2010 with 18 Teams taking part in the F1 in Schools Challenge at the Shau Kei Wan Campus auditorium.

As part of the project, teams designed and manufactured compressed gas powered 1:20 scale Formula 1 model cars using Computer Aided Design and Computer Aided Manufacturing methods.

The winning team was the one that had accrued the most points in all aspects of the activity. The elements of the activity that the teams were judged on were: corporate identity, displays sheets, car quality and race results.

The results of the race are as follows:

Best Engineered Car:	Burnout
Fastest Car: 20 metres in 1.297 seconds!	Rolling Predators
Best Team ID:	Crazy Penguins
Best Pit Display:	Red Lighting
Sportsmanship Award:	Shooting Stars
Innovation:	Rolling Predators
Overall 3rd Place:	Super Cows
Overall Joint 1st Place:	Crazy Penguins and Red Lighting
