

Las Vegas REVIEW-JOURNAL

More Than Half a Century of Service

In America's Most Exciting City

Southwestern Publishing Company, Donald W. Reynolds, President

Sunday, Dec. 3, 1961

A Newspaper Man

"Don't waste the space on me." That's what most newsmen would say.

But Don Ashbaugh wasn't like most newsmen.

"Sure, I've poured enough sweat and blood into this business that I ought to get a few lines." That's what he'd say.

There was no pretense about him. He usually said what was on his mind.

This man who wrote of Nevada's ghost towns and made them seem almost alive again died Friday.

He was a victim of cancer. But few except his